Mrs. S. P. Hagerman and her group then took charge of the program using hymn 384 "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." The Scripture lesson taken from the 16th chapter of John 23 to 33 verses was read by Mrs. C. Walters as well as the Devotional Leaflet "Ambitious, Friends." Mrs. Walters gave us such a clear conception of what faith meant during her reading. The solo by Miss Phyllis May "Only a Smile" was inspiring. The offering was taken by Mrs. Woodley and Mrs. Sager, prayer by Mrs. Hagerman. Mrs. James Cordes interested the audience by a monologue "Lamplighters." The Peace talk by Mrs. Newman was with reading. Miss Phyllis May then sang "My Task" which was very much appreciated.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Gay of Foxboro was then introduced and was very interesting. Her leading thought was if we could get our women interested, we need not be concerned about our mission work home or abroad. She also quoted a missionary idea from Korea if there were no Christians except those of Korea this zeal and devotion for souls would bring the knowledge of Christ to the rest of the world. One wonders if such a thing might be said of Canada. The feeling that our W.M.S. work on a whole is not going forward as it should and if the times are strenuous we are to still carry Christ's message. We are not living up to what we profess if the salvation of our neighbors either here or abroad is not burdening our souls. We can never gain inspiration ourselves or inspire others to Christian service unless we ourselves are living in constant, close communion with our Saviour. Sometimes we must be laid aside from the busy toil of life to know the soundness of such close fellowship and to "be still" at times and listen to guidance. We believe prayer to be the greatest factor in all Christian work. It is not for our missionaries alone to pay the price of world evangelization for Jesus said: "Whosoever He Be of You That Forseeketh not All That He Hate, He Cannot Be My Desciple." The extent of our gratitude to God for the gift of his son is measured by our serving.

We may go to the Bible to find our shortcoming and better still to find a solution to rectify them. If we can honestly say we helping to preach the Gospel to all the world, then we are doing the part assigned to us in the redeeming of the world for whose sake God was willing to send his son to earth and all the tragedy that followed. Let us walk so closely to Him, that from our lives will be radiated an influence that will help draw all people to God.

Mrs. Gay closed her address with the prayer that we might reconsecrate our lives to Him and His work.

The president, Mrs. M. D. Denton, moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Gay, and Miss Phyllis May which was seconded by Mrs. H. Sager.

Mrs. (Rev.) Farnsworth closed the meeting with prayer. The refreshments and social half hour which followed brought the ladies into closer fellowship.

Fashion Flashes

Something new in the handling of net is seen this season. It is Schiaparelli's new evening frock of black net over white, mounted so that the contrasting weaves of the net give the appearance of moire. The frock is form-fitting and is ornamental with flowers made of white sequins

A match for the blue of the southern sky is a lovely sky blue matelasse frock, designed for dinner wear. Its simple lines are softened by a pleated net jabot that lengthens into a peplum. The skirt is edged with a pleated net ruffle. The bodice has buttons that are butterflies done in brilliants.

Make your train or boat wearing a grand travel ensemble in fine medium blue tweed. The double-breasted fitted jacket with notched revers and the fitted yet casual topcoat have rows of stitching for trimming.

A big splash af color lends life to the simplest black suit. A real life saver consists of a bag, hat, scarf and gloves, all of faille in a lovely shade of Parma violet. And there could be a real bunch of violets to complete the color note.

Field flowers cluster on many of the new hats designed for southern wear now and for summer wear later. A large hat of rough straw in pale yellow has a wide brim and very flat crown on which are clusters of chiffon and velvet field flowers. Crown and brim are piped with a very narrow black velvet piping.

We gleam in the dark when we wear the new prints with delicate jewelled touches and the rhinestone-embroidered organdies. A dress of white organdie has a large flower pattern in silver thread outlined with a thin line of rhinestones.

DEFIANT . . . cross as a bear . . . when your child has "days" like this, take warning!

Give a Child's Laxative

It is a wise precaution to give a laxative. Not an adult laxative which may cause griping pain, or upset stomach . . . but a child's laxative. Give Castoria!

Castoria is made especially for children — from babyhood to 11 years. It is safe — contains no harsh purgatives, no narcotics. It is gentle. It is effective. And it has a pleasant taste that children like!

Ask your doctor

Next time you see your doctor for your child's regular health examination, ask him about Castoria. He will assure you that Castoria contains only such ingredients as are suitable for a child's system.

Buy a bottle of Castoria to-night. (If you're thrifty you'll buy the family-size bottle.) Keep it handy, always. Give it for constipation and at the first sign of a cold.

Clear Complexion Needs Care to Avoid Hazards

(The Beauty Box)

Sidney Fox

It isn't to be expected that the complexion will remain fresh, smooth and colorful without a certain amount of care. It is always bumping into hazards. A digestive upset and it goes gray. A touch of biliousness and it gets yallery — greenery, looks like nothing human. A cold wind fluffs the epidermal coat, makes it rough. And atmospheric dirt gets in its devastating licks.

It needs plenty of soap suds and rinsing water. After that it requires lubricating, so trot out the cold cream jar every night and get busy. If you use makeup, buy high grade cosmetics.

Good health contributes to its well being. Long hours of sleep bring freshness and color. Certain foods, like green salads, vegetables and fruit, act favorably upon the texture, help the skin to do its work as an eliminating organ. Don't overlook the benefits of water drinking. Down your sixglasses a day whether you want them or not.

When combing a finger wave, be gentle. Groom it strand by strand. After the combing push the hair up toward the parting.

Some waves can be moistened with water, others crinkle and lose their designs when wet. Others behave amiably when brilliantine is used. Topcrests have very definite ideas of their own. Might as well humor them.

Feet that perspire are a source of annoyance. An affliction usually of nervous gals... A simple treatment is to bathe the feet twice a day in warm salt water, dry with friction, follow with an alcohol rub.

Deodorants, used in the armpits, aren't suitable for the little trotters. Encased in leather houses with no ventilation, feet rebel against strong astringents.

Much can be done to correct the outstanding ears of a small child. Make a cap of white tape, one inch wide, Have the tapes interlace over the ears so that they hold the human sound receivers close to the head.

The cure for this defect in adults in found in the surgeon's instruments. However, women seldom bother about such extreme measures. They curtain their ears with curly tresses.

RIGHTS SUSPENDED

By Edmund A. Chester

Havana, March 9—(AP)—Constitutional rights were suspended in Cuba today after a night punctuated by shots and bombings.

Determined to break the strike which has disorganized the nation's affairs, the Cabinet and Council of State suspended the constitution in a joint special session at the presidential palace.

The joint body named Jose Pedraza Military Governor of Havana province. This was considered the equivalent of Martial.

Traveller Dies in Overnight Camps

Fredonia, N. Y., March 9—(AP) —A man identified by papers as Baden Kenny, 30, travelling salesman for the Cadillac Paint Company of Detroit, Mich., was found dead last night in an overnight camp in Silver Creek.

"The Secret Bride"

Barbara Stanwyck, in an entirely new kind of role, and with Warren William as leading man, comes to the Capitol theatre on Monday in her latest production, "The Secret Bride".

The picture is a thrilling drama of political intrigue which involves the commission of two baffling murders and the impeachment of the governor of the state on bribery charges. It is said to provide Miss Stanwyck with her greatest opportunity for tense emotional characterization for which she is famous.

Secretly married to the attorney general, she learns on her very wedding day that her father, the governor, has been charged with bribery and her own husband has to prosecute him.

Warren William, playing the attorney general, hides a letter supposedly written by the governor soliciting the bribe, after he had pardoned a big business man who had been imprisoned for embezzlement.

The death of the financier by a revolver shot, and later the murder of an investigator in the attorney general's office, who has made the charges, makes the case look black for the governor, who is impeached by the legislature.

Second Big Feature
"Red Hot Tires"

This picture is a drama of the automobile race tracks, filled with breath-taking action and death-defying stunts which are performed by a score of nationally famous racing drivers, although several of the cast participate in the races.

There also is a sensational court trial, a jail break and man hunt to add to the thrills, and a romance in which two crack drivers battle not only for racing honors but literally fight to the death for the love of a beautiful girl.

Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor and Gavin Gordon participate in a triangular love affair which ends in the death of one suitor and the success of the other.

Complete shows: 2.30; 7.00; 9.15

Leaving Tonight

"Home on the Range", Zane Grey's thrilling western story starring Jackie Coogan, Randolph Scott and Evelyn Brent, and "She Had to Choose" with Isabel Jewell and Buster Crabbe.

"The Iron Duke"
Certified Entertainment Guranteed in New Season Pictures

Manager Forhan of the Belle Theatre announces a new departure in theatre offerings with the announcement of a "Spring Festival of Certified Entertainment" in which he guarantees the film fare offered at this theatre.

"I have no hesitation in recommending and guaranteeing the pictures which will play the Belle Theatre during the coming weeks", said Manager Forhan.

"Certified Milk, certified bread and other certified products are familiar to us all and the distributors for these products are able to give this guarantee because they know the quality of their goods. A theatre's merchandise is moving pictures, and we know that during the coming weeks there will be available the greatest number of fine motion pictures ever produced, and so it is with certainty that we can offer certified entertainment to our patrons.

The motion picture companies have searched the world for outstanding merit in screen stories—from distinguished authors, favorite books and modern writers. Down-to-earth human interest stories will be joined with spectacles and important musical pictures. Many of the new pictures will be from the works of authors universally accepted as setting the standard in Literature. There will be many new treats, new surprises and new thrills for those attending the Spring Festival of Certified Entertainment at the Belle Theatre.

Coming attractions include, today, Monday and Tuesday, George Arliss in "The Iron Duke", Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter come to the Belle, Wednesday in "One More Spring", Will Rogers in one of the year's most widely read stories, "Life Begins at 40", George Raft and Carole Lombard in "Rumba", the romantic successor to "Bolero", the thrilling railroad classic "The Silver Streak", May Robson in "Grand Old Girl"; Carl Brisson and Mary Ellis in the champagne musical romance of 1935 "All the King's Horses", with Edward Everett Horton and Eugene Pallette, Charles Laughton, Mary Boland, Charlie Ruggles, ZaSu Pitts, Roland Young and Leila Hyams in the funniest comedy classic since the advent of Talkies "Ruggles of Red Gap", Clark Gable and Constance Bennett in "After Office Hours", the delightful screen successor to "Forsaking All Others."

The Belle Theatre management takes great pride in presenting the "March of Time" motion picture feature to Belleville and vicinity audiences. Mr. Forhan said, the title "March of Time" is undoubtedly familiar to everyone who owns a radio, as this Friday night presentation of news dramatizations was voted by radio editors the most interesting and best dramatic program of the air. The motion picture feature "March of Time" is a further development of this type of program, with all the extra thrills which action pictures give to the telling of a story. "The March of Time" is an exclusive Belle attraction, with presentations to commence at an early date, watch for it. The publishers of Time, the weekly news magazine are the sponsors of "March of Time" on the screen.

Taxation System Out of Date Says Hon. Mr. Hepburn

Toronto, March 9 (CP)—The municipal system of taxation is out of date, and municipal government in Ontario is in need of a thorough overhauling, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn says.

At a dinner given by the Toronto Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature for Cabinet Ministers, members of the opposition, city council and civic officials, last night, the Premier said the provincial government intends to investigate these matters and take action.

"The depression will not be ended by works programs by any government, but must spring out of a lower cost of production and relief from high taxation," Mr. Hepburn stated. "It is impossible for us to keep on paying interest on ever-increasing debts, and some relief must come."

Mr. Hepburn said it was almost impossible to find means of levying taxes, that would take care of the increasing burden of debt and interest charges confronting all governments, federal, provincial and municipal.

The burden of taxation, in turn, hindered economic recovery, by slowing down production, the Premier said, noting that in the United States the monetary policies of President F. D. Roosevelt had, to some degree, restored the equilibrium between money, prices and debts.

SEES LABOR PARTY STRONG MINORITY

John Cripps Says Canadian Youth Not Interested in Politics

Toronto, Mar. 9 (CP) — John Cripps, son of Sir Stafford Cripps, leader of the left wing of the British Labor party, thinks the most surprising difference between youth of Canada and England is the young people over here are much less interested in politics.

In his opinion, the Labor party will not win the next election in England. "The jubilee will create a sentiment favorable to Conservatives," was his diagnosis, "and reactionary parties will take advantage of it. I think the Labor party will be a strong minority." Mr. Cripps said he did not think Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald would be elected.

The English visitor has also reached the conclusion President Franklin D. Roosevelt of the United States is rapidly losing prestige.

FLAWLESS BEACH IS WAITED FOR

Sir Malcolm Campbell Will Stay at Daytona Until March 20

Daytona Beach, Fla., Mar. 9 (AP) —Sir Malcolm Campbell, discontented over what he considered a poor showing Thursday when he set a new world's land speed record of 276.816 miles an hour, decided today to remain here until the latter part of March in the hope the flawless beach he seeks will emerge from one of the full moon tides about March 20.

He said he made the decision to stay after talking the matter over with Mayor E. H. Armstrong who asked him to make another drive, aiming for that 300 miles an hour Sir Malcolm believes Bluebird can do.

His mechanics told him today the only damage to the Bluebird from yesterday's run was a slightly bent wheel bearing caused by the treads flying off his tires and a dent on the under surface probably caused by a course flag stake.

SOVIET PEASANTS NOW USING FORKS

Moscow, March 8.—One of the effects of the Bolshevist revolution was cited by the newspaper Pravda, which reported that before the revolution only twenty-five forks were sold for every 100 knives, but now everyone who buys a knife also wants a fork.

These figures were given in connection with statistics issued today showing the demand for urban products to be greatly increasing in the country areas. Increases were shown in orders for iron beds, phonographs, razors, tooth brushes and—table forks.

The newspaper Izvestia announced that Soviet shop employes must concentrate further in developing "store culture", the courteous treatment of customers. In many stores there are signs readin :

"Clerk, be polite to the customer. Customer, be polite to the clerk."

SIMPLE SERVICE FOR NOTED JURIST

President Will Attend Holmes' Funeral at Cemetery

Washington, March 8.—(AP) — Simple funeral services were held today for Oliver Wendell Holmes in the presence of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and his former colleagues on the United States Supreme Court. President Roosevelt planned to attend the ceremony at the grave in Arlington Cemetery.

Several hundred persons braved a chill wind blowing flurries of snow to stand outside All Souls Unitarian Church as the Rev. Dr. U. G. B. Pierce conducted the service.

CHATTERTON W. M. S.

The meeting opened by soft music by the organist, after which the President, Mrs. B. Bleecker, conducted the Call to Worship. Hymn 500. Scripture reading responsive John 16. Roll Call answered by a favourite hymn. Minutes and business. Hymn 331. The programme for the World's Day of Prayer was followed, the first part taken by Mrs. B. Bleecker. Hymn 261. Prayer by Rev. The Women's Association of Kingston Road Church had a most enjoyable evening at the home of Mrs. E. J. Gazley, Dundas street, on the evening of March 6th. Mrs. J. NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

..TORONT OSTOCKS (CLOSE)..

Toronto, Mar. 9 (CP)—The balance of price changes on the industrial section of Toronto Exchange was on the down side at the close of the short Saturday session. Trade was small, even for a Saturday.

The liquor issues were inclined to rebound from Friday's slump which resulted from publication of a Washington item to the effect that alleged illegal entry of liquor into the U. S. was being investigated. Walkers Common pulled up to 27 and at the close was standing at 26½ for a net gain of a point. Distillers Seagrams was up ¼ at the close and Canadian Industrial Alcohol a ⅜. Brewery shares were also slightly soft, Brewing Corporation Common dropping ¼.

Ford "A" sold off nearly a point and C.P.R. eased back ⅛. Oils were off by the smallest of fractions. In the food group Loblaw "A" was the feature, advancing to its high mark for a year at 18¾. Westons made further recovery, getting back to 38.

TORONTO MINES CLOSE

Toronto, March 9.—(CP)—Mining stock prices were irregularly lower in the closing session of the week on Toronto Exchange with trading in smaller volume than the recent average.

McWatters sagged to $2 soon after the opening and then slowly recovered to close at 2.07 off a cent net. Central Patricia dropped a couple of cents to 1.55. Losses up to 10 cents were boarded for Sylvanite, Pickle Crow, Macassa, Little Long Lac, Buffalo-Ankerite and Prosperous Airways. God's Lake, Sheep Creek, McKenzie, McMillan, Gunnar and Ymir Yankee Girl dropped 1 to 3 cents each.

In the Senior Group Dome, Bralorne and Teck Hughes boarded slight recessions while Hollinger and Wright Hargreaves showed no change and McIntyre and Pioneer recorded narrow gains. Noranda moved ahead 50 cents and the other Base Metals were quiet. Action in the Silvers was limited to a few sales in Eldorado and Premier, both at small price concessions.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, March 9 (AP)—Brakes again failed to hold in the rails in today's short session of the stock market and prices were pulled irregularly lower although trading was light. The closing tone was easy. Transfers approximated 280,000 shares.

Union Pacific lost as much as 2 points and fractional recessions appeared in such issues as Santa Fe, N.Y. Central, Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio.

Homestake mining jumped 5 points while such issues as McIntyre, Howe Sound and Noranda rose fractionally.

Among Canadian issues McIntyre was the outstanding firm spot, Dome rose slightly but International Nickel and Wright Hargreaves were unchanged. In the Bond Market Canadian 4s were slightly higher at 105 3-8. Canadian dollars dipped slightly along with sterling ruling 1-4 cent lower at 99 1-8.

Steel shares were soggy with U.S. Steel and Bethlehem losing about half a point. Much of the list closed virtually unchanged but miscellaneous issues losing around half a point included Dupont, Standard of N. J. and Consolidated Gas

POLICE TRACKING DOWN 'GUN GIRL'

Marseille, France, March 9—(AP)—Police were to question three jailed terrorists today in their redoubled efforts to track down the mysterious blonde "gun-girl" sought in connection with the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

Maria Vondraceck, missing blonde, is sought by police of a dozen nations as a participant in the murder plot. Thus far she has eluded capture, and although many months have passed since the crime, few facts about her have been uncovered. The confessed aides of the King's assassin, awaiting trial in a Marseille jail, deny she ever existed.

East Windsor Sends Brief to Government

East Windsor, Mar. 9 (CP)—Firmly convinced it would be impossible for East Windsor to carry out the terms of refinancing as suggested to the Ontario government by Thomas Bradshaw, city council has decided to submit its own brief on the matter to the government.

Mr. Bradshaw had recommended the city's indebtedness be refinanced over a period of 40 years, with no payments on principal for five years and with interest reduced to 3½ per cent year. Ald. Dr. P. N. Gardner pointed out annual interest at this rate would amount to $210,000 or 60 per cent of the present budget.

PRICE OF BEEF UP ONE CENT POUND

Eggs And Hogs Show Weakening of Prices

While dressed hogs and live hogs have, during the past week, declined in price—25 cents a hundred weight, beef has advanced in price—a cent per pound, with prospects that it may be higher.

The only other change of note was in the price of eggs which showed a decline, retailing from 20 to 23 cents per dozen, according to size. There was a large attendance of both sellers and buyers and considerable trading was the result. The interior of the market building was filled and a prominent display was that of home cooking and dairy products.

DETECTIVE IS HIT BY FALLING BRICK

More Than 30 Driven Into Night in Scanty Attire by Fire

Hull, Que., March 9 (CP)— Two men were injured, one seriously, and 30 persons, including a number of children, were driven to the street scantily clad in sub-zero temperature early today, when fire destroyed the St. Marie Block. Damage was estimated at about $45,000.

Among the injured was Detective Auguste Anderson hit on the head by falling brick. His condition is serious. Jean P. Allain, also hit by falling brick, was in hospital suffering head injuries but was not seriously injured.

DRESSES CUT OVER TO FIT PATIENT

Alyce McHenry Makes Rapid Progress After Operation

Fall River, Mass., March 9 (AP)—Alyce Jane McHenry's only worry seems to be those dresses that will have to be "cut over to make them fit."

For the first time since last Monday, when the 10-year-old Omaha girl was operated upon to correct her "upside-down" stomach, no early morning bulletin was posted at the Trusedale Hospital on Alyce Jane's condition.

Apparently, hospital officials felt their smiling patient was in such condition the report could be dispensed with.

"Look at my stomach," she exclaimed last night as the incision in her side was being dressed. "I've never had a stomach like this before."

Then, came her only apparent worry—those dresses—for she added "I'll have to have all my dresses cut over to make them fit."

DISPUTE DECLARED OFF

Geneva, March 9 (AP)—The dispute between Bulgaria and Turkey has been officially declared off through friendly intervention of the League of Nations which led to a settlement, it was announced today in an official communique of the League.

TRADE WIPED OUT BUT JOB REMAINS

Guild of Horners Are Now Lawyers or Brokers Mostly

LONDON, March 8.—(CP)—Notwithstanding that it represents a trade which has been dead for more than a century and a half the Worshipful Company of Horners held its annual dinner as usual. It is still possible to become either a horn lantern maker or a leather bottle manufacturer by election or apprenticeship.

Horners are no longer craftsmen. They are solicitors, architects, tea merchants or stock brokers. They boast of their antiquity, for the Guild of Horners dates back to 1284 and the Leather Bottle Makers joined forces with them in 1477.

In 1881 the company had dwindled to a small group of 10, but today it numbers 170 Freemen of the City of London. Their chief business, now that bottles are of glass and lamps are gas-filled electric bulbs, is the nomination of Sheriffs for the City, and the holding of an annual banquet in the hall of some other Worshipful Company. The Horners themselves are homeless.

HISTORY MAKING BALL

London—(CP)—When their Majesties attend the grand ball given by the municipality of London in the Guild Hall May 22, a feature of the Silver Jubilee Celebrations, it will be the first time in history the King and Queen have attended a ball by the city. Ninety-eight years ago Queen Victoria attended a banquet tendered by the Lord Mayor of London in honor of her coronation, but she did not stay for the ball which followed.

PASSENGERS HURT ON OCEAN LINER

Duchess of Bedford Bucked Heavy Weather Whole Passage

Halifax, March 9 (CP)—A second storm-delayed ship, the liner Duchess of Bedford reached harbor today after the Danish Collier Trode had brought word of another overdue steamer partly disabled on the Atlantic.

Hours behind time, the liner brought into port two women injured as she bucked heavy weather on the crossing from England. Her ankle broken in a fall on the icy deck, Mrs. E. M. Fisher, bound for Burnaye Lodge, Invermore, B.C., was taken to hospital.

Another woman, whose name was withheld, had suffered a broken arm in a fall to the floor of her cabin.

CHARTERED BANKS ISSUE NEW MONEY

Will Conform in Size to Bills Issued by Bank of Canada

Concurrent with the opening of the Bank of Canada on Monday, the chartered banks of Canada will commence the issue of a new size of bank notes, similar in dimensions to the bills to be used by the Bank of Canada, and narrower and fractionally shorter than the old-style Dominion and bank bills now in use.

Almost exactly, it is understood, the new bills of the central bank and the chartered banks will conform to the dimensions of the United States currency. Gradually the old style of bills will be called in and replaced with the smaller bank notes. Only in the retention of the old designs and patterns will the new notes resemble the old.

Thus Canada's paper currency will tread the path of the small five-cent piece and large "copper" which some years ago were altered in size. A few weeks ago, furthermore, there was announced the designing of a Canadian silver dollar, only slightly smaller than the United States "cartwheel" dollar.

R.A.F. OPENS UP FOR MORE YOUTH

Expansion Will Take in 150 Boys in Details

London, March 9—(CP)—The expansion of the Royal Air Force by 41 squadrons necessitates a greatly increased intake of junior personnel. A large proportion of this increase will consist of boys, of whom 1,500 will be required during the next 12 months.

The largest majority will be entered as aircraft apprentices, but substantial numbers will also be required for entry as boy entrants and apprentice clerks.

The aircraft apprentices are trained for three years in the special technical schools of the Royal Air Force to become fitters, instrument makers, and wireless operator mechanics. These are the most important trades in the Air Force, and the highly skilled aircraftsmen employed on these duties receive the highest rates paid in the service. The age limits are 15-17.

Boy entrants are taught the skilled trades of armorer, photographer and wireless operator. Their rates of pay and conditions of service are also good.

BALANCE BUDGET HOPE OF PREMIER

Special Session of Legislature May be Held in Fall

Toronto, March 9.—(CP)—Possibility of a special session of the Ontario Legislature next fall for the purpose of increasing revenues of the Province in order the budget may be properly balanced was held out today by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn.

"We are going to balance the budget whatever else we do and we are going to do it soon," the Premier said. "We have been getting closer to it all the time but we are a long way off yet. It is quite evident we can't go on increasing the debt of the province indefinitely".

As soon as the present session prorogues the Government will attempt to discover new sources of revenue so if and when the special session is called there will be something concrete to lay before the legislature.

"Does that mean new taxes?" Mr. Hepburn was asked.

"You can draw your own conclusions as to that?" was his reply.

The survey of revenue will not be made by a Royal Commission but by the Government officials.

"We are forced more or less to wait until the Ottawa session is over before we can really tell what financial position we are in," Mr. Hepburn stated. "We don't know yet what payments they will make towards unemployment relief and we don't know what the social legislation is going to cost. In fact a good many of our obligations are still unknown so we must wait. One thing I can promise and that is our budget is going to be balanced whatever comes or goes."

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

But she couldn't stop to think of that now. By the time she had on her hat and coat, th car was at the door, and she was driving back to the house in the rue de Varennes, where certainly adame de Luz must have passed an agonizing afternoon waiting for news.

Faith tried to think only of what this would mean to Therese. Everything solved for her. Nothing to pay for her folly. With the precious envelope in her small gloved hands, Faith hurried past the maid who opened the Countess' door.

Sacha de Markoff, Mrs. Duane-Smith and another young man circled the tea table. The Countess de Luze sat behind her silver service, her bird-like features animated under the frizzed crest of her hair, pulled high and forward to the bridge of her small, aquiline nose.

The hum died away at Faith's sudden entrance. The big blond Russian jumped to his feet, his teeth flashing. "Belle Madame, you have recovered from your indisposition of last night?"

"Ah, ma cherie—!" Madame de Luze rose, sweeping forward, with a questioning arch of her eyebrows that Faith answered with a nod. "Will you excuse me a moment?" she called shrilly to the other over her shoulder.

Her expression changed, and her pointed fingers dug into Faith's arm as she drew the girl back into the hall. "You have them?" she whispered.

Without a word, Faith thrust the envelope into the older woman's hand. A resumed murmur went on in the salon. Someone laughed.

Faith wanted to get away as quickly as possible. It sickened her to think that Madame de Luze could receive these people today.

"Mon Dieu—how did you manage, my child?" The Countess seemed stupefied by her good fortune.

"You'll find six letters. I must go now—I'll see you tomorrow." Faith moved toward the door.

"Yes, there were six——" Madame de Luze feverishly tore open the envelope. She was pale under her powder and rouged "Did you promise him ten thousand?"

"Nothing," Faith said shortly. "I can't explain now, Therese. But it's all right." She tore herself loose from the older woman's excited gratitude and questions. "No, I won't stay. I'm very tired—"

She didn't realise how tired, until she got back into the car. She was too let down to think about anything to worry about anything more.

The front door of her house opened almost before she reached it, as if Leon had been watching and listening for the car.

Hunter back! It wasn't possible. Faith made up her mind quickly. No matter why he had returned so unexpectedly, she would go to him now, and tell him everything—the whole wretched story of Roger, the letters, what Dan Rider had done for her.

Color flashed to her delicate cheeks, her grey eyes were bright with determination as lightly she ran up the stairs and knocked on the door of the room where, only an hour ago, she had stood staring at Gertrude's photograph..

The air was pungent with cigars. Hunter's tall figure in tweeds straddled in front of the fireplace. His handsome face w*s stern, unsmiling as he looked up at Faiths impetuous entrance. But what halted Faith half across the room was the presence of Dan Rider. At sight of her he laid his cigar in an ash tray and turned away, his hands fidgeting behind his back, his grey head bowed.

Mechanically Faith pulled off her soft felt hat, her fingers rippling the pale gold of her hair. Her troubled glance went from Mr. Rider to Hunter.

"I decided not to go after all. Thought it wasn't quite fair to you." Hunter's tone was grim. "Dan was waiting here when I came in."

He had come back. That was all Faith cared about. "Oh, I'm so gad you came——" she began. But Mr. Rider, clearing his throat, interrupted. "I have felt it my duty to tell Hunter what I learned this afternoon," he said ˛ravely. eH looked old and worn, but his eyes behind the tortoise-shell glasses were hard as granite.

"What do you mean?" Faith broke through the paralyzing shock of what amounted to an accusation, and rushed to Hunter. "What has he told you?"

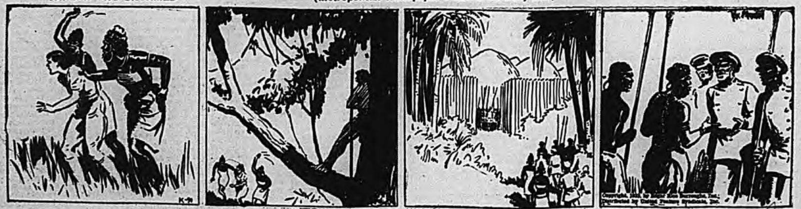
TARZAN THE UNTAMED

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs



As Tarzan halted in the jungle shadows, he saw two husky black women leading a slender white girl. Without cause one or the other would strike or push her roughly. Tarzan watched through half-closed eyes.

His impulse was to leap among them and bear the girl from their cruel clutches. But he had recognized her immediately as Olga, the Red spy. Because of this fact he hesitated. What was it to Tarzan of the Apes what happened to her?

He knew the fate of this clever enemy spy would be horrible, but he forced himself to let the natives pass with the beautiful girl. Late in the afternoon the band came upon a palisaded village. At their approach, the villagers came out to meet them.

Usanga, burly leader of the mob, advanced with two of his warriors to palaver with the chief. After the details were settled, the newcomers were allowed to enter the village. Olga was shoved roughly into an unguarded hut.

It was like clinging to a rock, so rigid and unbending was Hunter's body. "I understand now why you didn't want the fellow in the house," he said harshly. "He had those letters of yours."

"Of mine?" Faith flung back her hea dand laughed, with a touch of hysteria. Then anger whipped hot and high to her eyes. "Do you believe they were my letters after what I told you?" She whirled back to Dan Rider.

"I can believe nothing else," he said stiffly. "I took a detective friend of mine to see this whelp. He broke down when he found I was a friend of the family." Mr. Rider took out a handkerchief and dabbed at his cheeks, which were a violent red again. "He did not deny that the letters he held were yours."

"And you never looked to see? You never waited to ask me?" Faith's grey eyes blazed.

"I did not, of course, examine the letters," Mr. Rider said with dignity. "I told Leon I would be back in half an hour. You had told me enough, yourself, to leave no reasonable doubt in my mind after my extremely trying interview with that scoundrel. And I considered that your husband should be consulted in any case."

Hunter's black brows met over the deep icy blue of his eyes. "You must take me for a blind fool," he said bitterly. "I stood for de Markoff. I was ready to forget last night. But this is a bit too thick."

"You'll be sorry —both of you," Faith cried. She was shaking from head to foot. "A lot of what's happened is my fault. ut those letters belong to Therese."

"Therese". Hunter shouted.

"Faith did mention a friend," Mr. Rider put in uncomfortably. "But that scoundrel assured me—"

"He'd say anything to hurt me." Faith braced herself against the table, facing them. "I didn't want to bring Therese's name into it. I introduced the man to her. I——"

"Where are those letters now?" Hunter demanded, towering over her.

"I took them back to her, of course. ut she'll tell you the truth. I'll call her up right away." Faith still trembled as she reached for the telephone on the desk.

Hunter took the instrument from her cold hands. "I'll do the calling," he said, and gave the number.

"Don't you even trust me enough for that?" Faith said hotly. "Do you want to humiliate her as well as insult me?"

Without another word, Hunter handed over the receiver. There was intense quiet in the room. Mr. Rider lit another cigar.

"Hello—Therese?" Faith's lips were dry. There was no triumph in the vindication that was coming. Hunter had hure here too deeply this time. "Therese, Hunter is back," she said tonelessly. "He's heard about the letters and he thinks I wrote them. You'll have to tell him the truth."

The other end seemed to have gone dead, as if the wires had been cut. Presently Madame de Luze's voice came back, raised and shrill: "My dear, I don't know what you're talking about. I can't tell Hunter anything."

Faith stood staring at the telephone. Therese had rung off. It seemed a long time before she could speak at all.

"Therese denies everything," she said at last slowly.

FAITH SELLS HER PEARLS

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Faith was leaving Hunter. She had known there was nothing else to do from the moment the Countess de Luze had refused to admit that Faith had saved her from blackmail.

Life was that way — cruel and ruthless, ruled by fear. Once you lost the upper hand you were done for. Faith hadn't the heart to fight any more. She had held her head high with a last glimmer of hope when she faced Hunter and Dan Rider, with Madame de Luze's high shrill voice still ringing in her ears —"I don't know what you're talking about. I can't tell Hunter anything."

Faith saw how Hunter felt. She had watched his mind travel back to the very beginning—all the way back to their forced marriage, the ugly scandal concerning her in the tabloids, his reluctant decision to protect her—a girl born out of his world, his traditions. Everything against her—and now this. She could never explain it away. Hunter would never believe her even if he pretended to.

And Dan Rider. He had done what he thought was right, too, in protecting the Barclay honor, the Barclay interests. But he had been sorry. When Faith walked out of the room, Mr. Rider came after her.

"Damn it all, I'm sorry girl," he had said huskily. His eyes behind their glasses had lost their wonderfully youthful look. "I hated like the dickens to tell tales out of school. I guess we can patch it up somehow," he had added with gruff kindness.

"No, we can't. And I don't want to," Faith had answered, and gone to her room. She sat there alone, slim and white, carved as in moonstone. Hunter had never loved her. Now Gertrude Stevens could have him. The world of ease and wealth would close smoothly with scarcely a ripple over Faith's disappearance. Well, they were rid of her now. She would go away.

Hunter listened to her decision in silence. He stood formally in her green and silver room, not a muscle of his stern face showing emotion. A patrician in every line of his head, his shoulders, his long graceful limbs Only his eyes like deep blue fires against his black hair and brows seemed to probe into Faith's heart.

But she had shuttered her heart. She was cool and far away as if she had already gone from him. "There would always be a doubt, Hunter,"—she said. "I couldn't bear that. So—I'm going out of your life as suddenly as I came intoit."

"You'er very sure you wish to go, Faith?" he asked gravely. When she nodded, he went on in his low well bred voice, offering to leave the house to her with every provision to keep it up.

"No, I don't belong here," she said. "I'm going back to America. Probably Reno." She smiled wanly. "And I'd rather not talk over business matters with you, Hunter.' She had her reasons for that.

She gave them the next day to Hunter's startled and protesting lawyer.

"There's no use arguing ,Mr. Demorest," she said firmly. "I'll need a certain amount of money to sail back and—of course—for the divorce. But I will not accept a penny for alimony."

"I don't care what he proposes," Faith said indifferently. "You can tell him I'm keeping the pearl necklace, and that's all, beyond the few thousand I shall need until the divorce is over. You can also tell him," she continued, "that I'm spending the time until I sail with a friend so that he can do as he pleases with the house."

She was a fool, she supposed, to refuse alimony that Hunter could so well afford. She might be rich for life if she chose. But something was changed in Faith. Her spirit rebelled from accepting any more from the man she had loved so hopelessly. He should never remember her, Faith thought proudly, as an adventuress, a common little gold digger. She had come to him with nothing. She would go as she had come—with nothing.

She moved these days as in a silvery armor that hid a dull persistent ache. Through her mind went ceaselessly the refrain—"Hunter believes that I had an affair with Roger. He believes it:"

As for Therese de Luze, she had acted according to jungle laws. No gratitude, no pity. Faith had always wondered if Theres. were not more than a little in love with Hunter. Now she was sure of it. Therese knew only too well that Hunter would have no use for any woman who got mixed up with a blackmailing gigolo. So she had sacrificed Faith— and there it was!

Strange how little it cost Faith to leave that house. She went straight to Mary Allan in the old shabby studio on the left bank of the river Seine.

"My boat sails Saturday. Can I stay with you, Mary, until then?"

Mary's kind clever eyes looked her over with a hint of compassion. "As long as you like."

"I saw the hospital people today," she said, "Paul's sailing with me on Saturday. They say the trip will do him good. And I feel responsible for him." Then she told Mary about her promise that probably saved Paul's life. "You see I've got to do something about his invention, and America's the place," she ended.

Faith flushed, her lovely grey eyes clouding. "I had to lie to him," she admitted. "He isn't strong enough yet to worry. So I told him that I'd shown Mr. Rider the model," she went on defiantly. "I told him Mr. Rider wasn't in Paris just now, but that he was so interested he'd left money with me for Paul's trip, and suggested that Paul start getting his patents."

"You're letting yourself in for a lot of trouble, my dear," Miss Allan said quietly. "What will you do once Paul gets to New York?"

"You know best, my child." Mary Allan in her sensible way, closed the subject.

HOCKEY ADVANCES AS ENGLISH SPORT

Ice Game Popular With Old Country Sport Lovers

London, Mar. 9 (CP)—Britain's greatest sports promoter of the moment is A. J. Elvin and the centre of the nation's major sport activities is Wembley. As an indoor and outdoor palace for sport, Wembley is unquestionably in a class all alone. New York's Madison Square Garden can't hold a candle.

In the summer Wembley and A. J. Elvin give the Englishman his greyhound racing, his auto racing, professional and amateur boxing, wrestling and, occasionally, a football match of outstanding interest and importance. The Englishman prefers Wembley, it seems, when he wishes to view a spectacle.

Elvin can explain the popularity of his stadium seats. "We have made our public and we intend to give them what they want," he said. Wembley "made" greyhound racing in England under Elvin's direction. It drew thousands to see little auto racers tear around a track little more than a quarter-mile long.

It took ice hockey to its bosom last fall, induced many Canadians to come to England to play it, and has reaped profits. Swimming has become more popular among the rank and file of Englishmen and women than in years. Wembley's pool, thrown open to the public in the summer, is the cause.

What Elvin and Wembley touch turns into money. The world's table tennis — or ping-pong — championships will be staged in the Wembley building this month and 6,000 seats were sold a month prior to the first match. Elvin has arranged high-powered lights over the tables so tht customers in the top gallery seats will be able to follow the flights of the celluloid balls with ease.

Not only has hockey become London's winter passion, but skating has become so popular that the fad is likely to last for many years. Thousands skate at Wembley in the afternoons, thousands more jump on the ice and skate following each hockey game. Elvin has made the town enthusiastic.

Before the indoor season closes for the winter, Jack Peterson will have fought Walter Neusel before a $50,000 crowd, the table tennis players will have given way to Big Bill Tilden's troupe of professional tennis players and the British Amateur Athletic Union will have conducted its first national indoor track and field championships at Wembley.

Then the summer indoor season will open and Elvin is ready with swimming galas, diving exhibitions and, most important of all, public swimming days and nights for all London. He will have the ice carried out, the floors lifted and the big Empire Games tank filled with water. Then the turnstiles will start to click again.

It's all in the facilities. Elvin has one of the world's best swimming auditoriums, a fine hockey arena, a place to stage any old kind of indoor sport event. And he has it all under one roof. He can put on a fight card in the afternoon and a hockey match at night.

Right outside the box office door stands a stadium that will seat 125,000 people and Elvin has managed remarkably well to keep this giant bowl paying dividends through football, greyhound racing — one of the most popular of all British sports — auto racing and boxing.

PRESTON GIRLS EASY VICTORS

Defeat Summerside Crystals by Score of 4-0

Summerside, P.E.I., March 9 (CP)—With a four-goal lead tucked away, Preston Rivulettes will go into the final game against Summerside Crystal Sisters tonight confident of adding the Eastern Canadian Women's Hockey championship to their string of titles.

The sharp-shooting Ontario girls, champions of Quebec and Ontario handed the Crystals their first defeat in 10 years when they whitewashed them 4-0 here last night.

Crystals turned in a pretty performance as they stick-handled through the visitors time and again but they lacked scoring punch and found their loose style of play ineffective against the Rivulettes' smart combination work.

Speedy Helen Schmuch, Preston centre, started the scoring early in the first period when she picked up a loose puck and snapped it past Dot Harris in the Charlottetown net. Gladys Hawkins dropped in an easy long shot in the second, and the veteran M. Schmuch, assisted by her sister, scored two more in the third.

Magedomas Defeat Chatham To Win Senior "B" Title

Brockville Will Now Meet Either Toronto or Hamilton

Chatham, March 9 (CP)—Brockville Magedomas won the senior "B" championship of the Ontario Hockey Association here Friday night turning back Chatham Maroons 2-1 in a thrilling contest. Magedomas won the first game of the series at home by 6-3 on Wednesday night and their victory in the second closed the series.

It was a heart-breaking game for the Maroons to lose. After checking the powerful invaders to a standstill for two periods, Chatham took the lead at the seven-minute mark in the third period on a goal by Dawson. The crowd went wild as the Maroons took the lead for the first time in the series.

Then back to their close-checking ways, the Michigan-Ontario League team held its rivals for nine minutes as the end grew near. Then Magedomas put on a power play. Coleman banged in the tying goal. Three minutes later Coleman provided Lowery with an assist for the winning tally.

Sherry of Brockville played despite the fact that he was suffering from an attack of influenza. He was ill on arrival here and was put to bed. But he insisted on going into the game although his temperature was 101.

Scoreless for 45 Minutes

The Maroons got a break just after the first period opened when Dexter drew a penalty for tripping but were unable to capitalize on it although they applied the power play. A few minutes after Dexter got back in the game Stevens drew a penalty for tripping and half a minute later Heath went to the bench for boarding. The Magedomas applied the pressure but Sadlier, Hales and Dawson in front of Peardon held the visitors out. With all the men back on the ice the teams settled away to put up a hard, close checking game. Both goalies were called upon to strut their best stuff. With about four minutes to go Heath drew another penalty for tripping but there was no damage occasioned. The period ended with Chatham carrying the play.

Both teams maintained the fast pace in the second stanza and checking was close. The Magedomas pressed hard when Heath drew his third penalty of the night but were unable to bulge the twine. The Maroons had a break when Sherry was penalized but could not score. Hales at centre for the locals, was the standout player in this period. Play was about even with both teams missing goals by inches.

After the Maroons had got through several times Dawson scored at about seven-minute mark with Hales and Murrell getting assists. The Magedomas pressed but the Maroons not only held them out but got in several times but Tice was too good. Peardon pulled off numerous spectacular saves. Coleman tied the count at 15.37 with Brockville ganging the net. With less than two minutes to go Lowery scored the winning counter. Coleman assisting. The Maroons ganged the Brockville net but their chances went glimmering when Heath was penalized. The teams:

Brockville—Goal, Tice; defence, Dexter and Price; centre, Kennedy; wings, Woodcock and Sheridan; subs, Sherry, Nicoll, Coleman and Lowery.

HOCKEY PLAYER IS HURT IN PASTIME

Roy Brooks, Allegedly Struck With Stick on Head

Stirling, Mar. 9 (Special)— Roy Brooks, hockey player with the Glen Ross team and participating in the final game of the Centre Hockey League at Stirling last night against Zion's Hill was allegedly struck over the head with a hockey stick from behind in the hands of Homer "Red" Townsend, and this morning was in a serious condition, the extent of his injuries not yet being determined. The alleged attack caused a near riot on the ice, when spectators and players took part in a free for all and the Provincial Police were called in to quell the disturbance. Townsend was not detained but a complete investigation will be held by the police today to determine the course of action to be taken.

The player injured was carried from the ice in an unconscious condition and taken to the home of Rev. E. W. Rowland and Dr. H. Alger attended but no examination was made to determine the injuries, although first aid was rendered. It is alleged, that both players at the time of the blows being struck were not in the play. A rush down the ice had been made by Zion's Hill and Townsend, it is stated, was skating back to his position with Brooks standing with his back to Townsend watching the play as it proceeded to the other end of the ice. Townsend, when nearing Brooks, is alleged to have struck him a blow from behind with the hockey stick and soon everyone was punching everyone else. The referee tried to quiet the disturbance and soon the police were on the job and the game resumed.

MAX SCHMELING 5-1 FAVORITE

German Tangles With Steve Hamas in Hamburg, Sunday

Hamburg, March 9 (AP)—Since all is not beer and skittles, Max Schmeling is a 5 to 1 favorite to whip young Steve Hamas in their 10-round bout, tomorrow.

The odds reflect German opinion, that the former Penn State football star as trained in far too lackadaisical fashion to meet the deadly serious Schmeling on even terms.

Steve has shocked German boxing critics by taking his glass of beer when he wanted it. Whether or not his condition actually has suffered thereby is open to question. Neither he nor his manager, walrus-moustached Charley Harvey, has shown any lack of confidence in the American's ability to score his second victory over the former world's champion.

STIRLING

JUVENILES ENTER FINAL PLAY-OFFS

St. Paul's Woman's Association Regular Meeting

Stirling, March 9—On Thursday evening March 7, the final play-offs of the Stirling Juvenile League took place in Stirling arena. The two leading teams played off for the championship. Dainard's team won out over the smart team of Butlers, by a score of 3-2. It was a hard grind all the way, with Butler's team in the lead until well on in the third period. Plenty of stiff penalties were handed out by referee R. Scott, who had his hands full with both teams striving hard for a win.

Great interest had been shown in these games throughout the season, and the little fellows put up a fine exhibition of fast skating and good stick handling. A prominent business man and sportsman was responsible for its beginning. The old mill pond shinny has been turned into worthwhile hockey contests Every boy who desires to play hockey is given a chance. Being coached and managed properly they become rink conscious at an early age. It is the foundation of all sport to start early in life; this gives them the start they need.

The lineups:

Butler—goal, G. Ward; defence, Butler and Dainard; wings. W. Brooks and P. Richardson; centre, R. Woodbeck. Sub. Farnsworth.

Dainard—goal, Fitzgerald; defence, Morton and Dainard; wings, McDonald and Faulkner; centre, Armstrong.

Referee—R. Scott.

Mrs. Tom Emerson and daughter Lois, and Miss Gladys Bateman, all of Thomasburg are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Christie.

St. Paul's Women's Association

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Women's Association was held on Wednesday afternoon, March 6, at the home of Mrs. Fred McKee. The meeting opened with the singing of a hymn, and with Mrs. Arthur Gordanier in charge. Mrs. J. Wilson led in prayer, and the Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. McKee. This was followed by the roll call and the reading of the minutes and the treasurer's report. The program for this particular meeting was under the direction of Mrs. R. A. Patterson. Mrs. Pedley contributed the first number on the program—a piano solo. Then a paper was presented by Mrs. Patterson. It was a collection of quotations from outstanding people on current topics and proved very interesting indeed. It contained many articles of value and a fund of sound philosophy, as well as wit and humor. Mrs. J. Thompson gave a splendid talk in which she spoke of the method adopted in the preparation of the foregoing paper. The meeting was brought to a close with prayer.

An electric light pole was snapped off close to the ground on Thursday near the residence of Mr. Harper Rollins. A large truck load of wood skidded on the icy driveway and backed into it. No other damage was done. This is the second light pole to be broken off this winter, and in each case the accident was due to the slippery pavement.

Mrs. Chas. Morgan returned home on Thursday evening after spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Mason.

Mr. Charles Allen returned home on Thursday after a busy week end in Toronto and Kirkland Lake.

HARDEST TEST FOR THE BRUINS

Can Finish on Top if They Win Weekend Games

By the Canadian Press

Boston's claim to superiority in the National Hockey League's American division receives its hardest test of the race to the playoffs, when they meet Leafs in Toronto tonight and Red Wings at Detroit Sunday. If they can win both games they should get under the wire with points to spare.

Bruins' chances to go into the lead present the most interesting prospect of the half-dozen games scheduled tonight and Sunday. Their battle with Chicago for first place is the only thing left to fight about as the schedule nears its end.

Black Hawks, with one more game played than Boston, must win from Rangers Sunday night if they are to be sure of keeping stride with Frank Patrick's team. They have only one game over the week-end.

Rangers play St. Louis Eagles tonight in the Missouri City and if they lose can be pretty well counted out of the battle for the title series. They are three points behind the leaders and may be content to stay there.

Detroit meet Canadiens in Montreal tonight in a game, that doesn't mean anything as far as the standings are concerned and Montreal Maroons clash with Americans in New York Sunday night in the same sort of affair.

OVERCOME LEAD AIM OF DEACONS

Smart Basketball Game Scheduled For City Tonight

Although down sixteen points to the fast "Lizzies" of Toronto for their return game of basketball in the Collegiate "gym" tonight, the Deacons believe they can overcome that handicap and proceed further in their quest for junior honors in the basketball world. The Deacons probably from stage fright or over confidence failed to show their true strength in Toronto and never did hit their stride during the pastime. Certainly they did not play the game they are capable of but tonight is a different night. The boys are all primed for the struggle and intend opening with their strongest offensive and believe, they can down the "Lizzies" on a strange floor.

Basketball fans in this city and district should not fail to see this clever Toronto team in action and also the Deacons, for probably they are the best junior team ever assembled in this city. Bob Abate, canny coach of the "Lizzies" will be on hand and it is worth the price of admission to see this mentor perform if his team is on the short end of the score. The Deacons last year were only beaten by Broadview by four points on the round and this year the "Lizzies" beat the Broadview team to enter the playdowns. The Deacons by the same process of reasoning are stronger than last year for they have had the added experience of playing together.

Edwards at centre, Mandel forward and Abrahms defence are the scoring trio of the "Lizzies" and accounted for 35 points of the 42 compiled by their team. It will be the duty of the Deacons to stop these players and still find time to add a few baskets on their own account. The Deacons are deserving of a large crowd and if they get any break will no doubt considerably reduce the long lead and perhaps take the "Lizzies" into camp.

Allan Cup Playdowns

By The Canadian Press

Ontario hockey teams were treading title trails carefully today as the quest for major honors progressed.

The famous Wolves of Sudbury in the Northern Ontario Hockey Association are deep in playdown schedules in both the junior and senior groups.

The Cub Wolves were impressive last night as they trounced the husky South Porcupine team in the first game of the northern juniors finals 11-4. While the youngsters were winning by this lopsided score the senior Wolves took a four-goal lead over Kirkland Lake Millionaires with a 5-1 victory.

The Cubs and the Porkies divided two goals between them in the first period but in the second frame Sudbury scored nine times with only one reply. Porkies notched twice to Sudbury's six in the last period. Shannon scored four goals and assisted in another for the Cubs.

Millionaires will tackle the senior Wolves' four-goal advantage at Copper Cliff on Monday in the second frame of the senior windup series.

In the Ontario Hockey Association, Brockville Magedomas won the senior "B" championship with a 2-1 victory over Chatham Maroons. Brockville took the first game 6-3, thus winning the round by four goals.

Chatham went ahead early in the third period after two scoreless frames. Dawson tallied for the Maroons but nine minutes later Coleman tied the score and a few minutes after that provided the pass, whereby Lowery scored the winning Brockville goal.

Fifteen hundred Barrie fans watched the Colts rally in fine fashion to gain 7-3 decision over Peterboro in the first home-and-home game in the O.H.A. Junior "B" semi-finals. Peterboro scored three times without a reply in the first period but Barrie came back to score twice in the second and five times in the third.

Toronto Stars and Hamilton Tigers tangle in the second game of the O.H.A. senior "A" finals in Toronto this afternoon. Stars battled the Bengals to a scoreless tie on Wednesday in Hamilton, thus forcing the series to three games.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Although Saturday night is not the best evening in the week to stage athletics in Belleville nevertheless one of the season's outstanding sport event is on the books for tonight when the fast Elizabeth Park juniors of Toronto play the Deacon A.C. kids in the Provincial Junior O.B.A. playdowns at the Collegiate. Despite the fact the "Lizzies" downed the Deacons to the tune of 42 to 26 last Saturday in Toronto, the locals are entering the fray high in hopes of overcoming that lead. Coach Laughlin put his charges thru two stiff workouts this week and each player is reported to be in the very best of condition and ready for battle. On the other hand Coach Bob Abate twisted the O.B.A. executive around his fingers and practically forced the Deacons into playing tonight so he would have all his star players on the floor. Altho the Toronto team boast the pick of juniors in Toronto, the Deacons did not get into the playdowns withou a struggle as they eliminated some good teams. Tonight's game will bring together two of the best junior teams in the province, and the winner is already being heralded as potential junior champions.

A rather regrettable announcement came out of Peterboro yesterday when Wm. Kay, for many years past O.B.A.A. executive member for the Central Ontario region, stated he would not be a candidate for that position in 1935. Bill Kay has been a faithful and ardent worker towards the betterment of baseball in Eastern Ontario and his position will be hard to fill. Altho Mr. Kay definitely stated that he had tendered his resignation to Secretary Snyder a movement is already on foot to have him think it over. The matter will be taken up at the semi-annual meeting of the Central League next Saturday in Oshawa, at which time Mr. Kay's successor for election will be named providing he continues to be of the same mind as to retiring. In case he cannot be persuaded to remain it has been suggested that Max Swanston, president of the Central League be nominated. An excellent choice, indeed.

Belleville and district hockey fans may yet be treated to the season's best hockey as arrangements for the C.O.S.S.A. interscholastic semi-finals are in the mails while the executive of the Hockey League is planning a post-season series, embracing the better teams of the district. Already the winners of the Central and Northern Leagues, Trenton Imperials and Stewart Warner are ready. The winner will be awarded the Robertson and Burrows' trophies—both fine cups and well worth competing for. According to the proposition all four teams will appear at the Arena on Tuesday night in a double header, while on Thursday night the winners will clash to complete the hockey season locally.

Getting back to the C.O.S.S.A. interscholastic situation, Coach Shiels received word this morning that the Owen Sound Collegiate pucksters had defaulted to Belleville due to the extended travelling distance to the C.O.S.S.A. finals this year. Naturally, as pointed out by the Owen Sound team, it would take considerable financing to bring a collegiate team to Belleville, and if successful continue to Kingston for the finals. When the Owen Sound squad threw up the sponge it left the locals idle from now until next Friday when they start in the provincial interscholastic semi-finals at Kingston. It is some years since the local collegiate pucksters have enjoyed such honors, the last time being when they were eliminated at the Varsity arena in Toronto by the fast Windsor-Walkerville C. I. in a hectic final game. Bill Sherry, the Morgan boys, Rene St. Denis and other well known local hockey players of the present era were included on Coach Shiels' team that year. Today the 1935 edition of the B.C.I. team surprised many owing to the fact that they had little practice before jumping right into the play-downs.

Having attended executive meetings of the Belleville Nationals and the newly organized Stewart Warner-Alemite Baseball club during the past week we have been impressed with the enthusiasm that is being displayed by these two organizations in the matter of placing a team on the field, that would be a credit to the city. While we appreciate the efforts of the individual clubs referred to would it not be to a mutual advantage, both for the clubs and the sporting public of this city and district, who financially through the summer months carry the heavy load, to amalgamate into one strong organization? We have been reliably informed that both organizations have put forth sincere efforts to provide Belleville with a high calbire of ball in order to compete with teams of the district that are known to have also materially increased their playing strength. Believing the matter can be amicably settled, knowing the calibre of men who are guiding the destinies of these clubs, we will leave the question of amalgamation for their earnest consideration, knowing that Belleville baseball fans desire and will support their baseball team.

Between 40 and 50 anglers gathered at the armouries last night and tossed the plug about. A few impromptu competitions were entered into with the casters displaying unerring skill for the first night out. The weather conditions proved rather adverse as it was sufficiently cold to warrant a person wearing their overcoat, but the dexterity of the casters did not seem mitigated through this disadvantage. Equally as many spectators as participants were on hand to usher in the plug and fly casting season, indoors. It was announced by President Joe Shortt that the weekly casting competitions would be held on Wednesday night from henceforth. The local Anglers' Association has increased in popularity to a marked degree during the past two years, while their pre-season casting competitions are thoroughly enjoyed by participants and spectators alike.

The International Hockey League, which banished single points for tie games this season, may revert back to the old system next year. This despite the fact the rule effectively cut down the number of drawn games. Why the Cleveland Falcons haven't played a tie game yet this season.

THE WEATHER
Westerly to northerly winds; partly cloudy and somewhat colder tonight and Tuesday.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

New York, March 11 (CP) — Pearl Serper, salesgirl, says pickets discourage cupid as well as customers.

She made the assertion in an affidavit supporting a plea of her employers for an injunction against picketing by a local of the Retail Clock, Suit, Dress and Fur Sales People's Union.

The lot of the loyal salesgirl who refuses to join the union, her affidavit says, is doubly hard.

"The constant presence of picketing and the cry of strike is hard to explain anway. As a natural result my social contacts have dwindled. . . . Opportunities to meet people socially are denied me. . . . It follows that meeting eligible young men who possibly might become interested in me as a lifetime companion is more difficult," the affidavit avers.

SOVIET RUSSIA SELLS RAILROAD TO MANCHOUKUO

Agreements Call For Payment of $39,300,000 To Russia

LONG BARGAINING

Russia Eliminated as Political Force in Manchuria

(By Glenn Babb)

Tokyo, March 11. —(AP)— Historic documents in which Soviet Russia sells the full title of the Chinese Eastern railway to Manchoukuo for 140,000,000 yen—currently about $39,300,000—were initialed tonight at the official residence of Koki Hirota, Foreign Minister.

The written approval of the agreements, signalizing the elimination of Russia as a political factor in Manchuria, were signed by Hirota, by Dr. Constantine Youreneff, Soviet Ambassador to Japan, and by Gen. Ting Shih-Yuan, Manchoukuan Minister of Finance.

Their initials concluded 20 months of bargaining and rang down the curtain on four decades of Russo-Japanese contentions for the domination of the territory which Japan has made into "the Independent Empire of Manchoukuo."

The documents require all three governments approve them before their formal signing about March 23, when Manchoukuo—through Japan's South Manchurian railway—will assume possession of the railway system.

The documents initialed tonight were:

1.— A Russian-Manchoukuan agreement selling the railway:

2.—A Russian-Japanese exchange of notes in which Japan guarantees Manchoukuo will fulfil the terms of payment.

3.—A tripartite protocol providing the machinery for the settlement of disputes which may possibly arise from the provisions permitting Manchoukuo to make its payment two-thirds in goods.

HON. DR. SIMPSON TAKEN VERY ILL

Second Member of Ontario Cabinet to Withdraw For Illness

Toronto, March 11—(CP)—Second Ontario Cabinet Minister forced to withdraw from the legislature this session through illness, Hon. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education must undergo an operation which will keep him away from his office for the remainder of the session, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced today.

As soon as his condition permits, Mr. Simpson will undergo an operation, the Premier said. So far it has not been possible to move the Minister from his home to hospital.

Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, today assumed the office of Acting Minister of Education.

Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands and Forests, was forced last week to relinquish his duties as Minister of Lands and Forests for the rest of the session. Premier Hepburn has taken over the office. The Premier said Mr. Heenan expects to leave Wednesday for a sea voyage which his physician has prescribed.

Dr. Simpson, member for Simcoe Sentre, is one of the most experienced legislative members of the cabinet. Last session he was financial critic. He had planned on bringing down legislation providing for important reforms in the province's educational system.

Training School For Police Opens

Toronto, March 11 (CP)—The new police training school opened here today with delegates from Toronto police force, Kingston and Cornwall and the Provincial force. NYE PROPOSES DRASTIC CURB ON MUNITION MAKERS

Scene at huge munition works.

Drestic regulations to curb manufacture of munitions and armaments are proposed by Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, chairman of the United States Senate Munitions investigation. Nye would levy a 99 per cent. tax during war times on all incomes over $10,000 a year, the levy to apply on earnings in excess of the exemption. He has gone on record in favor of "strong domestic control," or nationalization of armament manufacture if that fails. Nye says that munition manufacturers have made the industry a "racket" and have used the U.S. navy as "a salesman's sample case."

NEW MEASURES TO BE INTRODUCED

May Create Grain Board And National Economic Council

Ottawa, March 11 (CP)—An expectant House of Commons looks forward today to possible introduction of further items in the government reform program. Two important matters stand on the order paper in the form of resolutions. The creation of a Dominion Grain Board, and establishment of an economic council, items in the program which the government proposes to implement by legislation, may be discussed during the week, if not today. The customary explanation offered by a Minister when a resolution is introduced is awaited with interest by members of the House.

Whether or not Prime Minister R. B. Bennett is able to take his seat in the House this week, government measures, even those in which he has been primarily interested will be proceeded with, it is intimated. Assuming he is not present the Grain Board legislation will probably be gone ahead with by Hon. R. B. Hanson, Minister of Trade and Commerce. Bills providing for the eight hour-day and the statutory day of rent, based on conventions already approved by the House, will be in the hands of Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labor, if Mr. Bennett is not present.

The Prime Minister is reported as progressing toward full recovery, but the word of his physicians is that he needs rest. With an election campaign in the near future present relaxation is regarded as very important.

The awards were on recommendation of Premier Etienne Flandin and Foreign Minister Pierre Laval of the French Government.

Senator Dandurand was made a grand officer of the Legion of Honor and Hon. Mr. David promoted from chevalier to commander.

Pope Pius Calls Consistory, Cardinals May be Created

Vatican City, Mar. 11—(AP)— A secret consistory has been summoned to meet April 1, it was officially announced at the Vatican today.

Prelates said several days ago that Pope Pius was planning to hold a public consistory four days after the secret consistory for final approval of the canonization of Thomas More, Henry VIII's Chancellor, who lost his head because he opposed Henry's divorce and marriage to Anne Boleyn.

The [illegible] of Bishop John Fisher, one-time Bishop of Rochester and a contemporary of More, was expected to be submitted at the same time.

Prelates said also the Pontiff probably would create new Cardinals, since the sacred college now is down to 51 members instead of the maximum of 70.

Cardinal Pacelli, Papal Secretary of State, will be named Camerlingo, the Papal Chamberlain vacated by the death of Cardinal Gasparri.

Venizelist-General And Officers Ask Bulgar Protection

Sofia, March 11—(CP-Havas)— A Venizelist general, two colonels and 19 other officers appeared on the Bulgarian frontier today near Terdech and Nevrokop and asked the protection of the Bulgarian authorities, according to messages reaching here. Other dispatches indicated the Greek revolt had collapsed.

The Bulgarian frontier on Greece has been strictly guarded the past 48 hours to prevent violation of the border either by Venizelist or Tsaldáris troops. It is understood, however, the Sofia government will permit the passage of small groups of Greek officers and soldiers who voluntarily surrender their arms.

A Greek government statement which contained the morning communique released by the military governor of Salonika said:

"Government cavalry detachments entered Seres at 8 a. m. Forty rebel officers have abandoned their troops and have fled into the interior. The defeat of the rebels may be considered a matter of hours."

Statue Question Is Brought Up

London, March 11—A controversy swirling about the thorn-crowned six-ton figure of Christ chiseled by Jacob Epstein, sculptor, will be brought into the House of Commons today.

Sir Cooper Rawson, Conservative, has given notice that he will ask the Home Secretary to "instruct police to remove or confiscate" the statue, which "offends against the public decency."

Epstein, who has been unable to lay hand to mallet or chisel in England for nearly two decades without stirring up argument has refused to be drawn into the present one, saying:

"I've made the statue and I've nothing to say about it—except what I've already said in the statue."

The 11-foot high white stone creation, entitled "Behold the Man" gives Christ a squat nose and a square-cut pugnacious chin. The wrists of the hands, crossed on the knees, are bound by rope, hanging down to the feet like hawsers.

While Dr. Walter Matthews, successer to Dean W. R. Inge at St. Paul's, sees "An expression of great power" and "an interpretation of One who can't be defeated" in the statue, the Catholic Times castigates Epstein's work with "We see only a distorted reminiscence of a man, the debased, sensuous flat figure of an Asiatic monstrosity."

Epstein's sale price for the statue is £3,150 (around $15,000).

Gas from New Gas Well Explodes in Furnace Room

Chatham, Ont., March 11 (CP)— Frank Wilson of the Greek Road, Harwich, suffered severe burns about the face when gas from a newly-drilled well, being turned into his furnace for the first time, completely filled the furnace room, ignited and caused an explosion.

Wilson rushed through a wall of flame to escape from the room and a heavy winter coat protected his body from the fire. His face was badly burned but today he is said to be recovering.

The explosion blew out glass windows in the home and knocked furniture about but the flames were controlled before extensive damage was done. Hearing the explosion, men stationed at the well cut off the source of supply and the fire in the furnace room was extinguished with pails of water.

BANK OF CANADA DIRECTS CREDIT OF THE DOMINION

Opens For Business And Sets Discount Rate at 2½ P. C.

TAKES OVER GOLD

Balance Sheet to be Issued Weekly Says Officials

Ottawa, March 11 (CP)— The Bank of Canada took over at 10 o'clock today the direction of the currency and credit machinery of the Dominion. These functions previously performed by the department of finance. The first discount rate announced was 2½ per cent. This is the rate at which the Central Bank will make advances to the chartered banks or discount their securities.

The discount rate is the same for the first day as the Department of Finance had charged the banks. The rate of the Federal Reserve Bank in New York today is 1½ per cent. and the rate in London is 2 per cent.

The discount rate is one of the chief weapons which the Central Bank has to influence the credit situation in the Dominion. By lowering the discount rate credit would be made easier and by increasing the rate credit would be tightened up. The Central Bank will announce its rates frequently.

The head offices of the Bank of Canada in Ottawa and its branches in the provinces will be open to the public for the same hours as the chartered banks are. This is from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and on Saturday from 9.30 a.m. to 12 noon.

Changes in the discount rate are made only at a meeting of the executive board or the board of directors. The executive meets at least once a week and the directors at least four times a year. Frequent changes in the rate are unlikely but any movement will be promptly made public, officials said. The first weekly balance sheet will be issued probably Thursday. It will show the balances as on Wednesday of each week.

Business of the new bank opened all the way across Canada today with each provincial office of the assistant receiver general becoming an agency of the Central Bank. Presumably the first transaction would have been in the Maritime Provinces because of the difference in time. In Ottawa the main business today was taking over the $70,000,000 in gold held in the Dominion treasury and transferring to the Bank of Canada some $150,000,000 in three per cent five-year Dominion bonds which will compensate the bank for assuming responsibility for the Dominion notes. This was merely a formal book-keeping entry since the gold and securities remain in the vaults under the east block of the Parliament Buildings.

"POWER BARONS" COME TO TORONTO

Premier Hepburn Favors a Revision of Power Pacts

Toronto, March 11—Quebec power interests will send representatives to Queen's Park some time this week with the Hepburn Government on the Hydro contracts situation, it was reported last night. It could not be learned just what day has been selected for the visit of the "power barons" though it is thought likely they will visit Parliament Buildings towards the end of the week.

The Hepburn Cabinet held an all-day session on Saturday and the Hydro situation was thoroughly discussed. No statement was later issued by the Premier, though he admitted that the contracts formed the chief topic of conversation. The opinion is still current that the Government is not anxious to repudiate the contracts and would much rather obtain revision of the terms.

Father of Quintuplets Opposes Guardian Bill, Says Family Split Feared

'Want All Children to Have Equal Chance' Dionnes State

2 SEPARATE FAMILIES

Mrs. Dionne Wants M.P.P.'s to Talk it Over With Wives

North Bay, Ont., March 11 (CP) —Declaring it would split his family in two, Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, opposes the bill now before the Ontario Legislature to make the five baby girls "wards of the King."

In an interview here Dionne expressed keen dissatisfaction with provisions of the measure introduced in the Legislature Friday by the Hon. David Croll, Minister of Welfare. It would bring the children's welfare under the direction of the minister with Dionne one of a board of guardians to be appointed by Mr. Croll.

"Mr. Croll told us that God never intended us to have money. That I was a prosperous farmer and to go back to my farm and forget about the babies until they were 18 and then we would have $1,000,000," Dionne said.

Chance to Raise Family

"All we want is a chance to show that we are able to raise our babies. Under the present bill they would become "state children," and there would be two separate families. We don't want that. We want all our children to have an equal chance," Mrs. Dionne, joining in the statement, declared.

"We were willing in December to give a written guarantee that we would not exploit the babies in any way and we are still willing to do that," the father said. He explained the vaudeville tour he and his wife made recently in the United States was forced on them "to show what we could do."

Dionne's Comment

"We always thought we were living in a free country," Dionne continued. "But it doesn't look like it now. I wonder how far north we

COWBOY ORDEAL FATAL TO CHILD

Officers planned to present the entire matter to the clerk of the court but it was considered unlikely any action would be taken against the "Indians" who tied Eddie to a tree, set fire to nearby dry grass and then stood in horror as flames enveloped his clothing.

Edward and "the gang" began a game of "cowboy and Indians" Saturday. Edward and Robert Dobryzinski, eight, were chosen "cowboys". Their playmates, whose ages ranged from eight to eleven, were the "Indians".

The "cowboys" were lashed to a tree, one on each side and a half inch rope was used to bind them. The "Indians" heaped dry grass near the tree and someone touched a match to it.

The grass near the "stake" caught and in a jiffy Eddie's clothes burst into flame.

The dancing "Indians" shrieked and Walter Peterson, 18, rushed to the scene as one of the boys slashed the rope binding Eddie to the tree. "Bobby" Dobryzinsky had managed to worm his way from the higher flames by straining at his bonds.

Peterson grabbed a coat, wrapped Eddie in it and extinguished the burning clothing but doctors at the Brockton hospital said Edward had inhaled some of the flames.

HYDRANT BROKEN MOTORIST FINED

M. J. Collins Pleads Guilty to Reckless Driving Charge

Skidding on the icy pavement an automobile driven by M. J. Collins of the Trenton Airport, crashed into a city hydrant and a telephone pole on West Dundas St. about 11.00 p.m. Saturday night. The impact caused considerable damage as both the hydrant and the telephone pole were broken from their base. Collins appeared in the local police court today and pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving for which he was assessed the minimum fine imposed under the L.C.A. The damage to the hydrant and pole amounted to over $125.00, while Collins' car was damaged to the estimable value of $200, police stated.

According to the local police, who investigated the accident, Collins was driving east and had just entered the city limits on West Dundas St. at an excessive rate of speed. The driver in attempting to lower his progress, applied the brakes of his car just as the vehicle was passing over an icy portion of the highway. The automobile started to skid and before the driver could get it under control the vehicle had skidded into the south ditch, breaking off a hydrant and later a telephone pole. Mr. Collins fortunately escaped without injuries, although the front and one side of the automobile were badly damaged.

Provincial Police today are searching for one Harold McClellan, age 19, who is alleged to have stolen $30.00 and some wearing apparel from his employer, Mr. A. Eggleton, Halloway, some time Sunday night.

The matter was reported to the Provincial Police early today, when it was discovered that young McClellan had disappeared from the home of Mr. Eggleton, for whom he farm laboured. The money was not missed until after it was discovered, that Percy Eggleton's clothes were gone, the latter being a son of the farmer for whom McClellan worked.

According to information received by the Provincial Police young McClellan retired for the night early Sunday evening and no disturbances were heard in the home afterwards. Upon arising this morning, however, McClellan had disappeared. It was following this, that a check-up in the home revealed the theft.

Improved Conditions Reduces Adult Reading at the Library

17 P.C. Drop Result Probably of Less Leisure, Other Entertainment

At the meeting of the Corby Public Library Board on Friday evening the following report of the year's work was submitted by the librarian Miss Margaret White:

"We find a decrease of 17 percent in the number of volumes loaned from the Adult Section, and a small increase in those from the Boys' and Girls' Department. The figures are:

1933 Adult 118,976; Juvenile 18,463.

1934 Adult 98,315; Juvenile 19,061.

This decrease is in no way alarming, as the same condition prevails in the majority of libraries at this time. As I have stated before, I believe the reason to be two-fold; improved conditions, generally, resulting in less enforced leisure, and more time and money spent in other forms of entertainment; and lack of sufficient new books to stimulate the reading habit. With our present small staff and depleted funds, the lessening of the burden of so great a circulation, has at any rate, enabled us to apportion a more reasonable amount of our time to necessary work, other than the mere handling of books.

The most important piece of work accomplished during the year, was the taking of inventory of all the adult volumes in the library. From August 20th to 27th, the library was closed to facilitate the first steps in the process of stock-taking. Since that time, we have been continually checking and rechecking for volumes which did not turn up in the initial survey. With some degree of accuracy, we are able, now, to report that our library contains 12,572 volumes in the Adult section. The Boys' and Girls' room is supposed to possess 3,147 volumes, but until the same process of inventory is applied to this section we cannot expect this number to be correct.

During the time of inventory, the Boys' and Girls' Room was redecorated, a light, bright yellow colour taking the place of the drab grey of the walls. This was a great and much needed improvement.

Work during the year in the Boys' and Girls' Room, included a Valentine play and programme, arranged and directed by Miss Ethel Adams, head of the department. A "Parachute Contest" took place in June, July and August, which helped to hold the children's interest and augment the slack summer circulation. Early in the year, classes from the various public schools of the city visited the library with their teachers. As a result, we have had more co-operation with the teachers and increased interest on the part of the children. In addition to this work, Miss Adams is to be commended for her wise selection of children's books.

In the matter of library publicity, I should like to thank the Ontario Intelligencer for its very generous reports of our activities and for space given for our "Library Corner." Further publicity was given through addresses which Miss Adams and I delivered during the year, to several organizations and clubs in the city. We have also endeavoured to link up various lectures given on educational subjects, by preparing book lists.

Last summer witnessed the inauguration of a reserve system for non-fiction. We have been able to carry on with this, and it has been greatly appreciated by our patrons.

The Duplicate Pay collection continues to be patronized. In 1934, $44.46 was invested in books, and rentals to the amount of $104.88 were collected.

794 persons became library members during the year, and 304 names were withdrawn from the register. We now have 7718 borrowers, listed.

We owe a debt of gratitude to Miss Merry, head of the English Department of the Collegiate for her constructive interest in the library. It was her suggestion that some of her pupils direct short plays, here, using small library borrowers as actor-material. The first of these plays "Six Peas While the Lentils Boil," under the direction of Jean Bankier was most successful, and another is being rehearsed at present. A group at the Collegiate under the name of "The Pen Club" and under Miss Merry's able guidance, have been contributing many of our library corners. This connection between the Collegiate and the library is a most valuable one, and a real work is being accomplished.

Also, we have to thank Floyd Henry for his interesting contributions to the "Library Corner."

Miss Kathryn Gallagher left in September to attend the Ontario Library School at Toronto. We hope to have her back with us at the completion of the term in June of this year. Meanwhile, Miss Olive Delaney has been doing very good work in Miss Gallagher's place, as has also, Miss Frances Lazier, who had been working short periods each day, in addition to supply time. Miss Stewart Masson has contributed some valuable work while gaining experience in the Boys' and Girls' Room. A "well done" may also be said to Alfred Woodhouse, Caretaker, for the way in which he has kept the building and premises.

With regard to work for this year, my plans include a completion of the inventory by checking the volumes in the Juvenile section, cataloguing our government documents, and forming a Canadian section. For the government documents, I would think it advisable to build shelving in the upstairs hall, and procuring a locked case for the Canadian collection. A reorganization of our registration of borrowers is also in my plans.

I wish to extend my thanks to this Board for all the kindness and consideration which each member has shown to me. It has been a pleasure to work with and for you in the interests of the community.

Yours very truly,
Margaret Z. White,
Librarian.

SILVERWARE FOR GLEN ROSS TEAM TAKE ZIONS HILL

Win Round of Two Game Series by One Goal

ROUGH CONTEST

Provincial Police Finally Called to Restore Order

STIRLING, March 11—(Special)—On Friday evening, March 8, Glen Ross won the cup, symbolic of the championship of the Centre Hockey League when they took the round by the score of 2-1, over the stalwart Zion's Hill team in two hectic struggles before a record crowd. The final game, played in a packed arena was a knockout in more ways than one. Because of the mild weather this game which was scheduled to be played last Tuesday, was postponed until Friday. Zion's appeared on Tuesday night with a large crowd of supporters, determined to play, but when it was at last proved, that the postponement was official, they made no secret of their disapproval and went away in disgust. Zion's having but one defeat against them all season, were the favourites to take the series

Feeling was high as the game got under way, and both teams started at top speed. Townsend, who could out-skate any one on the ice, got the first shot at Hagerman, with the play going up and down the ice at terrific speed, and Zion's having a distinct edge on the play. At last, Townsend, who seemed to be able to go through at will, took a pass from Parks to score for Zion's. This goal tied them on the round, causing many minutes of cheering. With less reason to be cautious, Glen Ross picked up and played better and faster hockey, coming dangerously close on many high speed rushes. The pressure was so great that signs of roughness began to show. Sills drew the first penalty for tripping, and shortly after, Caverly followed him. Glen Ross put on a ganging play, and only the good work of Seeley in the Zion net kept them off the score sheet. Parks was sent off for a trip, and near the end of the period, with Glen Ross playing every man up, Caverly broke away, but was tripped by Brooks, who received the only penalty of the period for Glen Ross. The period ended 1-0 for Zion's and 1-1 on the round. Penalties — Sills, Caverly, Parks and Brooks.

Second Period

With the starting of the second period, Glen Ross settled down to real combination play that kept Zion's guessing. Zion's took it easy and let Glen Ross carry the play to them, while they waited for the breaks. During this splendid combination play, Glen Ross showered Seeley with shots from every angle, making Zion's look a bit ragged. They made a few dangerous rushes, however, and things were hot for Hagerman, until Fraser, Pyear and Scott broke loose on a passing play that resulted in the winning goal by Scott on a pass from Fraser. In the last three games this boy has come through in the pinches to score the all important counter. After the face off Townsend was badly hurt when he collided with the goal post and had to leave the ice for repairs. With Townsend off, Glen Ross was superior in every play, but just couldn't score. Townsend returned to the game and a deafening cheer went up. His appearance inspired his team mates and play was much faster. Fraser got the gate for tripping, and was followed by Parks. The period ended with Zion's pressing hard, and Hagerman in the Glen Ross net working overtime to hold the score to 1-1 and 2-1 for Glen Ross on the round. Penalties—F. Fraser and Parks.

Last Period

Shortly after the face off, Townsend began to rough it, drawing a penalty for boarding Armstrong. That started them all, body checking and tripping. Butt ends were so numerous that Referee Barrett was unable to catch them all. Play was all for Glen Ross until Townsend returned to the ice. A few minutes later he was chased again for butt ending Scott. He didn't like this and showed his disgust by taking a pass at G. Fraser as he left the ice. This increased his penalty to three minutes. The game as a hockey match was finished right there and turned into a battle royal. Play proceeded to the Glen Ross end where Sills and Armstrong squared off, and in ten seconds the ice was a seething mass of fighting humanity. Players and spectators joined in the fray. Noses were reddened and shiners decorated many faces. The riot lasted for several minutes before order could be restored and the ice cleared. The situation became so out of control that Provincial Police were sent for. A half hour or more passed before the play was resumed. Referee Barrett called the players up and laid down the law. The play went on, perhaps a little milder until Townsend returned to the ice. At this time the unfortunate affair occurred. Brooks fell unconscious to the ice and was carried to the dressing room, and later removed to the home of Rev. E. W. Rowland, where he remained for the night.

Feeling was very tense at this moment, and play was held up for another half hour, waiting for the police to arrive. At last the game got under way again with only twelve minutes to go, and Townsend in the pen for five minutes. Glen Ross tried to notch another counter, but the play was slow to end of the game because of this unfortunate affair, and finally ended by 2-1, the 1935 championship and with Glen Ross winning the round the silverware.

Zion's have a great team suffering but one defeat all season. Their chances for taking the cup looked very bright, but penalties are costly. Townsend, who plays great hockey, could have won for his team, but instead he tossed it away by spending nearly a whole period in the penalty box. This display of riot and turmoil was a sad wind up for such a fine season of hockey.

The Line-up

Birthday Party

A very fine evening of entertainment was provided at the home of Mrs. Sarah Hockey on Thursday, March the 7th., in the form of a birthday party given by Mrs. Hockey in honor of her nephew, Mr. Harold Alcombrack of Langley Field, V.A. A significant feature of the party was the fact that it was given in the house in which Mr. Alcombrack was born. The group of guests which included Miss Mary Hulin, Miss Dorothy Hulin, James Hulin, Ernest Cane, Art Duncan, Miss Ella Alcombrack, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hulin; relatives, boyhood friends and school chums.

The early part of the evening was spent in games, contests, and musical numbers, after which a very delicious lunch was served.

The many friends of Mr. Fred Hulin will be glad to see him out again after being confined to his home through illness.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL ON FORGERY CHARGE

Samuel Whittle, Farm Hand, Alleged To Have Endeavored to Pass Cheque

Charged with forgery and attempting to pass worthless cheques Samuel Whittle, Madoc Township farm hand, appeared in the local police court today and had his case enlarged for one week. Whittle was arrested on Front street Saturday afternoon by Detective Izard after, it is alleged, he had endeavored to pass a worthless cheque for goods ordered at Goodman's store. At the time of arrest Whittle had in his possession another cheque, which police say, was also forged in Whittle's favor for the sum of $8.50. The initial cheque was for $52.50.

According to police authorities, Whittle is alleged to have endeavored to pass the larger cheque in a local grocery, but without success. Subsequently he presented the cheque for payment of wearing apparel purchased at Goodman's to the amount of $20.00. The salesman became suspicious and excused himself for the moment, going to the telephone and calling the police, without arousing the suspicion of the purchaser. Upon his return to the customer, however, the man had disappeared. Later Detective Izard arrived upon the scene and was given a description of the man. After scouring Front street for some time Whittle was arrested near the corner of Bridge and Front streets where he was awaiting a taxi, police state. When apprehended Whittle was found in possession of a second cheque made out in his favor. Both cheques were apparently written in the same hand-writing, police authorities announced today.

Whittle appeared in local police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. today. The accused man was not asked to plead, Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., requesting a week's enlargement in order that a further check-up on Whittle's activities and possible past record might be procured. Whittle was held without bail and lodged in the county jail.

TARIFF DUTIES MUST BE PAID

Bringing in of Foodstuffs From Canada Had Officials Fooled

Buffalo, N.Y., March 11 (AP) — A sudden wave of "tourists" returning from Canada with large purchases of foodstuffs had the United States Customs here fooled for a while in recent weeks.

Now, however, Buffalo housewives who try to take advantage of lower food prices in Canada and the ruling, that citizens may bring into the country duty free up to $100 worth of purchases must pay the tariff duties on their "imports."

These duties are high enough to keep Americans buying at home. Butter prices have been as much as 15 cents a pound lower, and eggs about 10 cents a dozen cheaper in Canada than in the United States. But the duty on butter is 14 cents a pound and on eggs 10 cents a dozen.

MANY PROPOSALS MADE BY STEVENS

Suggest Federal Trade and Industry Commission For Canada

Ottawa, March 11—(CP)—Suggestion for establishment of a federal trade industry commission today was before the people of Canada.

The body, proposed by Hon. H. H. Stevens, would be responsible for administration of all laws pertaining to commerce and industry. It would act as a referee of disputes between competitors and between industry and the public. It would function, very much in the way the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners acts. As a referee between public utilities companies and public.

The former Minister of Trade and Commerce also wants put into operation a construction scheme involving housing, slum clearance and restoration of existing buildings. He urges, in addition, a reafforestation plan.

Proposals of Mr. Stevens were made in an address here last night in which he asked the youth of the country to join in the solution of problems of the day by correcting the existing system in a "practical way, step by step." He spoke under the auspices of the Federation of Youth over a coast-to-coast network of Canadian Radio Commission.

Greek Royalists State Rebels Withdraw From Seres

(Copyright 1935, by the Associated Press)

Athens, March 11.—Government sources said today rebel forces, battered by government artillery, withdrew from their strongly fortified position in the town of Seres.

News of the insurgents' reported withdrawal was made public at the same time the Government was informed the rebel cruiser Helle had been abandoned in the Port of Kavalla by the officers and their followers.

These were compelled to remain on board when the vessel was captured by rebels at the start of the uprising.

The rebels' withdrawal from Seres was said to have taken place at 7.30 a.m. local time, (12.30 a.m., E.S.T.) as the government troops were preparing to launch a simultaneous attack from three points west of the insurgents' line.

At the same time a secondary engagement was reported to have taken place west of Struma River.

Casualties 4,000

Unofficial reports said the casualties of the last 48 hours total 4,000 for both sides.

The government forces moved somewhat more cautiously today than yesterday, when the rebels after a day-long retreat, suddenly rallied seven miles from Seres and checked the Loyalists' advance.

Official communiques from General George Kondylis, commanding the Government troops, indicated hopes, that utter rout and quick surrender of the rebels are now somewhat dim. Instead, the General's advices suggesting guerilla warfare lasting several weeks may eventuate in place of the hoped for decisive battle.

Some observers regarded the rebels' retreat and sudden last-ditch stand yesterday as all part of the strategy of wily General Kamenos, insurgent commander-in-chief. It was suggested the rebels may have fallen back to compel the Government to waste valuable ammunition and at the same time preserve their own strength.

The Government fleet, numbering seven destroyers, six torpedo boats and two submarines, was ready to assume the offensive against the "Venizelist Navy", which the Government has designated the "pirate fleet". A decisive engagement was seen as a possibility today.

George, nautical, (and often naughty) boy Prince

ALWAYS it was the sea with the two sons of Edward and Alexandra; even before they were old enough to become cadets they showed an aptitude and a desire to become sailors.

The pictures above, for instance, show Prince George (right) as a lad of six attired in sailor's uniform. Note the twinkling look of mischief in his eye. He looks as though he would dearly love to play some prank on the photographer.

When Prince George was twelve, he and his brother, Prince Albert Victor, then heir to the throne, became naval cadets on the Brittanhia at Spithead. There they were accorded the same treatment as the other cadets.

Prince George loved it—perhaps even more than Prince Albert Victor. In the veins of the future king flowed the blood of Viking ancestors, for his mother, Queen Alexandra, was from Denmark, land of the Vikings.

During the two years on the Brittania Prince George won for himself the reputation for high spirits, ready wit and tremendous activity.

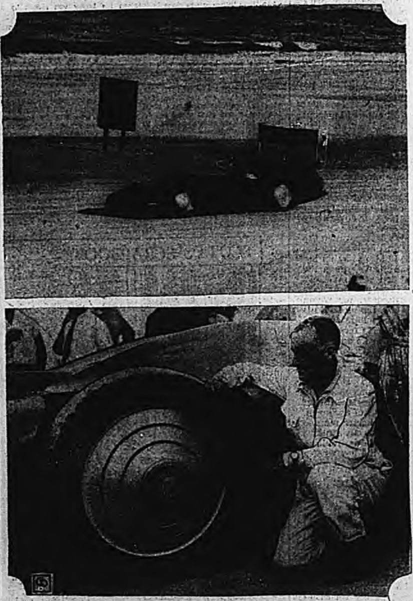
But his excess vigor was always held in check by the staid sobriety of his brother. Different in temperament, the two brothers nevertheless maintained a deep attraction for each other all during the short life of Prince Albert Victor.

The photograph at left, above, shows Prince George at the age of 15 as a young midshipman aboard the Bacchante, to which ship he was transferred after his aprenticeship aboard the Brittania. The brothers left on a long voyage on the Bacchante in 1879 and lived as all sailors live for three years on a cruise of more than 56,000 miles. It had a remarkable effect on the later life of Prince George, one day to be known as the "Sailor King."

A member of the ship's crew, describing the life on board the Bacchante, says: "I have seen King George mixed up in a heap of marines, stokers, and blue jackets, who had stumbled over each other in the gangway, enjoying it just as much as those who were down with them and pulling himself free with all his might."

Admiral Sir Charles Scott was the captain of the Bacchante throughout the cruise, and the first officer was Admiral Sir Assheton Curzon Howe. To the latter it is said the princes owed a great deal of the seaman's knowledge they gained at this time.

TIRES RUINED AS CAMPBELL SET RECORD



Conquering the hazards of a rough beach, which for days delayed his efforts, Sir Malcolm Campbell finally sent his monster Bluebird hurtling down Daytona Beach, Fla., to a new world land speed record. His average speed for two runs was over 276 miles per hour. Top picture is an actual photo of Bluebird on the north run roaring at 281 miles an hour, the fastest Campbell or any other driver has ever run.

Lower: Sir Malcolm inspecting the torn shreds which were all that remained of Bluebird's tires when the run was completed. The rubber cords were literally burned and worn to mere flapping strips by the terrific friction against the sands.

Police News

An even score of transients slumbered in the cell block at the police station over the week end. Eight "knights of the road" were accommodated last night while 12 applied at the sergeant's desk for warm sleeping quarters on Saturday night.

Mr. B. Gerow, Rossmore, complained to the police today the fact that his son's bicycle had been stolen from its parking place, at the lower end of Front St., on Saturday night. The younger Gerow had spent the evening in the city and upon his returning for his "bike", late Saturday night, it was gone. The youth was forced to walk home. The name and description of the bicycle was given the police and a city-wide search is today in progress.

Local police were quite busy over the week end, investigating numerous minor cases, including a serious motor accident and also investigating, with success, the passing of worthless cheques in the city on Saturday.

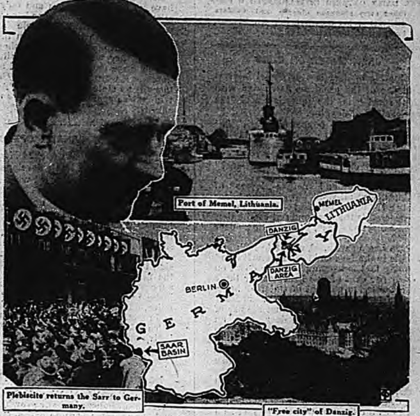
SAAR VICTORY SPURS REICH EXPANSION



Plebiscite returns the Sarr to Germany.

"Free city" of Danzig.

Amid the triumphant rejoicing over the Saar's return to Germany in the recent plebiscite, Realmleader Adolf Hitler and his Nazi aids are reported seeking new colonial laurels. The city of Memel, detached from the Reich after the world war was taken over by Lithuania, may, be next to feel Nazi expansion by means of the newest Hitler "weapon", the plebiscite ballot box. Thousands of Memel Germans are appealing to the League of Nations to authorize an election so they can declare their desire for reunion. The "Free port" of Danzig, also severed from the Reich, may, too, be co-ordinated by "plebiscite" if Nazi plans for "pushing to the east" are carried out.

WIDOW WAS LOYAL

"Baby Doe" Tabor, 81-year-old widow of the U.S. Senator H. A. W. Tabor, Colorado silver king, who died in poverty in her shack near Leadsville, Colo., frozen to death, is to be buried beside the man she married in Washington, D.C., with President Arthur and cabinet members in attendance. Collapse of the silver market in 1893 cost Tabor his $11,000,000 fortune, but his once beautiful wife remained with him in poverty until his death.

POLICE COURT

The city's exchequer was materially increased in today's police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., when a number of local motorists pleaded guilty to operating motor vehicles without first procuring an individual operator's licence and various other infractions of the H.T.A. Fifty dollars in fines as well as minimum costs in such matters were imposed and collected by the court. Six local residents all appeared facing different charges, three confessed to driving without a permit, one pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless driving, while a fifth admitted allowing an unlicensed driver to drive his truck while he was ill. All fines were paid.

Chas. Dean pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication, it was the third charge of such a nature read to Dean in the past four months. The minimum sentence of three months, without the option of a fine, was imposed by the court.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

The diet in epileptic conditions is highly important in the treatment. Ordinary table salt should be restricted. This does not mean that salt should not be added to the food, while it is cooked, and in order to make it palatable. A minimum amount should, however, be used and no salt added after the food is served at table. Meats and other protein foods should likewise be restricted.

NAZI TAKE OVER SAAR BASIN

Die Saar ist frei
Heil dem Führer!

Celebrating their hour of triumph as they took over administration of the Saar territory following victory in the January plebiscite, German soldiers march to the city hall at Saarbruecken, the capital, for a monster gathering. Crowds salute the marching soldiers and the banners which read: "THE SAAR IS FREE! HAIL THE LEADER!" The leader was Adolph Hitler, who addressed the huge crowd. He can be seen (INSET) standing erect as he lauded the Saar's "hour of freedom" to the massed throng below.

"WINE-NOT" LET THEM AGE IN WATER"

JACK MINER ON DOGS

Hunting of deer is a perennial interest and one of the problems associated with this sport is the question of the advisability of dogging.

Jack Miner, the famous naturalist, has taken up the matter and expressed his views and finally puts the question into this form of dilemma, "More Dogs and Less Deer?" or "No Doge and More Deer?"

Mr. Miner says:—

"As hunters and nature lovers of Ontario, we all want to see the deer increase, then the first thing to be considered is the deer and not the hunter, such being the case, is dogging deer right?

"To begin with, I want to look all people in the face and I say I know it is not the dog that is keeping the deer down on ninety per cent of this Province for there is not over ten percent of Ontario being hunted for deer by sportsmen, because of the wolf. But I do say that the use of dogs is a handicap to the deer and an assistance to the average hunter on the small portion we are hunting on. As a rule, the men who are holding out most firmly for the dog are aged men like myself, but the question is, is it right?

"Being a lover of dogs, deer dogs, coon dogs, bird dogs and everything but fighting dogs, I feel justified in expressing my views as a citizen of Ontario. In fact as a boy I would have my deer dog sleep on my bed if mother had allowed it, but she, dear soul, in her humorous English accent said, "No, it is not 'ealthy for a dog to sleep in our house.

"In the first place, I know it is wrong because it is taking an unfair advantage of the deer and while I know there are lots of men like myself that are thrilled when they hear the dogs coming. Personal thrills teach me this, but today the great majority of hunters are using the dog to get the deer. I say, leave the dog at home and let the deer increase, and we will all get our bucks the same as they do in other places such as Pennsylvania, Nova Scotia and Michigan, where they don't allow dogs and have got the deer to get.

"Another question I want to ask you is where has deer increased where dogs are allowed? Such being the case and we all agree that we want to see deer increase, then why allow the dog? There is only one answer to that question and that is get the deer which helps keep the deer from increasing. Yes, I know your answer will be "We might as well have them as the wolves." This is only a reasonable excuse you can advance, but remember, two wrongs will never make one right.

"Every fair thinking hunter will admit this, that at this season of the year, every mother deer should have the quietest month of her life if we expect them to increase. No, indeed, at this time of year especially she should not be run until she is terrorized and nearly exhausted and eventually swim the ice-cold lake for safety. If this is healthy for them, why do we not see at this time of year, more does swimming in this water voluntarily? You seldom see them go in to even cross the river, in fact they will walk a mile to go to rapids where they can wade across. Yes, I will admit that the bucks will cross a lake at this season of the year, but when he does, you can depend on it that there is a doe on the other side of the lake.

"In or about 1898 or 1899 deer became so scarce in Essex County through county being thickly settled and being hunted accordingly, the Ontario Government kindly prohibited the shooting of deer for ten years and although I don't believe there were twenty-five deer left, because I hunted foxes without dogs through this county, which enabled me to have a good idea, with the result that the deer became quite numerous on this limited wild territory, but one year before the closed season expired two or three camps of Indians and their usual amount of unnecessary dogs moved into the heart of this deer settlement and the deer were terrorized and driven to the ends of the earth, and the odd one killed nearly twenty miles away. The last one I have any pesronal knowledge of was seen out in Lake Erie, when two honorable farmers took a row boat and rope and went out and brought it ashore and placed it in a box-stall but it died that night.

"In Newfoundland the dog question is quite a serious one, so much so that in some parts of the country, no person is allowed to even keep one, the result is that the side hills are grazed off by sheep and have become perfect sheep pastures, and instead of the average settler keeping dogs, he has a small flock of branded sheep. How they winter them I do not know, but I saw them by the thousands in the month of June. Other parts where dogs are allowed, that is all they have. There are thousands of farmers in Ontario today that would be raising sheep, were it not for dogs. Which is most valuable to a needy people?

"MORE DOGS AND LESS DEER?
OR
"NO DOGS AND MORE DEER?

"Far as I am concerned as a citizen, I wish to say if we want our deer to increase as it has been proven they will in other parts of North America where they have no wolves, no dogs and only bucks allowed to be shot, sooner or later we will copy their successful example and our children will see the day when they will neither want dogs nor want to shoot does because they will be able to easily shoot two or three ten point bucks and be back home in a week, if they see fit, because there is no state or province in America with such opportunities as our Ontario affords."

BANK OF CANADA OPENS

The Bank of Canada opened Monday in Ottawa. This is the latest development of the trend which has been at work for the past fifteen years or more.

The Bank while operating and performing what is calculated to be very important duties will not cause a ripple in the financial world because its duties are so technical and it is not a bank in the sense of the commercial bank. The one sign to most people of the existence of the new financial institution will be the appearance of Bank of Canada notes instead of the commercial chartered bank notes, which will slowly be withdrawn and replaced by the Bank of Canada notes.

The Bank of Canada does not deal with individuals but only with the Banks and the Government.

HOUSING SCHEME REVELATIONS

After the World War there was a shortage of houses in many growing cities and the builders became extremely busy, with the result that the accommodation caught up with the demand. Most of this construction work was done at the instance of individuals and the proper types of dwelling houses, flats and apartment buildings were erected. In some instances, contractors kept on building and overshot the mark, with temporary loss to themselves. As far as they were concerned, the condition righted itself without aid from taxpayers. They were housing schemes, however, entered upon at the behest of enthusiastic persons with a mission but no means of their own to risk. They talked of ideal cottages rather than the flats that many of the home-seekers desired. Other people's money was the basis of these ventures, and when they came to grief municipalities concerned had often to bear the loss. There were such failures in Quebec and other provinces, and some of the bills are being paid yet, no doubt. And the enthusiasts faded out of the picture.

The Parliamentary Housing Committee at Ottawa is at present hearing some interesting evidence regarding housing schemes of the days immediately following the war. The Ontario Housing Act of 1919 as it affected Ottawa was explained the other day by Mr. G. P. Gordon, finance commissioner of the city. He dwelt particularly on the scheme at Lindenlea, a suburb of the city, and his testimony showed that the vesture had been a costly one for the taxpayers. Many of the houses, he testified, had been poorly built, with subsequent dissatisfaction to purchasers. Ottawa had to make a debenture issue to carry out its undertakings which resulted in an annual tax levy of $3,610 untl 1942. From 1919 to 1934, testified Mr. Gordon, the ratepayers of Ottawa had to raise $332,500 to assist the scheme. In his estimation, failure of the project had been due to faulty construction, many of the houses being without verandahs, front steps and double windows. One house had actually fallen apart, due to having no basement. There was laxity in building inspection, and this was so flagrant that some of the purchasers of the houses camped on the scene in order to ensure satisfactory results. As late as 1930 there were defalcations by an official to the amount of $82,000, for which the culprit went to jail. That however, did not help the taxpayers.

According to Mr. J. F. White (Conservative, London), the experience in that Ontario city had not been unlike Ottawa's, "even to the point of defalcations." Some witnesses stated that the housing schemes had not failed elsewhere, at Winnipeg, for example, where, said Mr. Heaps. M. P., the housing commission had built 721 houses since 1919, and "each year had shown a slight surplus." The revelations so far serve to prove that extreme care needs to be exercised in any such public undertakings if work is not to be scamped and mosey wasted, to the distress of the taxpayers. Their plight these days is bad enough in the best of circumstances wthout making it worse.—Montreal Gazette.

MY HOUSE

The house that I would dwell in?
It may be low or tall,
It may be built of rushes
Or with a marble wall;
If it stand isolated
Or on a thoroughfare
Where many feet go hourly,
I shall not greatly care.

The house which is my dwelling
May be on moor or hill,
In land where summer lingers
Or winds are ever chill.
All these things will not carry
A feather's weight with me;
But my house must have windows
That open to the sea!

For I would rise at morning
And watch the red sun lift
From out the tossing waters
Beyond the sea-weeds' drift,
And I would gaze at twilight
Across the opal tide;
My house must look to seaward
With windows open wide!

GOOD EVENING! The Great Family Journal speaking. We like to tell the neighbors about the gold mine which is open to all business men of Belleville and vicinity—the Open Sesame is Advertising. We hear every day of amazing results from advertising in the G.F.J.—amazing that is to folks who are not as familiar as we are with the sure fire touch of newspaper advertisements. Just today an advertiser burst in on us with enthusiasm, telling of wonderful returns from a small advertisement recently run in this newspaper. You've got to tell 'em to sell 'em. But those who should be regular advertisers are the hardest to sell, sometimes. We tell 'em, but perhaps they think that's part of our job and the tellin' isn't as sellin' as it should be. However, just ask us the names of folks who are proving the value of persistent publicity by direct results through dull seasons and busy seasons—talk with those who know. Every day some pleased advertiser tells us of success through advertising—and there are many who just take the success and say nothing.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON entered business as manager of a small meat and provision store owned by his parents in Scotland. He later branched out for himself and putting all his profits into publicity eventually was owner of many stores and many millions of pounds sterling. One of his publicity methods was to personally wait upon the first customer of each new store opened. His publicity program, of course, centered in newspaper advertising but he pulled many spectacular stunts such as having elephants draw through the streets a cargo of tea just arrived for the Lipton store. He would also buy up big fat porkers and parade them through the streets wtih sides painted with messages telling the world that these prime porkers were for Lipton's customers, for whom the best was not too good. Lipton kept his business constantly in the public eye and never permitted the public to forget him. When business was light he advertised heavy, consequently there never were any dull days in Lipton stores.

NEW SOCIAL SYSTEMS advocated have a corner stone of keeping money in circulation—reviving the ancient belief that money is simply a means of exchange, a simplification of the old barter method—not for hoarding. If everyone's future was assured and it was more desirable to spend money than to save it—boy what a business there would be.

ADVERTISEMENT APPEARED in this newspaper recently stating that the Government would be pleased to learn of any alleged fraud or sharp practice in connection with the sale of stocks and bonds locally, information to be supplied Crown Attorney Donnan. Two ladies who read that advertisement profitted by it to the extent of $1,500 each, having turned over stocks to this amount to a high pressure salesman who was to exchange them for high interest paying securities or insecurities. They received nothing until after reading the advertisement they communicated with Crown Attorney Donnan who set the wheels in motion and the original securities were recovered and turned over to them. It pays to read the advertisements.

YOUR HABITS REVEAL YOUR PERSONALITY

Endeavor to Make Habits Express Your True Self

Nothing is more pernicious than the belief that habits, once they are formed, cannot be changed. That's the philosophy to which the "ne'er do well", the failures, the disappointed and the cynical adhere. It's one of these self-satisfying explanations that lets a person down easy; that serves as a ready excuse and a soothing anodyne for faults that should have been corrected long since.

Habits are automatic reactions which an individual acquires in order that he may function quickly and spontaneously. The person, for instance, who drinks water every time he sees it will soon form the habit and will drink without giving thought to what he is doing.

Habits, therefore are valuable, because they permit us to respond and to harmonize with the world about us with the least possible friction. They make life easier for us. We do not have to think out every step of our way when habits are established.

And habits, of course, are established early in life. Many, indeed, are set down before the fifth year. Does this imply necessarily that old habits cannot be changed— that being firmly fixed in the very fabric of our character make-up, they are sure to last as long as the brain functions?

The answer is a decided and emphatic "No."

Habits can be changed and modified, even rooted out completely, no matter how long they have been in existence; no matter how much they have been in use.

For, let us hasten to add, there are good habits as well as bad ones. There are habits that are constructive—regularity in eating, sleeping and reaction—and there are those, like excessive smoking or carousing that tear us down.

Thus we can endeavor to root out a bad habit by mere exercise of the will power. If this fails, we can substitute a good habit for a bad one—or, to put it another way, we can neutralize the pernicious effects of a bad habit by establishing in the brain new thought and action patterns of a beneficent character.

But there is no time limit as to when these things can be done. It is never too late to turn over the proverbial "new leaf" where habits are concerned.

There is no gainsaying that the older we get the more difficult it is to establish new habits and get rid of those which have been with us for years. That does not mean, however, that it can't be done.

If your habits are getting you into trouble, if they are not expressing your true self, change them until they make you what you want to be. If you have allowed yourself to fall into unfortunate habits, break them up!

Gain poise, stability and a strong dynamic personality by allowing only those habits to remain which will push you forward to the achievement of all the values you have desired and cherished all your life.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE IS LAID

Cobourg, March 11—Joseph Gauthier of Gerrard Street East, Toronto, was charged with manslaughter on Saturday night, in connection with the death of Hugh McGovern, district farmer, who died after an accident on Saturday when his buggy was struck by a car said to have been driven by Gauthier. He was remanded until Saturday in custody.

Two of his companions who were in the car, W. Flynne and William Britt, of Toronto, are being held on vagrancy charges, and the fourth, Frank Kelly, is being detained on a drunk charge.

Coroner Dr. W. Wilkins opened an inquest on Saturday evening and it was adjourned until Friday night. McGovern, who was 70 years of age, had been driving his horse and buggy to Cobourg late Saturday afternoon when it was struck, it is alleged, by Gauthier's car, which was going in the same direction. He was removed to Cobourg Hospital where he died shortly afterwards from a fractured skull. He is survived by two brothers and a sister.

MOVIE COMPANIES COMPETE FOR 'STAR'

Paris, March 11 — Born within sound of shot and shell in 1917, on the Western Front, beyond Bethune, near Fosse 9, a young French girl is now the centre of another international contest—a contest for her services.

Mlle. Simon recently told an interviewer that she probably would accept a British offer rather than an American one, because London was nearer home than Hollywood—and, because a war baby, born in a British sector of the line, ought to become a British film star.

Defeat Toronto and Detroit on Successive Nights

HEADS SECTION

Conacher of Leafs Sure of Honors of Leading Scorers

(By A. E. Fulford, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Inspired by the leadership of the great Eddie Shore, Boston Bruins are on their way to the National Hockey League title series. There was little doubt left about that today after Bruins had whipped Toronto Maple Leafs and Detroit Red Wings over the week-end, leaving Chicago three points behind with four games to play.

There was no doubt at all that Bruins, if they do win the American Division, will give Toronto a tooth-and-nail fight for the championship. With Shore playing hockey as only he can, Bruins came from behind three times Saturday night to whip Leafs 7-4 before 14,213, largest crowd of the season in Toronto.

Then Boston went into Detroit Sunday night and defeated Wings 2-1, with Shore scoring the winning goal in overtime. Their pairs of wins gave them an edge that Black Hawks, who tied New York Rangers 1-1 last night, probably will find it impossible to overcome.

The week-end battling served to wipe the last chance of any change in the International section, leaving Toronto, Montreal, Maroons and Canadiens finishing in that order. Bruins, Hawks and Rangers will represent the American division.

Tied Score Three Times

Tommy Gorman's Maroons gave up hope of catching Toronto Leafs when they were beaten 4-2 last night in New York by Americans. Canadiens lost 5-3 to Detroit in Montreal Saturday night and Rangers beat Eagles at St. Louis 5-1 in their best showing lately.

Bruins tied up the score three times in the first two periods of the game with Leafs and then swept in for four goals in the third. Marty Barry and Charlie Sands each scored a pair and "Hay" Haynes, Shore and Dit Clapper got the others.

Charlie Conacher bagged a goal and an assist to bring his total points to 53, one more than he made last season. Buzz Boll, Harvey Jackson and Pep Kelly scored the other three.

Bruins topped off a good season series with Wings last night, their win giving them five victories and a tie in their six meetings. Tired after their Toronto game, Bruins fell back on a defensive game after Dit Clapper gave them a lead in the first on a shot, that went in off a Wing's leg.

Johnny Sorrell tied it up in the third on a passing play with Cooney Welland and Herb Lewis. After five minutes of overtime Shore got the winning goal on a pass from Red Beatttie.

Detroit had shown better form in Montreal the night before. They led Canadiens at all times but were never so far ahead they could be sure of victory. Syd Howe and Johnny Sorrell led their marksmen, Howe getting two goals and Sorrell a goal and two assists. Lewis and Bucko McDonald got the others. Aurel Joliat, veteran left winger, scored twice for Habitants, and Leroy Goldsworthy notched the third.

Boucher Looks Good

Frank Boucher, Ranger centre, looked good in the victory over St. Louis, scoring a goal and two assists. Rangers got three tallies in the first two periods before Joe Lamb brought Eagles into the picture with his early third period goal.

Earl Seibert, Lynn Patrick, Cecil Dillon and Bill Cook joined Boucher as Ranger scorers.

Dillon and Young Patrick combiner for the goal that gave the New Yorkers a tie at Chicago. Dillon scoring after almost six minutes of the third period. Howie Morenz had given Hawks a goal lead in the second. Fresher, Hawks held the upper hand all the way and bombarded Davie Kerr from all angles.

With Roy Worters performing splendidly in goal, Americans were too much for Maroons at New York. It was their first triumph over the Montrealers in five games this season.

Old Rabbit McVeigh gave the New Yorkers a lead in the first period and after Herb Cain tied it up Fred Hergerts put them in front again. In the third Obs Heximer and Art Chapman scored for Joe Simpson's team before Cain could notch his second Maroon counter.

Basketball Roundup

(By the Canadian Press)

Three Assumption College basketball teams, senior, junior and intermediates and performing respectively in Toronto, St. Thomas and London, Saturday night, met defeat but today at least two of the teams were preparing for bigger and better things in the Ontario Amateur Basketball Association play-offs.

At St. Thomas, the Y.M.C.A. Grads won the second game of the Junior semi-final round 29-21, but the score was not large enough to wipe out the margin of Assumption's 31-16 victory on their own floor a week ago. Consequently, Assumption juniors today were ready to enter the finals for the Provincial Championship.

The senior team, outclassed by a seemingly inspired Danforth S.M.C. squad at Toronto, was getting ready to overcome the 12-point advantage gained by Danforth and to snatch victory from defeat next Saturday when the two teams clash again at Windsor in the second game of the Senior semi-finals. Saturday night's score was 43-31 and Assumption's first defeat in 19 starts.

At London, however, the Assumption Bees were squelched. London Y Aces administered a second defeat 33-28, won the two-game round by 18 points and were ready to enter the second round of the Intermediate O.A.B.A. playdowns. They had won the first game at Windsor, 37-24. Saturday night's game was rough. Thirty-four personal fouls were spotted by the Referee.

TECUMSEHS IN TIE

(By the Canadian Press)

It wouldn't take a blanket of very large proportions to cover the first five teams in the International Hockey League race today with a tie for first place and three teams occupying the second berth.

London Tecumsehs remain locked at the top with Detroit Olympics after dropping a 3-1 decision to Syracuse Stars Sunday night and losing to Buffalo Bisons 3-2 Saturday. Victory put the Buffalo outfit in the thick of the fight to retain second place.

The Syracuse win lifted the Stars into a tie with Buffalo and Cleveland earned a 4-2 decision over Windsor Bulldogs to make the second-place race three cornered.

Windsor trails the league, 12 points behind the second place outfits.

Allan Cup Playdowns

Playdowns trails — the pathways that lead to elimination or the Allan Cup—grew hot today. Only one Provincial champion has been declared however.

The lone sectional titleholder is the Kimberley, B.C., team champions of the Pacific Coast. In Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, Senior squads are embroiled in the struggle to declare Provincial representatives in Allan Cup frays.

The fight between Toronto Stars and Hamilton Tigers is stalemated after two games in their efforts to declare a Senior Ontario Hockey Association Champion. Saturday's game resulted in a 1-1 tie and last Wednesday neither team scored. They meet again Tuesday and Friday.

Brockville Magedomas, O.H.A. Senior "B" winners move into Northern Ontario Wednesday and Friday to meet the winners of the N.O.H.A. finals. At present Sudbury hold a 5-1 advantage in their two game series with Kirkland Lake Millionaires. The second game remains to be played before Magedomas invade the north for their two game series against the winners.

Winners of the Northern Senior "B" struggle will meet the Senior "A" victor for the right to represent Ontario in the Allan Cup race.

Falcons in Manitoba

Montreal Royals enjoy a two game advantage in their best three out of five series with Ottawa Senators for championship of the Montreal Senior group, which carries with it the Senior Championship of Quebec Province. Royals defeated Senators 7-3 Saturday after skating to a draw in the first game and winning the second last week.

Winnipeg Falcons took a strong hold on the Manitoba title by getting a 4-2 win Saturday over San Antonio Mines in the first of a three-game series. They play again tonight and the winners of the series will meet Port Arthur Bearcats, champions of Thunder Bay.

Saskatchewan's finals start tonight with Weyburn Beavers, champions of the south engaging North Battleford Beavers, Northern champions. Beavers defeated Yorkton-Melville 6-2 Saturday to win the two-game-total-goal Southern series 11-3.

Edmonton Superiors and Coleman Canadians play their deciding game of their best two-out-of-three series for the Alberta title tonight. Superiors won the first game 6-1 and then Coleman came back Saturday to win the second match 54.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

At considerable expense of those in charge the annual Belleville post season hockey loop was launched over the weekend with the Burrows and Robertson trophies being the object of competition. On Saturday Walker Grills, sponsor of the Grills' Garage sextette informed the city league officials, that his club had been the last winners of these cups and this league and he considered that his team should be recognized as defenders of the cups. The executive readily agreed with Mr. Grills and he was invited into the fold, to defend his honors. Madoc, from the Northern League and Picton from the Prince Edward County also signified their intentions of challenging for the trophy as did the Trenton "Imperials". All arrangements for this series have been completed and a double header will be presented at the Arena on Tuesday night. The draw brings together Grills and Trenton in the first game, while Madoc and Picton will clash in the nightcap affair. These teams represent the strongest relative strength of their districts and such a series should provide plenty of keen competition.

With the semi-annual meeting of the C. O. B. L. just five days in the offing, the Belleville Nationals should soon call an executive meeting to appoint their delegates. being invited from the four clubs composing the loop, Oshawa, Peterboro, Kingston and Belleville. In all probability Ærnie Gibbard, Napanee's baseball sponsor, will again be invited into the fold. For the past two years the C.O.B.L. has endeavoured to induce the Gibbards into their organization without avail. Following the recent announcements from Picton and Kingston relating to their refusal of playing intermediate "A" ball it naturally leaves the Napanee outfit in a rather embarrassing position, they having a team and apparently no league berth. The local Stewart Warner-Alemite ball club recently announced their intentions of placing a ball club in intermediate "A" competition, but on paper it appears as though the Alemites and Gibbards are the only teams of "A" calibre in this part of the province. With this thought in mind would it not be an excellent idea to have the Gibbards throw their lot in with the Central loop and the two local teams amalgamate into one strong senior team?

In order to show the relative strength in the three outside C. O. B. L. clubs, Peterboro, Oshawa and Kingston we might point out, that each and every one of those teams have materially strengthened their last season's team, thus demonstrating that the local senior club will have to bolster considerably to keep pace with the times. Knotty Lee brought a pitcher, two infielders and a slugging outfielder into Peterboro recently. Oshawa have a new third baseman named May from Kirkland Lake, and an unnamed shortstop to add to their last year's team, while two of their last years' juniors were fine senior prospects. Down in Kingston the Ponies have secured the services of "Lefty" Hill of Carleton Place rumors say, while Mickey Compeau and Vin McQuade, the league champion batter of 1933, have returned to Kingston after playing one season with Brockville in the Eastern League. On paper it looks as though the going is surely to be rather tough in the C.O.B.L. and a team expecting to finish in the money will have to be at least fifty per cent stronger than any team in the league last season.

It was recently announced in the sport columns of the Peterboro Examiner that Ernie Gibbard, manager of the champion Napanee Gibbards, would openly publish a letter in that paper explaining his angles relating as to why his intermediate "A" club should not play senior baseball. If Mr. Gibbard would forward us a carbon copy of that letter we would gladly publish the same as it might enlighten local baseball fans also. At the same time the Peterboro sport scribe strongly recommended that the Gibbards should throw their lot in with senior baseball, there-by raising the standard of baseball in the C.O.B.L. and also assure Napanee fans of a better class of ball in that town. In the following two paragraphs the Peterboro sport scribe presents his personal views in the matter; it reads:

> "In the first place, they will be hurting intermediate ball if they stay in that class. Picton has refused to play with them and if either Kingston or Belleville go in with them as intermediates, some senior players will be used on the teams. This will put intermediate players out of the game and will frighten other intermediate teams out of the loop. And if senior players are used, the C.O.B.L. will suffer. And what changed Ernie's mind from last year when he said he'd jump his team to a senior ranking if he won the intermediate "A" O.B.A.A. championship, which he did?
> As for Napanee not being strong enough for senior, didn't they beat Belleville and Kingston easily in exhibition games last year? And might just as well have beaten the Petes only they used a second-string hurler the day our team played them. Those semi-final and final intermediate games showed the Gibbards just as strong as any senior squad in Ontario, and they know it. As for finances, we've been told by folks of whom we've inquired in Napanee that they averaged easily 700 a game for the summer, some gates being small but some ranging from 1200 to 2000 in the playoffs. That's as good or better than Oshawa, Belleville or Kingston did last summer and not far behind the Petes. And a senior team in Napanee against good opposition would draw better than an intermediate one—with fans from as far away as Belleville and Kingston attending. Expenses aren't much higher in senior either, if watched reasonably."

One thing must be admitted, the Deacon A. C. kids surely went down fighting, when the Toronto "Lizzies" eliminated them here on Saturday night. Despite the fact the local kids faced a tremendous obstacle in trying to overcome a 16 point lead, they did themselves noble and were still trying when the final whistle blew. Saturday night's score of 30 to 22 in favour of the Lizzies really does not indicate the play as the locals had tough luck around the baskets, but there is little doubt, which was the better team. The Lizzies showed a better systemized attack and their defence was slightly superior to the Deacons. In all, it was no disgrace to be beaten by Bob Abate's charges, the Lizzies are practically uncrowned junior provincial champions and they will not meet any stronger opposition than the self-same Deacons. With the local juniors eliminated from further basketball competition the local "Y" intermediates now loom on the horizon as Belleville's sole representative in the O.B.A. Coach Ralph Morden received word on Saturday, that a sudden death game, for the group honors, had been ordered between Belleville "Y" and the R.M.C. at Napanee on Wednesday night. (But nobly tried Deacons)

Sergt. Major Wibberley, in command of sports at the Trenton Airport, wrote us today relating to an all-star boxing bout that is to be presented at the Airport on Thursday night of this week. Nine high-class bouts are included on the programme, featuring a go between Howard "Dynamite" Wheeler and Johnny Gorman for the district featherweight championship. Gorman holds the title by virtue of a win over Wheeler and the local mittster is out to regain his lost laurels. On the same programme Bill Crawford tackles Dick Richardson, a new lightweight in these parts.

Birthday greetings to Earl Robinson, high-scoring right winger of Montreal Maroons. Born in Montreal 28 years ago today, he is a hockey product of Strathcona Academy. He turned professional in 1927 and spent several years in minor league company with Philadelphia and Windsor. Earl clicked with Maroons in 1932-33 and has been a good scoring threat ever since.

STUDENTS GET 4 GOAL LEAD ON BRIGHTON

Trenton Hockey Loop Has Reached Final Stage

B. O.'s NOW FOURTH

Will Meet Wooler in Semi-Final Round of Loop

Trenton, March 11 (Special) — The Trenton High School gathered a four goal lead from Brighton on Friday when they won the first game 6-2. In the second game, the Benedict-Proctor won the right to meet Wooler in the semi-finals for the Trenton and District Hockey League when they downed the Carrying Place team 5-3. These teams were tied for fourth place at the close of the chedule.

The first game was somewhat of a surprise, when the students gradually piled up six goals to the Brighton's lone counter until the last minute, when Utronki scored the second. The kids are all eligible for junior hockey another year and have an average weight of 160 pounds. Dadswell opened hostilities, when he beat McKinnon on Allan Lamore's pass soon after the opening gong. The second tally was a beautiful play. Kidd shot and missed but Staples got the rebound but could not get into a scoring position so he passed back to Kidd who scored. Heaney was in twice in a row but could not beat the black and white goalie. Powers counted for Brighton when he shot from the side in the second. Brighton pressed hard but could not beat Gray although they were in several times. Lambert went right through but Gray saved. Just before the period closed Cain and Dadswell combined with the former scoring. The third stanza hardly started, when Dadswell shot from almost the blue line past several players, to count for the scholars. Mitchell and Utronki mixed up a little to get a trip to the penalty box. Smith also got a penalty that left Brighton two short but the students could not score. Allan Lamore counted, when he took the puck from a face-off in the corner, Lamore and Kidd combined to get the sixth for the school off Kidd's stick. Utronki made a nice solo to count the second for the visitors.

Every man on both clubs turned in a fine game to make the contest one of the fastest of the season. They will meet again tonight with Brighton four goals down. The winners will meet the winner of the Wooler-Benedict series for the championship and the Courier-Advocate cup.

Benedict-Proctor 5 Carrying Place 3

On paper the Benedict-Proctor had not a chance to beat the Carrying Place team but the same over-confidence cost them the game and and a chance at the silverware. The Benedicts were short their best goal-getter, Sim Mattis who cracked a rib playing the night before. Norm Wells had his back taped up after wrenching it at work a few days ago. He played and starred for his team even under such a handicap. The visitors from over the canal had the winners on the short end mid-way through the second when the score stood 3-1. The silver-platers scored the only counter in the first period when Bill Miller shot from an almost impossible angle to beat Lamore. Three quick goals in the first of the second looked like the game was almost over for the Benedicts. Vic Willie with two and Norm Johnson scored. The play went up and down with both missing many chances. Miller, Wells and Blakeley combined to get through the entire Carrying Place team and Blakeley scored. Spirited on, the Benedicts pressed hard and soon their efforts were awarded when Miller and Wells went through with Miller getting the equalizer as the period closed. Blakeley got an easy one to put the silver platers in the lead when he scored on a high one that rolled over Lamore's shoulder. The last tally came from Wells when he took a pass from Miller in front of Lamore. The losers seem to bunch up when they are pressing for goals. Johnson, Willie and old John Anderson were the pick of the losers. Miller, Wells and Blakeley played the bulk of the game for the winners with Cotterell doing a fine joo between the posts. The Benedict-Proctor will play a two game series with Wooler, the league leaders, with goals to count on the round.

PRESTON GIRLS MEET WINNIPEG

Earn Right by Defeating P.E.I. Lassies in Two Game Series

Summerside, P. E. I. March 11—(CP)—Having conquered the East, Preston Rivulettes headed westward today to battle for the Canadian Women's Hockey Championship and the Lady Bessborough cup that goes with it.

The sharp-shooting Ontario girls, who defeated Summerside Crystal Sisters 5-1 in a two-game series for the Eastern Canadian title, left here to meet the Winnipeg team in he Dominion finals.

Breezing in with all the confidence in the world Friday, they whitewashed the Crystals 4-0 in the first game of the semi-finals. But they got a little of the confidence knocked out of them Saturday in the second match. Crystals had suffered their first defeat since 119-26 at the hands of visitors, and in a sensational comeback as they held them to a 1-1 tie.

DISTRICT LOOP OPENS TUESDAY

Four Teams Will Compete at Arena For Burrow's Trophy

Bringing together four of the strongest teams in competition, the annual Belleville and District post-season hockey league will open at the Belleville Arena on Tuesday night with a double header, the ultimate winners of which will meet in a sudden death game for the district championship on Thursday of this week. The four teams included are from different parts of the district and embrace teams of championship calibre in their respective community. Madoc, Picton, Trenton and Grills' Garage of Belleville present holders of the district championship, were the four teams invited to compete for the Burrows trophy, that is annually presented to the Belleville and District winners.

Arrangements for this outstanding series were completed by the trustees of the Burrows trophy over the week end, all above named clubs eagerly signifying their willingness to compete in such a proposed series. Despite the mild weather over the week end a keen sheet of ice awaits the gladiators on Tuesday at the Arena.

"LIZZIES" WIN GAME AND ROUND FROM DEACONS

Toronto Cage Team Too Smart For Local Squad

BETTER ATTACK

Brandes, Edwards And Mandel of Visitors Clever Forwards

Carrying too much speed and showing the advantages of a better general knowledge of basketball ability the Toronto "Lizzies" downed the local Deacon A.C. cagers by the score of 30 to 22 here on Saturday night to eliminate the local hoopsters from the junior O.B.A. race, the visitors taking the round by the score of 72 to 48.

Despite the fact the Deacons opened the scoring at the Collegiate before a packed gallery, the more seasoned and polished "Lizzies" soon struck their stride and took command. The first period saw both teams turn in excellent accounts of their endeavours in the matter of protecting their own basket, some fine defensive tactics being in evidence. The "Lizzies" played a more systemized attack and the score stood 9 to 5 for the visitors at the half way mark. Repeatedly the Deacons were out-lucked around the baskets, however, but continued to carry the play with marked success. The final score of 30 to 22 about indicates the play, as the "Lizzies" clearly demonstrated their superior ability and knowledge of the game with their centred attacks especially in the last half.

The "Lizzies" front line of Brandes, Edwards and Mandel carried too much speed and dexterity in their passing for the locals and scored 19 of their team's 30 points, Brandes getting four, Mandel eight and Edwards seven. Himel and Abrsham proved a tower of strength on the Lizzies defence, Himel being the pivot man and directing all plays and scoring three points. Gallander and Novach also played well for the winners.

Art Cole lead all scorers of the night notching ten points to the credit of the losing Deacons. Ostrom Martin, Clarke and Henry also gave excellent accounts of their endeavours and went down to defeat battling a stronger squad. Faulkner, Cowain and Countryman worked themselves into exhaustion against overwhelming odds and ultimate defeat. The Deacons went down fighting and although today find themselves eliminated from the O.B.A. in the first round of provincial play-downs, were in no way disgraced at the hands of the hand-picked Toronto all-star aggregation. The "Lizzies" now continue in the O.B.A. in quest of the provincial junior championship, entering into the semi-finals in the next round.

MAX SCHMELING K.O'S S. HAMAS

Ex-Heavyweight Champ Earns Right to Meet Max Baer

Hamburg, March 11—(AP)—The answer to Max Baer's prayer for an adequate heavyweight challenger in June may be Max Schmeling, now in the midst of a comeback as stirring as any in the annals of the division.

The terrific beating Schmeling handed young Steve Hamas before a howling crowd of 25,000 yesterday sent the Teuton's stock skyhigh and apparently gave him the inside track for a title match with Baer this summer.

Locking more and more like the Schmeling of the days when he punched his way to the world's championship, The German cut down Hamas in nine rounds and gave the New Jersey star so unmerciful a lacing the crowd was yelling for a halt as early as the seventh round.

Coincident with Schmeling's victory, avenging a defeat he suffered at Hamas' hands in Philadelphia a year ago, it was revealed Baer and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, had been offered $300,000 for a Schmeling-Baer title match this summer. The match would be subsidized by the German government and held in the new Olympic Stadium in Berlin.

Sarasota, Fla. March 11 (CP): To show for a player investment of nearly a half million dollars Boston Red Sox this spring possess a bizzare collection of talent directed by great young player-pilot in Joseph Cronin and imbued with the conviction they have an excellent chance to capture a wide-open race for this year's American League championship.

Under Bucky Harris who switched managerial jobs with Cronin the Red Sox finished fourth last year but they were 25 games behind the Detroit Tigers. This season the club must have the benefit of a thorough pitching comeback by Lefty Grove among others and rely on the veteran Max Bishop and a recruit first baseman, Ellsworth Dalghren to hold up the right side of the infield.

Cronin and Dalghren rugged Pacific coast league product are the chief additions to the starting line-up. The new manager-shortstop will furnish the clean-up punch batting fourth. He will follow Bill Werber and Roy Johnson a pair of .320 hitters last season.

Right down the line the Red Sox will have more speed and solid power than at any time since the palmy days of Speaker, Hooper and Lewis. To capitalize this offensive strength however, it will be up to Cronin and his ace backstop Rick Ferrell to get more consistent results from a pitching staff that was highly erratic last year.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Hearts Starved for Love Know Constant Ache of Loneliness

Merely being alone doesn't make a person lonely. Actual loneliness comes from having a warm heart and believing there is no one to love it. All lonely people are capable of love. It's this unused love of theirs which is like a constant ache, an unhealed sickness.

The trouble with lonely people is that they imagine the whole world loves and laughs and dances, and that they alone are forlorn, neglected and love-hungry. They never stop to think that perhaps in the next town, or the next block, or the next house, there's somebody who is saying the very same thing.

The best medicine for lonely people is to stop thinking of their own solitary condition, and to go about trying to make things a little happier and more cheerful for the other fellow. Take up some cause, study, a vocation — something which will put you in contact with your fellow creatures and make you dwell less on your own unhappiness.

Lonely people usually have a morbid streak, they persuade themselves they are unattractive and not deserving of love. Nine times out of ten, this is entirely a wrong belief. Perhaps they have lost a sweetheart, and hug this loss too closely, making no effort to find another person to love. They deny themselves this very human need. They just wait, quivering, for the next blow of fate.

That's what I mean when I say that loneliness is a bad habit.

All that lonely people need is to understand their own difficulties. Then little by little they must try to be less shy and self-conscious. And they should remember that they are more likely to find a congenial friend or sweetheart among the quiet stayers-at-home than among the lively frequenters of dance halls.

In other words, all that is necessary for lonely people to do is to force their way out of their own unhappy shells and seek each other out.

Hearts need love as much as fish need water or lungs need air. Until you satisfy that need for love and companionship, your life will be a failure.

Returning the Presents

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I was to have been married last week, but due to some misunderstanding, I have called off the wedding. I have received several wedding presents, which I wish to return, and I would appreciate it very much if you will inform me how the letter accompanying the packages should be written.

S.

Dear Mary,

As you know, Tom's and my engagement is broken, and so I am returning to you the present that you were so kind as to send to me. Thank you so much, dear Mary, for your goodness to me and for your generous thought. I know that you will understand that since the occasion for your gift exists no longer, I feel that I have not the right to keep your gift.

Dearest love to you, and please let me see you very soon.

Devotedly,

SHOWER

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My brother is going to marry a girl from out of town. I want to know if it would be proper for me to give a shower here in the city in which I live?

T.

It would be very inconsistent and inappropriate for you to plan to give a shower for your brother's fiancee. Customarily and appropriately a shower is planned by a close friend or a group of close friends of the bride-to-be. It isn't supposed to be given by a relative of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be. And we really haven't the right to ask people who don't know the bride-to-be to bring gifts for a shower in honor of her.

NO CIGARS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I work in a department in which I am the only girl and as I intend to be married in the near future, I would like to know if it is correct for me to give cigars to the men It is the custom to give wedding presents, and in return they seem to expect cigars.

W.

It would not be in good taste or appropriate for you to give cigars to the men in your department. I am sure that they would not expect this kind of gesture from a woman.

LUNCHEON FOR THE BRIDE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a future sister-in-law to get together with two of the bride's friends to entertain for her at a luncheon? 2. Is it necessary to have all the bride's friends at a luncheon or just the immediate family?

M.

1. Yes. 2. This is according to convenience, according to what size luncheon is being planned. A luncheon of this kind, in honor of a bride-to-be, may be for only her close relatives, or perhaps also it may include the mother and sisters of the groom-to-be, of it may be enlarged to include the close friends of the bride-to-be.

GREETING CARDS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for an engaged couple to send to relatives greeting cards of any nature signed with the couple's first name .. for example, Mary and Tom

P.

Yes.

To Announce—or Not to Announce

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Having profited many times from your valuable column, I wish you would inform me as to the necessity of announcing an engagement? Some of our family think it is absolutely necessary, others think it is a matter of opinion and circumstances. Will you kindly settle this matter for us?

Rex

Announcing an engagement is entirely a matter of the choice and circumstances and convenience of the people concerned.

Proper Posture Needed With Long Skirts

It Eliminates Evidence of Collar Bones and Adds Spirit to Figure

(The Beauty Box)

Frances Drake
Good posture accentuates her beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

Skirts of evening robes take all the material in the shop. The few little scraps that are left form the bodice. There is much exposure of pearly cuticle, hence neck, shoulders, chest and bust must be precisely right. Neck white and slender, bust normal and rounded, a chest that goes in for a policy of expansion, shoulders smooth as velvet. And no shelvy collar bones. Wear them and the tout ensemble is wrecked and ruined.

Good posture does away with evidence of collar bones. Place the hands on shoulders, lift the elbows and see what becomes of them. Hold head and chest erect, tummy in tight and away they go. Don't throw the shoulders forward. When figures are still in the making they should be carried jauntily, with spirit and splendor.

Don't Coax Children To Eat

By Lisa Grenelle

Laura sulked over her dinner "Eat your dinner, dear," she was told. "If you don't eat your spinach and your chop you can't have any nice junket."

Laura ran the fork round and round, but never lifted it to her mouth. So mother took it away from her and tried to feed her, but Laura shook her head and shut her teeth.

"If you eat all your dinner like a big girl you can come with me while I put the car away," bribed father.

"Let's pretend," suggested grandma, "this is a little camel and—"

But it was no good. Laura would not eat.

The next day it was the same, and certainly [illegible] child didn't look sick. However, pink cheeks notwithstanding, this persistent refusal of nourishment was upsetting. Everybody produced a comment and had a suggestion. Conversation on all other matters ceased, all eyes, except Aunt Mamie's, that is, were focused on Laura running her fork round and round and patting her potatoes with a spoon and not eating anything at all.

Aunt Mamie Silent

"At this rate the child will soon become rundown, father fretted, and started to scold. Mother retired to the kichen to prepare something which might tempt her small daughter. Aunt Ida kept asking Laura over and over, "Don't you feel well, dear?" But Aunt Mamie went on with her own dinner, and never looked Laura's way once.

"I'm not eating my dinner, Aunt Mamie," she cried, "I don't want any dinner, I'm not hungry at all."

"If you're not hungry, why eat " helping herself to some more crab-apple jelly. "Good for you to go without a meal once in a while, gives your digestion a rest. Here, give it to me. I didn't get enough peas or chicken, either." Aunt Mamie reached across for Laura's plate.

But Laura wouldn't let her have it.

"It's my dinner," she said.

Don't Notice Them

But Laura held on tight to her plate and gave Aunt Mamie a dirty look, gobbling up her dinner in double quick time.

Unless especially so directed by your doctor, never take any notice of Jimmie or Jane if they refuse there dinner. Nine cases out of ten they are playing for something, attention, some privilege, or perhaps a different menu more to their taste. This refusing to eat and thereby arousing their parents' anxiety is one of the oldest and most quickly learned of children's "gags".

It is also pernicious, giving the children the wor[illegible] kind of weapon, and making them food concious. If any obvious attention is paid to a child's eating he becomes particular and fussy in no time. He won't eat this and he won't eat that. He hates this and he hates that.

Skipping an occasional meal for spite never hurt any healthy child, anyhow, probably does him good.

Worshiping An Only Son

Future Difficult For Idolized Lone Boy Says Child Expert

By LISA GRENELLE

It didn't take Bobby Duncan long to discover that he was something "very special", not through any excess of virtue, talent, beauty or activity, but merely and simply because he was a boy.

Girls were a drug on the market in the Duncan family. There were four of them, Anne, Alice, Evelyn and Ethel. They arrived one right on top of another despite the fervent prayers of their parents for a son, an heir, someone to carry on the family name. You know the spirit left over from feudal days. Every family must have a successor, though a successor to what is seldom clear.

Anyhow, the Duncans' prayers were finally answered, although not until they had given up hope, not until the youngest girl, Ethel, was ten years old. Then came triumph —in the shape of Bobby.

From the beginning Bobby was the center of interest, the wonder, the great achievement. Although he was just an average baby, the entire family circled around his crib, exclaiming in admiration every time he kicked, smiled or reached out. As for his first words—it was not the family's fault that they were not headlined in the papers.

Effect on Bobby

All of which might have been just so much innocent fun if it had not been for the effect it had on Bobby and his sisters, but especially on Bobby, who grew up with the conviction that the only possible point for his mother's and sisters' existence was to make him comfortable, give him pleasure, and protect him from all unpleasantness.

He soon became a perfect tyrant —ordering his sisters about as if they were his slaves. Even they thought it amusing, when he was small. By the time they resolved upon a revolt, it was too late, the habit had been formed, and Bobby's parents' attitude continued demoralizingly worshiping.

Sane, balanced people in other ways, the father even had a sense of humor, they could not assume a normal attitude toward their long-looked for son and heir. Blind to his faults and his growing conceit, he was the center of their universe, the wonder of the world. And what a future he was going to have!

Girls Snub Him

But as the years went by the prospect for Bobby's future began to peter out. He couldn't seem to stick at anything. Everything was harder than he had been led to suppose. And no one outside the family appreciated him, especially women. Of course, that didn't matter much, he felt at first. Women were inferior, created solely for the benefit of man. But as girl after girl snubbed him, or told him frankly he was a "conceited ass" and finally when his first wife left him and all their friends sided with her, women's attitude toward him began to become annoying.

He wasn't appreciated, that was Bobby's growing complaint. At home, life had stopped the moment he came into the house. He was the center, something "special". But in the world he discovered, to his sorrow, that he was not considered anything "special".

Such is the story of the only son. If you have one and can't control your super-appreciation of him, send him away before it is too late.

A sensation is DeLong's new black lace dinner dress. The frock of fine Chantilly type black lace, has a sunpleated skirt and a Basque bodice finished at the neck with a "full dress" tie of white pique.

By all means get a suit this Spring for suits are younger and smarter than ever. Most attractive is a suit with belted, loose, wide-revered jacket in soft woolen in snuff yellow and a skirt in matching yellow with a brown and tan plaid.

Gay and dashing is a lovely ensemble for wear under the tropic moon. The sheer white crepe frock is patterned in brilliant red and green flowers and is worn with a jacket of pleated net of a green in tone with the shade in the dress design.

Hide away beneath the wide brim of a new hat. Again the wide-brimmed hat scores heavily in the style parade. A charming model is in lightweight yellow straw and has the crown folded into a squared-off peak and trimmed with bright red grosgrain ribbon.

Turn back time and wear one of the new negligees fashioned on Victorian lines. Such a model is in white satin with frills of wide lace falling over the chest and wrists. The snug bodice, with its wide sleeves, is fitted; the full, gathered skirt ends in a little train.

Now's the time to look into those new glove and shoe ensembles that have been so successful for Winter resort wear. A typical example is a glove in pale beige doeskin dotted in dark brown. Shoes of antelope, are done in the same color scheme.

Nature Builds Your Body—
but you supply the materials.
Health suffers if you run short of iron

Your food and drink are the only materials Nature gets to maintain your bodily strength and well-being. But the tragedy of modern foods is their shortage of iron. Sooner or later this has an effect upon the health. It causes, at first, a run-down condition and simple anaemia; then develops into serious ailments, if not checked.

40 out of 45 people in a recent test were short of Iron
One month's treatment helped them back to health and vigour

A tiny drop of blood from each individual in the above group was examined under a powerful microscope. In every instance the blood was thinner and paler than it should have been, due to the shortage of iron. The authority who conducted the tests recorded the exact amount of the shortage for each person, then put every one of them on a 30-day treatment. The preparation he gave them was Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (called pink because they have a pink sugar coating). Then in one month they returned and their blood was examined again.

Rich supplies of Iron for 30 days had greatly improved their health. Blood tests proved value of the treatment

When an authority counts the number of red corpuscles and tells the exact amount of iron in the blood . . . nobody can deny it because the microscope proves it! And the gains made by the 40 persons during their 30-day treatment were all recorded! By definitely increasing both the red corpuscles and the iron, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills proved a most reliable tonic and blood builder. This test is a demonstration of what this fine old remedy can do for you, if . . . as is likely . . . you need iron.

Wouldn't you like to feel really strong and vigorous again? Wouldn't you like to eat well, sleep soundly, take a keen interest in life around you? . . . Then put yourself on a 30-day treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Directly you begin taking this reliable old preparation, the reconstructive process will start. The blood will grow richer . . . will carry more vitality . . . and your own feelings will react pleasantly. Old aches and off days will give way to new vigor and brighter outlook on life. You will know once again the joy of possessing that priceless treasure . . . health! Full size box 50c. 34H

Trenton Industries Favor Daylight Saving for Summer

Trenton, Mar. 11 (Special)—The Trenton Branch of the Canadian Legion No. 110 met in the Orange Hall last Thursday night for the annual election of officers. The President, Comrade C. M. Harrison was in the chair. Flight-Lt. Heakes was the speaker of the occasion and his subject "The Brighter side of Flying" was thoroughly enjoyed by the comrades present. The election was keen with the following being chosen to guide the Legion's business for the coming year. President, Comrade James E. McKibbon; 1st Vice President, Comrade Lorne D. Foster; 2nd Vice President, Comrade George Jordan; secretary-treasurer, Comrade Robert Heath (accl.) sergeant-at-arms, Comrade W. E. Donaldson; executive committee, Comrades Don T. Fraser, E. E. Wiggins, Fraser Fairman and B. F. Joyce.

Chamber of Commerce Meet

Several Trenton merchants recently signed a patented sales promotion scheme while others turned thumbs down on the proposition. President O. M. Newton of the Chamber of Commerce called a meeting on Friday morning at the Town Hall to have the differences settled. After much discussion it was decided that the merchants would not enter the sales promotion at all.

It was also decided, that the Town Council would be asked to have Daylight Saving again this year. This decision was reached after each industry was consulted. They were all in favour of the extra hour of daylight in the evening. Some industrial heads put the proposition to a vote of the employees and each case turned out in favour of Daylight Saving. The local base of the Royal Canadian Air Force are also in favor.

C. ONTARIO AGENCY WINS NALACO CUP

The premier award of the North American Life, won each year by the Agency making the most significant contribution to the Company's progress, has been won by the Central Ontario Agency. A new chapter has thus been written in the history of this trophy. Central Ontario agency being the first agency to ever score three successive victories, in the 22 years this cup has been competed for by all agencies of the Company.

A year of spectacular progress was ushered in by the Agency's characteristic response to the first big assignment of the year— Five hundred thousand in 50 days—from then on throughout the whole year Central Ontario Agency continued to make new records and the spotlight was always focused on this Eastern Ontario group of live wire underwriters.

The end of the $500,000.00 in 50 days contest found them ahead of quota, leading all agencies of the Company and carrying off the first award. In April they surpassed their President's Month quota by 44%, and in July, end of production club year, they had qualified eight members for the Big Production Club including three club officers—a record never before equalled.

The new business of the Agency for the year amounted to $2,550,000.00, an increase of 42% over the previous year, with new premiums of $168,000.00.

All these successes are reflected in the Nalaco Cup standing, which showed Central Ontario Agency as a consistent leader in spite of keen competition from Toronto and Montreal, the agency never relinquished the premier position.

To celebrate the winning of the Cup, Head Office officials entertained the field force of the agency at Hotel Quinte on Saturday with a banquet and dance.

Associated with Mr. M. W. Sparling, district manager, are: Mr. R. B. Cooper, Mr. A. H. Bryant and Mr. J. E. Marsh.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"The Iron Duke"

Arliss At His Greatest In Role of "Wellington"

In what will probably be recorded in picture annals as one of the greatest performances of his long and distinguished career, Mr. George Arliss brought Wellington, victor of Waterloo, to life again as the pre-eminent of the historical drama "The Iron Duke", at the Belle Theatre on Saturday.

This magnificent Arliss vehicle has come to Belleville and vicinity picture fans following its initial remarkable ovation in London where its world premier was graced by the presence of His Royal Highness, The Prince of Wales, a mark of exceptional distinction; and its later successful American debut at the Radio City Music Hall, and its sensational two weeks engagement at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto.

Everything about the production is on a heroic scale; its tremendously fascinating battle scenes, its background of Parisien society, seething with political intrigue, and radiant with feminine beauty, where fair ladies plotted and the pulse of life beat feverishly.

The Hundred Days

The story period covers The Hundred Days, following Napoleon's return from Elba, and his temporary successful attempt to recover his lost crown which slips from his grasp forever on the field of Waterloo.

The personality of Mr. Arliss dominates all, whether it be in the ball room at Brussels, where the Duchess of Richmond's festivities end suddenly with the booming of cannon and Napoleon's menacing advance; or later, as virtual dictator in the capital of France. And in the finale, it is the thunderous speech of defiance to his critics in the British House of Lords that marks Mr. Arliss as the outstanding figure of an historical epic which is unusually rich in dramatic talent.

The deft weavings of romance into the plot fabric, and able direction of Victor Saville rates "The Iron Duke" with a high entertainment value. Its popular appeal is found in the fact that even a person who has only a hazy idea as to Wellington's importance in history, would still react enthusiastically to its thrills and human interest. Mr. Arliss' superb work in the title role is well seconded by the individual performances of a large and excellent cast.

A new type of pictorial journalism, "The story of a Country Doctor", dealing with the work of Dr. M. W. Locke of Williamsburg, Ontario, was presented on the same program with a gorgeous kartune in color, and the Belle Latest News of the World. The entire program will be repeated again tonight, and Tuesday, matinee and evening.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Secret Bride"

Barbara Stanwyck Superb as the Woman Who Tried to Pull the Shades on Her Love Affair

"The Secret Bride" the current attraction at the Capitol Theatre, is Barbara Stanwyck's finest dramatic production.

In "The Secret Bride", the famous screen star is given every opportunity to dispay her fine dramatic talent, and she rises to new heights in her characterization of a secret bride of the man who is obligated to prosecute her own father on a bribery charge.

In the role of the wife, Miss Stanwyck visits her husband's apartment secretly at night, and sees his chief investigator shot down in the courtyard. The man's sweetheart, who is secretary to her husband, is arrested for the murder and prosecuted in a sensational court trial.

Hoping to protect her husband and aid her father by concealing her marriage, Miss Stanwyck keeps the knowledge of the murder to herself until she sees that it is inevitable that the girl will be convicted. She then appears in court and in a grippingly dramatic scene, tells of seeing the crime committed and reveals the fact of her marriage despite its influence in the career of her husband who had already been accused of shielding her father.

Warren William does a splendid piece of work as the attorney general and husband of Miss Stanwyck, Glenda Farrell is the wise-cracking stenographer, and the supporting cast includes Grant Mitchell, Arthur Byron and Henry O'Neill.

"RED HOT TIRES"

In addition to unfolding a red hot romance "Red Hot Tires" the companion feature on this programme, depicts some of the most thrilling automobile racing scenes ever shown on the screen.

Daredevil stunts performed specifically for the picture by nationally famous racers, and in which six members of the cast participated caused even the most blase motion picture fan to gasp in amazement.

The picture is fast in action, with one melodramatic thrill following another to the smashing climax in which the hero wins a spectacular race by a hair with his sweetheart riding with him as his mechanic. In addition to the race track thrills there is a sensational court trial in which the hero is convicted of wrecking the car and killing a rival driver who is also the rival for the love of a beautiful girl; a jail break and man hunt for the escaped prisoner.

Lyle Talbot as a crack auto racing driver has one of the best roles of his career. Mary Astor is at her best in the leading feminine role, and others in the cast include Gavin Gordon, Roscoe Karns and Frankie Darro.

Du Barry Fruit dishes today and Tuesday only. Complete shows 2:30; 7:00; 9:15.

SAYS SHE DOESN'T EVEN KNOW GARBO

Marlene Dietrich poses coyly among her baggage shortly after she stepped off the train in New York. Asked about the episode in a Hollywood cafe in which the beautiful German star is supposed to have snubbed Great Garbo, La Dietrich explained the so-called snub was due to the fact that she and Garbo had never met, and therefore she did not know the Swedish siren.

FATHER OPPOSES GUARDIAN BILL

would have to go to be free. There is one great concession in the bill, though. They have at last admitted I am the father of the babies. Mrs. Dionne is not mentioned in the whole bill. They must have forgotten she exists."

If the bill fails to pass the Dionnes plan to have the quintuplets live with their other five children as soon as they are old enough to make that practical. When they are old enough to go to school they hope to have a new home and use the present babies' hospital as a school house.

"What we would like to know," Mrs. Dionne said during the interview, "is what we have done to deserve to lose our babies."

Mrs. Dionne said she hoped before the bill passes the Legislature the members intending to vote for its passage would for a moment place themselves in her position of having the children taken from her when she never had the opportunity she is able to rear them.

Free Access

"They claim we have free access to the hospital any time," said the father. "Well, just Saturday afternoon I went over there with some friends and they wouldn't even pull up the blinds in the nursery so we could look at the babies. But at the same time there was a party of people in the office. Friends of some of tthe guardians, and as soon as we left the hospital they were shown the babies. And the babies weren't asleep at the time. We could hear them laughing and playing."

"Right from the day the babies were born we haven't had a chance to show that we are able to look after them," Oliva continued, as his wife nodded in agreement. "When the first contract with the guardians was signed, we were forced to sign because they threatened if we didn't they would take the nurses and the doctor away that night and they would stop the supply of human milk that was coming from Toronto. That didn't look very much as though they had the interests of the babies at heart, does it?"

Likened to Soviet Act

Mrs. Dionne said she wondered if the members of the Legislature who will vote for the passage of the bill would talk the matter over with their wives before they voted. The Dionnes saw the "taking away" of their babies as something resembling Soviet Russia in Canada.

"We don't want our babies to be raised as 'state babies'," they agreed. "We want them to be raised as our children, to be given the same chances and the same upbringing as their older brothers and sisters. We don't want a lot of money. All we want is our babies and a living."

Manager's View

"The way the bill is framed now is grossly unfair," said Kervin as the Dionnes listened. "We certainly don't intend to have it passed without doing all we can to have a fair chance in the upbringing of the babies. Why, there isn't even a mention of Mrs. Dionne in the bill.

"If anything happened to one of those babies the government is able to step out of the picture and say, "Here, you can have your babies now." That's certainly not a fair deal for Mr. and Mrs. Dionne and we intend to make every effort to recover those children for them and to bring them up as ordinary children, not as "state children."

"All that is asked is that the Dionnes be given a chance to bring their children up as one family, not as two separate ones."

PROGRAM HAND-PICKED FOR THIS EVENING

Sidney Smith is a former choir singer of Providence R.I. and New York City but really made his debut in Western Canada singing for the neighbors.

Wrigley's have hand-picked a group of numbers for the regular broadcast tonight that are especially adaptable to the all string arrangement of Geoffery Waddington's Wrigley's orchestra. Among the hightlights will be "I'm going Shopping With You," "Blue Moon" and "I was Lucky".

Marion Rockwell, Wrigley's popular lyric soprano is going to sing "Pierrot" and "What a Difference A Day Makes" tonight. Wrigley's other vocalist, the golden-voiced Sidney Smith, will be heard in the two songs "The words Are in My Heart" and The night is Young."

One of the features of the program will be the new regular banjo specialty number with Stan Lawrel who will play "Lollipop". Jimmy Namare, that wizard of the xylophone, is going to do his stuff in the number "Street Fantasy."

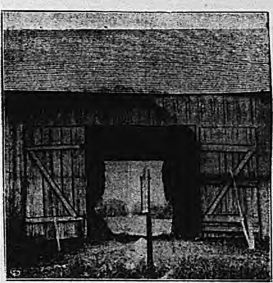
U.S.-CANADA BORDER RUNS THROUGH BARN



If a tramp fell asleep in the hayloft (LEFT) he would be slumbering in United States, but should he tumble out of bed he would wake up in Canada. The border-line runs through the barn. It is to settle disputes which might arise over similar property that the international boundary commission made detailed surveys.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Mar. 11—(CP)— Action and strength were spotty on the Mining Board of Toronto Stock Exchange today with several Penny Stocks, including Chibougamau and Wayside very busy on the advance. Some of the more expensive issues, including Pickle Crow and McWatters were in an advancing trend on heavy turnover but the Senior Golds were slow and soft in places. The two British Columbia leaders, Pioneer and Bralorne, suffered considerable set-back, the latter being quite active on the decline. Silver and Base Metals issued showed little change and were quiet.

Bralorne selling ex-dividend 15 cents was off 95 cents to 8.30 and Pioneer sold 90 cents lower at 9.10 Lake Shore had a loss of $1 and Wright Hargreaves and Hollinger 10 to 20 cents each.

Pickle Crow was the outstanding leader in the Secondary Gold Group rising more than 20 cents to 2.63. Sylvanite, McMillan and Little Long Lac dipped 5 to 7 cents each and Siscoe, Sheep Creek and Central Patricia, Macassa and God's Lake were steady.

A fair demand developed for Noranda with the price unchanged. In Falconbridge was slightly soft. In the Silvers the only price changes were a loss of a couple of cents for Eldorado and a gain of 3 cents for Premier.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 11—(CP)—Ford A registered mild recovery and the food and oil groups harbored a few strong spots on the industrial department of Toronto Exchange in today's early session but over the board a lethargic condition prevailed. Sales up till noon fell below the 5,000 share level.

The afternoon tone was heavy. In the Distillery group Walker's Common was a point up during the morning but lost the gain and 1-2 point more. Distillers Seagram had a small fraction to the good and Industrial Alcohol A added 1-4. Brewery shares were mainly unchanged.

International Petroleum and McColl Pfd. were firm spots in the oils and in the foods higher prices ruled for National Grocers, Canada Packers Canners and Dominion Stores. Steels were rather lifeless apart from a considerable trade in Dominion Bridge at a half point decline Banks and utilities were without price changes in slow trade and implement stocks lost ground.

Business was slack in the miscellaneous group with recessions predominating. Ontario Silks weakened a point. Tip Top Pfd. 3-4 and F. N. Burt 3-4. Toronto Elevators Pfd. and Robert Simpson Pfd. sold higher.

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, March 11 (AP)—A wide open break in cotton disturbed the stock market today and nipped in the bud a quiet rally. The decline in cotton which amounted to more than a cent a pound was accompanied by heaviness of grains.

Stocks showing losses of around a point included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, National Distillers, Cerro De Pasco and others, while Case and Union Pacific dropped about 2. New York Central, Pennsylvania, Chysler, American Smelting, Westinghouse Electric and many others dipped fractions under Saturday's closing levels.

Among Canadian stocks, Dome, McIntyre and International Nickel ruled about even. On the curb, Lake Shore yielded a major fraction but Hiram Walker [illegible] fairly steady. Canadian funds were 1-8 of a cent higher at 99 1-16 cents.

NEW YORK CLOSE

New York, March 11—(AP)—The stock market went into a ragged retreat today following a wide break in cotton prices. Losses of fractions to a point or more replaced early fractional improvement The late tone was heavy with losses of 1 to 2 points shown by Case, U. S. Smelting and Union Pacific. Santa Fe, U. S. Steel and Dupont yielded major fractions. American Telephone held steady. Transfers approximated 680,000 shares.

Mr. Langabeer is believed to have been proceeding down a rear stairs to procure some fire-wood, when he apparently stumbled and crashed to the bottom. When found later by a neighbour Mr. Langabeer was still unconscious. Local police rushed the injured man to the hospital.

MADOC WINS FIRST GAME IN FINALS

Defeat Tweed Intermediates in 5-0 in Hastings League Series

The Madoc Intermediates won the first game of the play-offs for the Hastings County League championship when they trounced the Tweed team by the score of 5-0 at the Madoc arena on Friday night. The homesters, leading the league all season and having defeated Tweed four of the five games played, are now favored to take the championship in two straight games. In the previous games between these two teams, Madoc scored two shut-outs, winning 1-0 in Madoc, 4-0 in Tweed taking also the third game by a score of 3-1 and dropping the fourth 5-2 when they were without the services of Henderson, the star centre for Madoc.

On the play the score just about indicates the margin that Madoc had over Tweed. At no time was Tweed in any way threatening. The whole Madoc team were going well from Hulin in the nets to the last sub.

The game was very clean both realizing the cost of a penalty. Only two were handed out by referees Rollins and Watson, one to each team. Play was very fast but Madoc carried the play to Tweed. No stars can be picked from the Madoc team but Henderson and Hulin were a tower of strength.

For Tweed Thompson in goal turned in a good performance having no chance on the ones that beat him. Akey was the leading marksman getting three of Madoc's goals Alexander also played a brilliant game.

The score—

First Period
1. Madoc — Akey (Alexander).
Second Period
2. Madoc — Akey (Henderson).
Third Period
3. Madoc — Akey
4. Madoc — Alexander (Embury)
5. Madoc — Henderson (Akey)

Penalties — Akey, Geraldi.

Newsman Kept Greek Prisoner For 48 Hours

(By James A. Mills)

Copyright, 1935, by the Asso. Press.

Ghevghelli, Greek-Yugoslav Frontier, March 11—Greece entered the 11th. day of its revolution today with apparently no more signs of peace than when the insurrection began.

Reports circulated government troops had captured Seres but these reports were discounted by observers of the situation here. It is still uncertain whether Loyalist forces have even crossed the River Struma.

In Athens the cabinet appeared to be in a dilemma, not knowing whether General George Kondylis, commander of thte Loyalist forces, should attack the rebels with all his five divisions of the National army or continue merely to worry the insurgents with a single division hoping to disrupt their morale.

The government was seemingly hesitant to test the loyalty of its soldiers and aviators, in the opinion of some observers, fearing they, too, may join the revolutionists.

Both sides claim overwhelming victories. Not a single foreign correspondent has succeeded in reaching the government or rebel lines, although British and French military attaches are reported to have gone to the front by permission of the government.

Newsmen To Visit Front.

General Kondylis informed newspapermen he expected the revolution would be over tomorrow or Wednesday after which foreign correspondents will be permitted to visit the front.

After being kept a virtual prisoner in Greece for 48 hours, I succeeded in escaping over the Greek-Yugoslav frontier only by a hazardous 80-mile journey by automobile, horse and afoot through wild mountains and snow-blanketed swamps.

My ramshackle automobile broke down at the most critical point of the journey, slid down a mountain and was wrecked. I then aroused some Greek peasants from their beds, borrowed a horse and continued the journey in inky darkness until forced to finish it on foot.

When under the cover of darkness I tried to cross the No Man's Land between Greece and Yugo-Slavia, Serbian guards threatened to shoot me.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

That same afternoon Faith met Sacha de Markoff by appointment in the Luxembourg Gardens where, during those first magic days in Paris, she had strolled with the young inventor. Then it had been June.

Now in the cold wintry mist, she walked beneath leafless trees with the big blond Russian. A few children played among the grey statues and the fountains were still.

"You tell me nothing. I understand nothing. You are mad, malegnkaya dousha— little soul," de Markoff said in his soft gutterals. His light blue eyes were fixed intensely on her slight body as it swayed beside him in a simple black tailored coat with the spread of astrachan framing her fair head. "Why did you leave Hunter," he persisted.

Faith shook her head. "I'm not answering questions, Sacha. I got you here today to ask you a favor." Her hand slipped into her bag.

"You leave us," de Markoff went on in his melancholy caressing voice. "You know there is nothing I would not do for you."

"I'm going to be frank with you," Faith said slowly. "Some time ago, Therese told me things about you, Sacha. She said you lived on commissions you made by getting your rich friends to buy things."

An expression of fury came into the Russian's face. He stopped short tugging at his blond mustache. "That woman is a devil," he muttered.

"Is it true?" Faith asked.

Suddenly the old reckless look flashed back into his eyes. He laughed. "It is true."

"Thank you for being frank with me. There must be a great many things then—that you know. And I'm going to trust you." Faith drew her hand out of the bag. She held a black velvet case. "I want you to sell my pearls for me."

"Your pearls." De Markoff gaped lionaire——"

"Well, I'm not a millionairess," Faith retorted. "I've got to raise some money in a hurry." She thrust the case toward him. "I don't know anything about their value, but will you do your best for me?"

They were on a deserted path of the Garden. De Markoff took out the shimmering string, fondled it, his sensuous fingers loving each pearl. Then he looked down at Faith at the pure oval of her face, the limpid grey of her eyes. And suddenly he straightened to military erectness.

"I am at your service," he said in clipped tones.

Faith sighed, then she smiled sweetly, wistfully. "You are my friend, Sacha. I knew that you would help me."

De Markoff bowed. There was an oriental philosophy of acceptance in his gesture. "So be it," he said. "But I must warn you that, on such short notice, I cannot realize their full value." He held the necklace coiled in his palm. It looked oddly forlorn and lonely with a sadness to the luster of the pearls. "They are perfectly matched," he went on gravely. "In your dollars, I should say they were worth a small fortune. I must give you a receipt for them."

But de Markoff insisted on her taking a receipt and Faith could see that he was distressed at the responsibility she had put upon him.

Whatever came of them, the money was for Paul. For the first time since she had left Hunter, shadows lifted from Faith's heart, now that Paul was provided for. With that money, surely the airplane motor would have its chance. And Paul need never know it wasn't Mr. Rider's backing until things got under way.

"I can't believe it, Faith," Paul said over and over again when she went to see him the next day. He sat bundled in rugs in the open window of the small white hospital room. "But why are you going over?"

Faith laughed. "I'm homesick. Isn't that enough?"

The sun was shining that morning. It shone on Paul's flaming hair, his thin, eager face, his thin hands. "I can't believe it," he said again. "Somehow it's too good to be true."

Faith took away with her a sense of the quality of beauty that lay in him. Paul made her feel strong again. He made her feel that there were a great many things in life she hadn't yet learned. She cast from her the ugly thought that if Hunter heard of Paul's crossing on the same boat, he would believe her guilty of another intrigue.

AMERICAN AGAIN

CHAPTER TWENTY NINE

It was strange and melancholy that Faith's farewell to the glamorous life of ease and pleasure in Paris should be summed up in her parting with the Count de Markoff; an ex-officer, an exile, a gentleman adventurer of sorts he might be, but he was the only one of all the smart, gay people Faith had met remained her friend.

Hunter's attitude was as clear and concise as a surgical operation. He had cut himself clean from her. There was perhaps less pain that way, Faith thought with a dreadful readiness that had drugged her nerves since she left him. She hoped it would always be so; that she would never again feel any emotion. But the day before she sailed, through a heaviness of body and spirit, a thousand needles seemed to shoot, warning her what it would be like when she became quite conscious of the measure of her loss.

She sat waiting for Sacha de Markoff in an obscure little cafe on the left bank of the river Seine. He represented a vanished fairy tale as he entered this modest little cafe in the elegance of morning coat and striped trousers, his derby cocked at the fashionable angle on his blond head. Stepping from that other, lost, world to meet Faith on this outer fringe. And—oh why did he have to wear a white carnation today? Hunter's flower. As he bent over her hand, the flower scent stabbed at Faith.

There were shadows under her eyes, a frail transparency to her skin. She looked up at him with mut question. Had he sold the pearls?

"You are like a spring flower in the snow," the Russian said. "I cannot bear to let you go." His pale blue eyes held all the pain and passion of a Slav in love with love. "I saw Hunter yesterday," he said. "He looks so badly. You should not go goloubbka, little dove."

"The pearls! Have you sold them?" Faith answered a little sharply. Her nerves were on edge.

De Markoff had to tell her about that in his own dramatic way. Yes, he had sold them. A check was in his wallet. He became very animated and excited and tugged at his small mustache. It had been difficult, requiring much diplomacy and discretion, for one does not see such a string every day. And there were questions—

"A great deal of money is coming to you, my angel," he said solemnly, enjoying his importance. "Fifteen thousand of your dollars. They are worth much more, but in these days, and for immediate payment, it was the best I could do."

"Oh," Faith gasped, "I hadn't dreamed of so much! Sacha, how wonderful!" Her lashes fluttered on her white cheeks. "You must take out your commission," she said in a low embarrassed voice.

A slow flush crept into the Russian's face, a hurt look in his eyes. "I have loved you, little soul. And you speak of such things to me?"

De Markoff leaned over and put his hand on hers. "I have been of service to you," he said in his soft gutturals. "That is reward enough."

Faith was deeply moved. "What can I say, Sacha? You have been so very kind. Will you come to the bank with me now? We'll deposit the check and ask them to transfer it to their New York offices?"

They were walking along the crowded Boulevard, after leaving the bank, when she saw Hunter. Wedged in traffic, he sat in his black roadster, his broad shoulders drooping behind the wheel. A green felt hat dipped over his dark profile. And then he turned and stared straight at Faith and de Markoff.

It was all over in a second. Unsmilingly, he bowed. Faith stood, jostled by passersby, until de Markoff gently impelled her on. She felt as if a giant hand had squeezed and wrung her dry of tears. She couldn't bear to have the Russian see her this way.

"Thank you, Sacha—for everything. Goodbye.' Before the bewildered young man could stop her, Faith slipped away in the crowd.

Better that way. There was no use in prolonging goodbyes. Faith wouldn't even let Mary see her off at the boat train. A clasp of Mary's hand in the old studio, and then she, too had dropped in to the past. The shores of France vanished soon enough in December haze as the "Rochambeau" ploughed through heavy seas.

There was Paul Tuckerman to think of—Paul so pathetically unable as yet to grasp his good fortune, never guessing that Faith was going over to get a divorce. Paul still weak enough to believe without question everything Faith told him. What would he say, Faith thought, if he knew that the splendid adventure upon which he was embarked had been paid for by a string of pearls? And that there was no shrewd business man backing his airplane motor! He was happy to lie in his steamer chair watching the crested plunge of waves; watching Faith, a shade too slender these days, pacing the decks in her green belted coat.

And what plans he made! To listen to him, you heard the hum of his motor filling the sky like a strong heart beating. You looked up expecting to see the dip and swoop of hundreds of wings upborne by his motor. You dreamed of air-men soaring in safety and speed with Paul's motor.

"It's so worth while," he said to Faith. "You know, I'm not really such a dreamer that I don't care for success."

"And what," Faith asked suddenly, thinking of Hunter, "is success?"

"Having the world want what you have enough to pay for it in one way or another," Paul slowly answered.

Faith shook her head. "I think it's you being willing to pay," she said.

Well, she had paid for what she had considered the very best in life, and gold had turned to ashes in her grasp. Always it eluded her wondering what was wrong with her, with Hunter, with those gay, gorgeous people who had been her envy. Sometimes, closing her eyes, she imagined the ship was turned around, forging toward the romance and adventure of foreign lands. She tried to put herself back where she had been when Hunter first sent her away to Paris. For brief moments she could relive those days before officially she became Mrs. Hunter Barclay. But the hopes and ambitions she had had then didn't seem real now.

Then one day Faith stood beside Paul and watched the towering line of New York bite into the sky. She had forgotten what a giant this city was. And, oddly, she felt steadied by the sight of it. In this city you were alone; you had to be alone.

Paul, his hair a flaming banner to the winds, pointed. "Everything and everyone is restless, yet we build towers," he said.

"Towers for prisoners," Faith whispered, but he didn't hear her. And she found herself carried on with his enthusiasm into the city, with its thunder and lights.

She sent Paul away from her. "I'm going to a quiet hotel, where I can feel alone," she said. "You're all right, aren't you?"

For the first time since they had travelled together the forbidden light shone in Paul's thin face. "Always all right, knowing Faith," he said in a low voice. "Oh, my dear, I haven't dared tell you—"

"Don't," she said quickly, and turned away from the longing in his eyes. She must work for Paul, but she mustn't see too much of him. Not until she was surer of herself.

Perhaps Philip Stevens could be of use. She thought of him the next morning. It was a crisp and blue December day. There was the bustle of approaching Christmas in the air to increase her loneliness.

She telephoned Philip's office, and came up against a barrage of polite voices, which she finally broke through with her name.

Philip's genial, "Why, hello, Faith. What wild wind blew you over here?" made her wonder if he really would be glad to see her.

"Oh, it wasn't so wild," she answered lightly. "Have you any spare time?"

There was a slight pause, then Philip's voice boomed with heartiness: "Sure I have. Sorry I can't make it lunch. But I'm throwing a little celebration party tonight. Delighted to have you join us."

"I don't think Gertrude would be delighted," Faith said slowly.

Philip gave a short, embarrassed laugh. "Gertrude's gone—sailed yesterday. Better come to the party tonight," he went on, as if he didn't want any comments just then. "It's at the penthouse of a friend of mine, Mrs. Monte Hazard—charming woman." He sounded jerky, in a hurry. "Lorelei Apartments. You'll find it in the telephone book. See you later," and he hung up.

What did it matter to her now if Gertrude had sailed? Faith told herself. But all the rest of the day the thought of Gertrude was like water dripping on the same spot, wearing her raw. She was in no mood for Paul when he turned up late in the afternoon wanting to know when he could meet his backer. Poor Paul, so keen to get started, so full of hope!

Too Much Emphasis Given Youthful Hockey Talent

PRINCETON HOCKEY COACH

By FRANK FREDRICKSON

The National Hockey League is suffering from a mysterious malady, which might be titled, "Too Much Emphasis on Youth." That is to say, there is too much discrimination against veteran players. Managers, for the most part, are willing to toss their old men overboard if they can find a promising youngster. Offhand, this sounds like 100 per cent. strategy, but the records bear plenty of testimony to the contrary. The question, to my mind, is not whether your stickhandler is an old man, but whether he's a good man.

Frank Fredrickson

Good men should stick, I think that a hockey player reaches his peak between the ages of 27 and 31. Of course, many managers will disagree. Some of them, I know, declare a player will prove his worth at 31 if he's ever going to make his mark in the big time. But take the New York Rangers for example. Some 70 players have been on their payroll since their organization in 1926. How many of them have remained? Not many of the recruits, but plenty of the old-timers.

The Rangers are unique in that they have five originals in their line-up. They are Ching Johnson, Murray Murdoch, and the still-powerful forward line of Bill Cook, Bun Cook and Frank Boucher Five old men, some experts would term them, but five old men for my money any day in the week. The Rangers, by sticking to their veterans, never have missed a play-off. They have won the Stanley cup twice, and qualified for the Stanley cup series four times. Other clubs pin their confidence in their old men rather than gamble too much with unproven youngsters. I refer to the Clancys, Days, Jollats, Morenzes and Shores of the league.

Ching Johnson

They still cut a pretty fancy swath in the puck-punching sphere, and are not through yet.

Don't think I'm against new talent. I'm all for it but I still say it's a mistake to cast aside proven talent in the interests of youth. Experience plays a mighty role in professional hockey, and more Stanley cups are won by veterans than by their understudies.

To make the National League grade, a recruit must have more than ordinary ability. There are not enough high-class amateurs to go round. They arrive in slim batches, where the old men march on for years. A great hockey player still is worth his salt when most mediocre players are shouting for crutches and arm chairs.

Johnny Broaca Is One Reason Why Marse Joe Is Elated

Marse Joe McCarthy announces his and Col. Jacob Ruppert's Yankees will run one-two this year, and one of the reasons why he expects the rifles (ever without Ruth) to be up there all the way is Johnny Broaca, graduate of the freshman class at dear old Yale.

A's His Nemesis

Broaca, brought in last year from pastures at Newark, proved ability to beat every team in the American league except the Athletics. He swept his series of four games from the Browns and beat the Detroit champions two games against one lost. He scored two victories over the White Sox and lost one, and broke even with the Senators, two and two, and the Red Sox one and one.

The two clubs that beat Johnny oftener than he beat them were Cleveland which took a pair from the Yale flinger while losing one, and the A's, a team Broaca failed to beat and to which he lost two games.

In point of earned run rating, Broaca ranked twenty-second in the league. He won 12 games and lost nine.

Heavyweight Champ

Native of Lawrence, Mass, where he was born, Oct. 3, 1911, Broaca prepped at Lawrence high and Phillips Andover before matriculating at Yale. Besides playing end on the freshman eleven, and pitching sensationally, he was heavyweight boxing champion of his class.

Joining the Yankees in the summer of 1933, he was sent to Newark where he won seven games and lost two, striking out 59 batters in 75 innings. In one game he fanned 16 Montreal batters, in another 10 Rochesterites.

JOHNNY BROACA

He kept up a good strikeout average last year with the Yankees fanning 74 men in the 177 innings he pitched. He proved especially valuable with his speed and curves in the pinches.

Bordagaray Is One Of Brooklyn's Hopes For Surprise

A young man the White Sox allowed to slip back to the minors last season may help an improving Brooklyn ball club to slip over a sensational surprise on the National league this year.

He is Stanley (Frenchy) Bordagaray, 23-year-old recruit, brought to the Sox in a $50,000 deal last year and sent back to Sacramento in the Pacific Coast league "for further seasoning."

No Speaker in Field

The further seasoning was directed toward improvement of Frenchy's abilities as a ball hawk. He was not so hot in that department with the Sox, catching a few fly balls on his ears and letting others drop unmolested that should have gone for out. But coast scribes say the young man has developed amazingly in that respect.

Besides having a batting average of 342 for his four years in organized baseball, Bordagaray displayed great power in the pinches. He broke up several American league ball games last year during his short career with the Sox which endured for only 27 games. He hit .322 at Chicago.

Like Hack Wilson

Apparently he hits well in any kind of company, compiling an average of .321 in 117 games in the coast league after the White Sox sent him back. Built like Hack Wilson, squatty outfielder formerly with the Giants, Cubs and Dodgers, Frenchy puts the same sort of power behind a hit.

STANLEY BORDAGARAY

Brooklyn turned over to Sacramento $10,000, Outfielder Johnny Frederick and Pitcher Art Herring for him.

$250,000 RECRUIT

JOE CRONIN

Not exactly a recruit but a $250,000 addition to the Red Sox is Joe Cronin, new manager and shortstop of the Red Sox, pictured in his Boston uniform at Sarasota, Fla., training camp. Tom Yawkey, owner of the Red Sox is reported to have paid Clark Griffith of the Senators a quarter of a million.

HOLD THAT POSE

Ace of the Brooklyn pitching staff, Von Lingle Mungo winds up to shoot a hot one, and just as he prepared to let go the cameraman "shot" him. He's warming up in the Dodgers' training camp at Orlando, Fla.

RIDING WITH DEATH!

'NOT A ROMAN HOLIDAY'

Frank Lockhart in 1928, Lee Bible in 1929 lost their lives attacking automobile speed records; with every renewal of world's record speed trials we hear the same old wail, "they have no practical value" "they are staged for a thrill."

"That isn't so"!

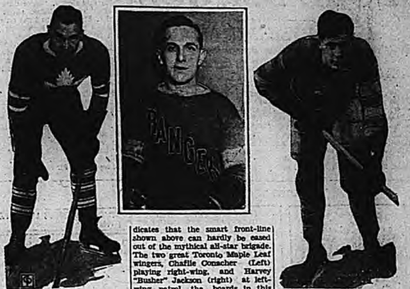
By experimentation, daredevil drivers, risking their own necks, have made travel in our smooth chariots of the 20th century swifter faster, safer. Automobiles at high speed give all parts the supreme tset; gears, gasoline, tires have been made durable, dependable public servants largely because of early pioneering by race drivers.

In 1927 Sir Henry Segrave predicted streamlining as a method of achieving power, grace, operating economy; now look at our present cars.

No, a world's record speed meet is not a "Roman holiday." It is a holiday for the observance, celebration of new achievement, and man's mastery over "a man-built machine".

What, then, of stark tragedy casts its shadow on the speedway? The answer is that Death rides with those daring new achievents." "Roman holidays" are staged on the public highways every day in the year—not the speedways. On Ontario highways in 1934, nine thousand five hundred and two persons were killed or injured. What is the cause?

CHOSEN AS ALL-STAR N. H. L. FORWARD LINE



The pickers of all-star National Hockey League teams have again made their selections in a survey made by Canadian Press and a general study of the trend in voting indicates that the smart front-line shown above can hardly be eased out of the mythical all-star brigade. The two great Toronto Maple Leaf wingers, Chafile Conacher (Left) playing right-wing, and Harvey "Busher" Jackson (right) at left-wing, patrol the boards in this phantom sextette, while Frankie Boucher of New York Rangers (centre above), also pivots on the crack attacking line. These three supply a perfect mixture of brainy playmaking, tight back-checking, powerful offensive and scoring ability galore. After all, what else could a "perfect" forward line have?

Detroit, March 12 (AP)—Picturing Hugh S. Johnson as a "chocolate soldier" playing the role of "Man Friday" to Bernard Baruch, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin replied last night to the former NRA administrator's "Pied Piper" speech.

"The money changers whom the Priest of Priests drove out of the temple of Jerusalem," said Father Coughlin, ". . . have marshalled their forces behind the leadership of a chocolate soldier for the purpose of driving a Priest out of public affairs."

Father Coughlin's reply was made in a 45 minute speech over the same network Johnson used at New York last week to call him and Senator Huey Long "two mad Pied Pipers" appealnig to "the lunatic fringe of the people."

DAWES SEES END OF SLUMP NEAR

Says Depression Will Be Over in Two Months' Time

TUCSON, Ariz., March 12.—(AP) — Charles G. Dawes believes the depression will end in another two months and that the nation will realize it not later than July.

Voicing this conviction in an interview, the former Vice President said the depressions beginning in 1873 and 1893 each lasted five and a half years as measured by the stock market, and that the one that began in 1929 should wind up in about the same length of time.

"Due to an accumulation of five years of postponed demands, June or July of this year should see the beginning of a great sustained demand for durable goods,' he said.

Asked whether the administration's spending program would affect government credit or permanent recovery, Mr. Dawes said:

"Of course it will, if continued. The budget must be balanced. And if this borrowing continues after recovery there will be serious consequences—probably another big smash."

Germany Violates Treaty Creating Military Air Force

By George Hambleton
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 12—(CP Cable)—Germany officially notified the United Kingdom and the other great powers today of her intention to create a military air force. This is a violation of the Treaty of Versailles, which forbids Germany having military aircraft.

The notification to Britain came through Captain F. P. Don, British Air Attache at the Berlin Embassy. He reported he had been informed by the German Air Ministry as from Mar. 1 last men chosen as officers in Germany's "future" air force would change their badges and take Reichswehr rank, wearing shoulder straps similar to those of the Reichswehr officers.

This means of course their status is changed and Germany has paved the way to creation of a new air force.

Actually this constitutes nothing more than an official admittance of what has long been rumored a fact.

Germany's feverish development of civil aviation, her mysterious construction of secret air bases with underground shelters for bombers, has long been a matter of comment. It was expected a favorable opportunity she would throw off the mask. But this is the first time she has officially notified the powers of her intentions.

So far, it is explained here, there has only been a technical violation of the Versailles Treaty inasmuch as the new force has not yet been officially created. But with the changed status of the air force officers, its official establishment is only a matter of time.

The British government has not yet taken any action on the German notification. The situation is under consideration and will undoubtedly be discussed during the coming visit of Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, to Berlin, now expected to take place about the end of the month.

The loyal air fighters of the beleaguered Greek government dominated the fighting during the first few hours of the revolt. Attacking rebel groups, on land and water, the airmen inflicted staggering damage on the rebel forces, and drove a squadron of mutinying destroyers away from the Greek coast to the open Mediterranean.

PLAN OF HOUSING FOR PERMANENCY, URGED ON GOV'T

Chairman W. L. Somerville Favors Creation of Permanent Authority

REGIONAL BODIES

Money at 2½ Per Cent Would Be Factor

OTTAWA, March 12.—(CP) — Adoption of a definite housing plan by the Dominion Government which would make necessary credit available was urged today on the Parliamentary Committee on housing by spokesmen of the National Construction Council of Canada.

Five council members presental evidence. They were Gordon M. West, acting president; W. L. Somerville, chairman of the Council's Housing Committee, J. H. Craig, J. A. Bradley and I. Markus, secretary of the Council.

If any Housing programme was to be initiated it should follow the line of a permanent policy which might serve as a balance against bad times, said Mr. Craig.

Success in England

Administration of Housing for the lowest income groups must be undertaken on the basis of social service. This factor was largely responsible for success of a great number of such developments in England.

Mr. Somerville crystallized his recommendations as follows:

"Creation of a permanent National Housing Authority to draw up and establish minimum Housing standards applicable to existing as well as new Housing. This Authority would also draw up and establish regulations on rehabilitation of existing sub-standard dwellings. It would make recommendations as to distribution of funds and administer its provisions on repayments, housing renewals and maintenance."

Regional bodies should be set up to administer the plan while provinces should pass enabling legislation to allow municipalities to come under the scheme.

Money, said Mr. Somerville, should be made available at 2 1-2 per cent. interest and some of it should be allocated to rehabilitating existing houses by private enterprise.

Premier Bennett to Rest For Four Week Period; Complete Quiet Ordered

Precautionary Measures Taken as Disturbance Subsides

EXERCISE AFTER REST

Complete Restoration to Vigor Expected by Doctors

Ottawa, March 12—(CP)—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was resting comfortably today and following strictly orders of his physician that he must have complete quiet for two weeks.

Although they were assured by specialists last week there was no definite diagnosis of heart disease, a cardiac weakness which developed when he prepared to return to work Thursday led his physician to order a further period of complete rest. There was said to be no reason why Mr. Bennett should not have a complete recovery.

Disturbance Disappears

When the Prime Minister suffered a semi-fainting attack last Thursday his physicians found a disturbance of the cardiac rhythm which in some instances is said to indicate conditions which might lead to the formation of a blood clot. The disturbance had entirely disappeared when the physician's bulletin was issued yesterday but he felt precautionary steps should be adopted.

It was learned the Prime Minister's physician wishes him to remain in bed two weeks and to spend two weeks more restricted to light exercise to regain his normal strength and health.

Sees No Visitors

In order he may be relieved as far as possible from all worries associated with his office Mr. Bennett has not been conferring with any of his political associates in the last few days and will not receive visitors until late this week at the earliest. His sister, wife of Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canadian Minister to Washington, has been with the Prime Minister since Saturday.

PRISON GOVERNOR SPIKES UNTRUTH

Story Vermilyea Not Allowed Puzzles Given Denial

Annoyed by false rumors and reports that have been circulating throughout the country regarding the Hastings County jail since the incarceration of Harold W. Vermilyea, Gaol Governor G. H. French today held up a clipping from an Ontario, California paper, a publication from the former home town of Vermilyea, as one example of untruths being published.

The clipping drew attention to a statement that no cross word puzzles were being allowed Vermilyea since his confinement in the local jail.

"Certainly he's allowed the puzzles—we've been giving them to him right along. They're one of his chief forms of mental recreation," commented Governor French.

"There have been a lot of things published about this jail that have been absolutely wrong."

Vermilyea is still the "perfect prisoner", according to officials.

SPEAKER EXPLAINS THE SOLAR SYSTEM

The mysteries and wonders of Astronomy were vividly explained to the members of the local Y's Mens' Club at their weekly meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, when Mr. R. D. Davidson, member of the Belleville Collegiate staff, was the speaker of the night.

Terming astronomy as "the silent symphony of spinning spheres" Mr. Davidson gave a lengthy and detailed account of the many solar systems included in the universe at large, "We have our solar system, that includes the earth and nine surrounding planets, all rotating around the sun, each one of these planets having one or two moons of its own. There are known to be over 30 large units similar to the solar system, all rotating within themselves and also rotating around other larger systems," stated Mr. Davidson as he informed the club members, that the steadily shining stars seen on earth were planets of our own solar system, while other stars, that merely twinkled were planets of another solar system.

"There have been approximately one hundred million stars, that have been counted by the use of large powerful telescopes of which from three to five thousand are visible to the naked eye", added Mr. Davidson as he terminated his educational and interesting talk on the subject of light. The speaker was introduced by Y'sman J. E. Shortt and thanked on behalf of the club members by Chairman Mel Blanchard. Mr. Earl Lyman, International President of the Y's Men will be a guest of the local club over the next week end. Special mention was made of the Y's Men's annual St. Patrick dance to be held on Monday night. The committee in charge met last night and are preparing for the largest crowd ever to attend a Y's Men's function in Belleville. The usual fine music and favors are being fully arranged for.

Mr. Laurie Lewis Reports Upon Recent Convention

R. WOODLEY SPEAKS

Belleville Retail Merchants' Association met in monthly meeting Monday evening at Dickens' Coffee Shop when a considerable amount of important business was transacted. President Jack McIntosh occupied the chair, assisted by Vice President R. J. Wray and Secretary W. J. Doyle.

An interesting item of business concerned the report of the delegates to the Thirty-Second Annual Convention of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, Ontario Division, at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, February 20 and 21. The delegates were Laurie Lewis and Russell Woodley, who gave excellent reports of the proceedings.

Laurie Lewis in his report on the convention stated that it was a very efficiently and business-like conducted affair, and he paid high tribute to the good work of organization and program making of the secretary Mr. Houghan. The high spot of the convention was, of course, the speech of Hon. H. H. Stevens, already reported fully in the press. Matters of vital interest to every retail merchant in Canada were discussed including "Unemployment Insurance and Retail Sales People." It was decided to ask the government to exempt the retail trade from the provisions of this act, at least temporarily, as employees of stores were more permanently employed than those in factories, and it would impose a needless burden on store executives and employees. In the meantime the matter is to be studied with the idea of evolving an alternative.

Before Legislature

The Hawkers' and Peddlers' Act was discussed at length at the convention and Mr. Lewis explained what is being done to put teeth into this act at present ineffective in a great many cases. The Transient Traders' Act is also to be strengthened. The Wages and Garnishee Act was discussed in the light of amendments proposed in the Legislature which will weaken the act and affect merchants adversely.

Mr. Lewis urged the Belleville association to get busy and strengthen the hands of the parent association which will wait upon the Legislature this week asking that acts affecting the retail trade be strengthened and opposing the proposed weakening of the Wages and Garnishee Act and others. A petition should be sent to Toronto setting forth the views of the Belleville association as well as a wire to the local member.

Taxation of mail order business was also discussed as well as the proposed abolition of imprisonment for debt and exemptions of household goods to the value of $500 instead of $200.

Federal Referee

The suggestion of Mr. Stevens including the appointment of a Federal Referee for industry and commerce with power to deal with unfair trading acts and similar affairs met with hearty endorsation at the convention as well as other items in the Stevens policy to correct evils affecting the retail trade as exposed at the Price Spreads investigation.

Mr. Lewis covered the ground in a very lucid and satisfactory manner showing the important work that is being done by the officers of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada both at Toronto and Ottawa in watching the interests of the retail merchants, promoting legislation in their favor, and of late assisting in the Price Spreads Investigation at Ottawa.

Unemployment Insurance

Delegate Russell Woodley gave some other aspects of the convention and explained the opposition to the Unemployment Insurance Act as affecting retail stores, outlined the financial position of the parent organization and revealed that Ontario merchants were carrying the largest share of the burden of expense in protecting the interests of the retail merchants of all Canada. He also outlined the work of an efficient credit bureau and suggested active steps being taken to institute one here. As an illustration of how the Unemployment Insurance Act would affect the small home-owned store Mr. Woodley quoted one retail establishment which if it had been paying into the fund for the past several years would have paid in $4,500 and only one girl employee would have been eligible for benefits during that time and that for only $135. Exemption of the retail trade from the provisions of the act would be asked, at least temporarily, until conditions could be studied and alternative proposals submitted to the government.

Mr. Woodley gave much useful information in regard to the convention and the working of the parent association generally in safeguarding and improving the interests of the retail merchants throughout Canada.

A vote of thanks was tendered Messrs. Lewis and Woodley on motion of R. J. Wray and Ed. Logan.

A committee was appointed of Messrs. R. J. Wray, Douglas Rowe and Russell Woodley to get all particulars as to a credit bureau and report.

Half Holidays

Wednesday half holidays will be observed as last year, June, July, August and September.

Daylight Saving was endorsed and the City Council will be asked to re-enact the by-law of last year.

Other matters of interest to the association were discussed and appropriate action taken.

"My dear general," he said, "I am as much if not more an American citizen as your are or ever will be. Your parents are but one generation removed from Ireland. My paternal grandfather's bones are buried in Lackawanna, New York. . . . I was always an American citizen." He explained he was born of American parents on Canadian soil.

In asserting his right to speak on political and economic topics, Father Coughlin declared: "Someone, irrespective of his Catholicity, or of his Protestantism, or of his Jewish faith, was required to raise his voice, if for no other reason than to condemn those, who refusing to leave this land of sorrow, obstructed our passage to the land of prosperity. . . . In accepting the dignities which my religion conferred upon me, I sacrificed in no respect the rights identified with my citizenship."

In assailing the former NRA chief for classifying him with Talleyrand of France and Judas Iscariot, Father Coughlin said:

"General, what insanity possessed you to say such things? What desperation forced you to utter such exaggeration?"

Admitting his Radio League of The Little Flower gained $12,000 by an investment in silver futures, Father Coughlin said it had brought him no personal profit.

"General Johnson," he said, "some of your fair weather friends have heaped upon my desk the fulsome record of your personal life. . . . I disdain to refer to it. . . .

"I am not important, nor are you, but the doctrines I preach are important.

". . . These cry babies which you so inadvertently called them, these cry babies of yours whose tears have welled to their eyes because you and your kind have lashed them at the pillar of poverty . . . will never forget you and your Wall Streeters. . . .

'My friends, I appeal to you . . . to bear no ill will against General Johnson. . . . Today he appears before us as a figure to be pitied and not condemned. He has been cast out by an administration because he and his plans were a failure. . . . Remember that he is to be regarded as a cracked gramaphone record. . . ."

Father Coughlin denied he had broken with the Roosevelt administration.

"I still proclaim that it is either Roosevelt or ruin. I support him today and will support him tomorrow. . . ."

HOURS OF LABOR IN INDUSTRIES ARE SET IN BILL

Employers Given Three Months to Adjust Staffs After Passage

PREMIER NOT WELL

Cardiac Disturbance is Passed But Rest is Needed

Ottawa, March 12 (CP)—In an atmosphere of peace and harmony so far as organized party tactics are concerned the House of Commons makes steady progress with its sessional programme.

Occasional expressions of strong individual opinion provoke sharp words now and then but as members advance to final reading of the Unemployment Insurance Bill today they can look back on several weeks of freedom from prolonged displays of factional spirit.

The equable tenor of the House was in evidence yesterday, when Acting Prime Minister Sir George Perley referred to the continued illness of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett. Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal Leader, at once assured Sir George he would consider it a privilege to do anything he could to expedite business before the House.

The first direct reference in the House of the Prime Minister's illness came with Sir George's reading of the bulletin issued yesterday by Mr. Bennett's physician. This described the Prime Minister's condition and told of a cardiac disturbance which, although it had disappeared, would necessitate a period of rest.

"I hasten to say to my Right Honorable friend, that I am sure all honorable members of this House will learn with very deep regret the Prime Minister's condition is as serious as is indicated in the communication just read," said Mr. King. "We will all hope with the Acting Leader of the government and Honorable gentlemen opposite, that by taking the rest, which his physician has advised the Prime Minister may have not only a speedy but also a complete recovery and that soon he may be back in the House again."

Election of Hon. Raymond D. Morand as Deputy Speaker brought another display of unanimity. Mr. King, for the Liberals and E. J. Garland, for the Farmer-Labor group, expressed their hearty concurrence in the government's selection.

3 Months to Adjust

When the House considered the government's eight-hour-day and 48-hour-week legislation Hon. Wesley Gordon, Minister of Labor, announced Canadian industry will have a period of three months in which to adjust staffs before it comes into effect. Although the Act will be operative as soon as passed by parliament. Three months will elapse before penalties will be assessed for infractions.

The House took three minutes to give second reading to the bill but ran into snags in committee stage after a 3 1-2 hours' discussion. It will be debated later in the week, when the Labor Minister has drafted two or three amendments.

Nine of the 11 clauses passed through committee stage but those remaining were most important. The Labor Minister said he would redraft two clauses empowering the government to exclude industries, which would be impeded or penalized by the eight-hour day.

The government's object, said Mr. Gordon, was not to "bite off more than it could chew." For this reason the bill did not extend to all workers. He thought nothing but confusion would result if it were launched on too broad a scale and the government had to start narrowing it down to workable proportions. This was in answer to Humphrey Mitchell (Labor Hamilton East) and several other members, who pleaded for inclusion of restaurant and hotel employees under protection of the bill.

Mr. King suggested the question of the constitutional validity of the measure be submitted to the courts but Mr. Gordon would not agree. He said the government was satisfied it was valid and the best course was to enact it and await developments. Liberals have contended all along the bill is beyond the competency of parliament but Conservatives have been just as determined in the opposite opinion.

MAKES PORT DISABLED

Halifax, March 11 (CP) — The overdue collier P. Madsen, beaten for weeks by Atlantic gales, pushed slowly into Halifax harbor today with her engines partly disabled.

As she made port after a hazardous 25-day passage from the Tyne, a second steamer was limping down the Nova Scotia Coast toward Halifax. The Canadian government icebreaker Montcalm had lost two propellor blades trying to crash through the ice into Sydney harbor.

FIGHTS FOR LIFE

London, Ont., Mar. 12—(CP) — Struck by a motorist who failed to stop, Alex Walker, farm hand of the eighth concession of London Township, is fighting for his life in St. Joseph's Hospital. Mr. Walker regained consciousness Saturday morning. He was hit near the village of St. John's late Friday night.

Peace and Comfort

Tobacco is universally conceded to be one of Nature's finest gifts to mankind. It is a gift that man cherishes dearly, because of the comfort, the solace, it brings to him. It induces and disseminates a rare sense of peacefulness. It is in truth the very essence of peace.

Indian tradition associates its earliest uses with the promotion of peace. When the Great Spirit had to be propitiated, tobacco was the favoured form of peace-offering. When warring tribes came together to settle their differences, the pipe was the pledge of fidelity, and the seal of treaties.

And down through the intervening years, it has been around this note of peace, of soothing tranquility, that its virtues have had their highest meed of praise.

T. C. Haliburton (Sam Slick), in his "Clockmaker" sketches, eulogized tobacco in these terms: "The moment a man takes to a pipe he becomes a philosifer; it's the poor man's friend; it calms the mind, soothes the temper, and makes a man patient onder trouble. It has made more good men, good husbands, kind masters, indulgent fathers, and honest fellers than any other blessed thing in this universal world."

The pardonable exaggerations of a devotee? Not at all! Underlying every one of these claims of tobacco's beneficence, there is a solid foundation of scientific fact.

Ask your physician, and he will tell you that tobacco does soothe tensed nerves, does relax tensed muscles, and that in so doing it does minister to your physical comfort and to your peace of mind.

As purveyor to the public at large of tobacco in all its forms—cigars, cigarettes, pipe tobacco—this Company finds cause for much gratification in the thought that every day it is contributing to the comfort, the contentment, and the happiness of millions of Canadians.

As Charles Kingsley so aptly remarks in his novel Westward Ho!, tobacco is " . . . a lone man's companion, a bachelor's friend, a hungry man's food, a sad man's cordial, a wakeful man's sleep, and a chilly man's fire."

TEN CASES AT LONDON ASSIZE

Six Charges Manslaughter Arising Out of Motor Crashes

London, Ont., Mar. 12—(CP) — Ten criminal cases, including three blackmail indictments, were on the list for trial as the Spring Assizes opened before Chief Justice Rose Monday afternoon.

Besides the extortion charges, there are six of manslaughter all arising from fatal motor accidents, and one of theft from His Majesty's mails. As true bills of indictment had been previously returned in all of the other cases, only two charges were referred to the grand jury for consideration.

The two charges sent to the grand jury are those of Harold Hambidge of Aylmer and George Pitts, Toronto salesman, both charged with manslaughter.

SECOND READING OF DIONNE BILL PASSED QUICKLY

TREATED AS BABIES

All Contracts Must Be Approved by The Minister

Toronto, March 12—(CP)—Prospect of further discussion of Hydro was bright today as Ontario's legislators prepared once more to resume the Throne Speech Debate, which had stood adjourned since last Thursday night.

First speaker will be Arthur Ellis (Cons., Ottawa South) who will continue the address he started before adjournment. He is expected to go further into the Hydro question. He will be followed by William Newman (Lib. Victoria-Haliburton) who said yesterday he would touch on Hydro but concentrate largely on unemployment.

The Throne Speech Debate has developed into a discussion of power purchase contracts ever since Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck made a three-day speech on Hydro at the opening of the debate.

Highlight of yesterday's session was giving second reading to the Bill of Hon. David A. Croll, Minister of Welfare and Municipal Affairs, which aims to make the Dionne quintuplets "special wards of His Majesty the King."

Although Oliva Dionne, father of the babies, protested in an interview at North Bay, that the bill would split the family in two, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn announced the bill would go through in its present form.

Little Opposition

The bill met little opposition. Col. W. H. Price (Cons., Toronto-Parkdale) said, however, the House should know how far it goes because tremendous justification would be required for taking away the rights of parents over their children.

Mr. Croll described the babies as "Our Royal Family" and declared the government is trying to treat them as babies and not as freaks.

"We don't want them exhibited between a sword swallower and some bearded woman on a Chicago midway," he said.

The Minister reviewed the government's interest in the babies and Attorney-General Roebuck's placing them under a board of guardians after an effort was made to have them exhibited in Chicago. He said the bill is designed to remove any doubt as to the original guardianship.

By the bill, the babies are to be reared in the father's faith, be under the guardianship until they reach their majority at 18 years and all contracts must receive the approval of the Minister.

Contracts which previously were unapproved are void and the bill provides they cannot be sued upon in any court.

Second Readings

Second reading was given five bills. One, a proposal to amend the Factory, Shop and Office Buildings Act to make closing regulations apply to boot and shoe repair shops was withdrawn at the request of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn.

The five acts amended are: Municipal Act, Assessment Act, Highway Traffic Act, Deserted Wives and Children's Act and the Provincial Parks Act.

OUTLAY ON ARMS STIRS LABORITES

Government Warmly Defends Action in Rapidly Arming World

London, Mar. 12 (CP)—Hotly attacked by the Labor party in the House of Commons yesterday the government warmly defended its policy of strengthening armaments with the declaration no country that is unwilling to defend itself can have any power in the world.

Clement Richard Attlee, Labor spokesman, moved a motion of censure and declared the now-famous white paper, which accompanied increased defence estimates last week, indicated the government was moving away from the League and its principles "back to the world anarchy of an armaments race".

Stanley Baldwin, government leader in the absence of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, immediately answered with a denial the white paper implied any abandonment of the collective security policy or any turning away from the League of Nations.

"In a rapidly arming world," Mr. Baldwin said, "Great Britain has delayed and delayed, hoping for the conclusion of an effective disarmament convention."

Government supporters cheered lustily and thumped their desks when he added: "I believe that by carrying out what we have put in the white paper, so far from being inimical to peace, we shall have helped in our effort to make peace more secure. The country that shows itself unwilling to make what preparations is requisite for its own defence will never have any force, moral or material in, in this world."

"I BLESS THE MAN WHO INVENTED KRUSCHEN SALTS"

NEURITIS AND A WOMAN'S GRATITUDE

There is a note of deep gratitude in this letter from a woman correspondent who writes about her neuritis:—

"Two years ago I had neuritis in my knees, having treatment for many months. Nothing seemed to do me any good. My legs were in crepe bandages, and all the summer I could not even go into my own garden. It was a great trial to me not to be able to go out. One day my husband said 'Why not try Kruschen, it may do you good?' I gave in and tried it. I was never so surprised in my life. In a week I began to walk, and was soon able to go out as usual. Everyone has asked me 'What did you take?'—they were so surprised to see me walking again. Needless to say, I told them—Kruschen. I am 54 years of age and I bless the man who invented Kruschen Salts."—(Mrs.) L. M.

The pains of neuritis and sciatica are a symptom of deeper trouble—the same trouble that causes rheumatism, gout and lumbago. They are a sign of an impure blood-stream. They show that poisons have crept into the blood.

Kruschen is a combination of six natural salts, which ensure internal cleanliness and keep the blood-stream pure. New and refreshed blood is sent coursing to every fibre of your being. Then, neuritis, sciatica and kindred ills all pass you by.

Adler is Sentenced to 9 Months' Term

Peterborough, Ont., March 11 — (CP)—Carleton W. Adler, 27-year-old Buffalo man, was sentenced to nine months in the Ontario Reformatory today when he was found guilty on three charges of false pretences. Police said he was wanted at Campbellford also.

According to police Adler obtained cars and goods here and in Campbellford, paying for them with allegedly worthless cheques. He was arrested with a girl from Campbellford in Buffalo but while on bail he was said to have left for Toronto where he was arrested and brought here.

ECONOMIC INDEX UP

The economic index of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics shows a gain for the second consecutive week. Measured by the index the economic conditions are developing favorably in the current period. The recovery of the two weeks offsets a considerable part of the recession during February.

The index consequently was 102.7 in the week ended March 2 compared with 102.3 in the preceding week and 92.7 in the same week of 1934.

The gains in these comparisons were 0.4 per cent and 10.8 per cent, respectively.

The index is based on six major factors wherever necessary for seasonal tendencies and weighted according to their significance for the purpose in hand.

Railway freight traffic was a favorable factor in February. The seasonally adjusted index of carloadings moved up sharply to a relatively high level in the last five weeks. The movement in the corresponding period of 1933, and also of 1934 was greatly exceeded by the recent records. The heavy movement of coal, pulpwood and miscellaneous commodities in the first eight weeks of the year over the same period of 1934 was no less than 10,405 cars.

The stability of commodity prices was again shown by the slight change in the weekly index of 567 commodities. The index was 72.3 compared with 72.1 in the preceding week and 72.2 in the same week of 1934.

FIGHTING RURAL FIRES

When the farmers of South Harwich purchased a fire-fighting apparatus, and stored it in the Blenheim fire hall, they started an idea which has already justified itself in results, and which bids fair to be popular in other districts. This fire-fighting equipment has paid for itself many times over, in the property it has saved from destruction.

This year farmers of Howard have adopted a similar proposal. At the recent municipal elections a bylaw was approved authorizing the purchase of fire-fighting equipment to serve the whole township, and arrangements are now under way to insure storage for it in Ridgetown.

Some years ago, when farm fires were occurring with more than usual frequency The News suggested that fire-fighting apparatus should be stationed at all strategic points in the country. A combination ladder truck and pumper purchased at moderate cost, could, in many instances prevent serious loss at farm fires. When fires break out there is no lack of volunteers, but they are in almost every instance handicapped by the lack of suitable equipment. Bucket brigades are often effective, to a certain extent, but in too many instances the only thing the neighbors can do is stand around and watch the buildings burn, hoping that a favorable wind will keep the damage down as low as possible.

In these days of improved highways, one piece of fire-fighting equipment can be made to serve a large territory. Splendid results are being obtained in South Harwich, and we have no doubt the wisdom of the Howard farmers in adopting the same idea will be proven should fires break out after the new equipment is ready for action.—Chatham News.

DR. INGE DISCUSSES PARTIES

Dr. W. R. Inge, late Dean of St. Paul's, speaking at the annual dinner of the Oxford Carlton Club, made a survey of all political parties and was critical of each one. Of the Socialists, he said they were purely predatory, and "I am sure they will die of sheer boredom." Sidney Webb (Lord Passfield) and people of that kind, said the Doctor, forget they have to deal with human beings, and "the Fabian farmyard would bore anyone to distraction." Proceeding, the speaker remarked that the Liberals "still ooze unctuous rectitude. Whether they are sheep without shepherds or shepherds without sheep, or whether they are neither sheep nor shepherds but only the crook, I do not know." Perhaps Lloyd George could answer this question of Dr. Inge. However the former Dean was just as puzzled about the Conservatives: "Are we ready to acquiesce in the plunder of our friends? Are we to go in the auction, in which case we are certain to be beaten every time? Or have we any principles of our own which we might insist whether in victory or defeat?"

Being dissatisfied with the three main parteis, Dr. Inge admitted that sometimes in his impatience he began to hanker after a Mussolini, but he did not think his countrymen would ever consent to live under a government in which it is a crime to speak evil "of our rulers." There can be no doubt as to that, for the British people are jealous of their liberties and their right to say what they think of the men they elect to carry on the national business. The famous critic evidently can give them no lead in the present circumstances, but they may be trusted to solve their problems now as in the past without resorting to dictatorships of whatever description. Freedom will surely be maintained.—Montreal Gazette.

USES HIS OWN NAME

Is the name Harold Fielding the best name with which to enter the art world? A sixteen-year-old boy violinist has decided that his own name is good enough with which to face the footlights. "I believe English audiences will give a native artiste due credit when once he gains their confidence," the youth says.

It is too bad that so many of the moving picture stars are not known by their own names, instead of creating fantastic euphonies which give no clue to their racial origin.

Canada has her own Edward Johnson and he has been as good, as "Johnson", a native name, as if he had been called by some outlandish name. Johnson must never be forgotten by Canadians for what he has done for the vogue of the family name.

Painters and writers are not so critical and cynical of the public's reaction—they use their own names. As a result Canadian names shine in the novel, poetry and in painting.

When will the people cease to look with cynicism and scorn on the home product? Somehow the belittlement of native art must be slapped.

Yet few Canadians or Americans change their names in ordinary walks of life. But it would be as reasonable for a merchant to change his name as it is for movie stars. Is not George Arliss as good an artist as if he permitted deluded people to call him Arlissowski.

Morgan Powell of the Montreal Star says:

"And the more I think of it, the more I admire those artistes who refuse to masquerade under some utterly meaningless foreign nomenclature. There may be some excuses in the case of an artiste who adopts the name of a benefactor out of a sense of gratitude. But it is surely a complete sign of an inferiority complex, under ordinary circumstances, to be ashamed of your own name. Any artiste worth his salt will stand upon his own talents and refuse the adventitious aid of some owski or inski or what-have-youski to success. Such a stepladder to meretricious fame must of necessity be built with wobbly rungs."

NEARLY 5 MILES A MINUTE

Though to the average man there seems little difference between 272 miles an hour and 276.816 miles, but it means a record. The average man might look upon the difference as a mere accident as the slightest increase would seem to make up the difference.

But that little difference or even any high speed may mean death to the driver, Sir Malcolm Campbell.

The Bluebird which the greatest driver of the world is hoping to make cover the measured mile (two ways) in a speed of over three hundred miles is a delicate machine, responding to the slightest varation of the course. What would be no more than a grain of sand to a machine at seventy-five miles an hour may seem almost a stone to a motorcar driven at three hundred miles an hour. The Bluebird, to prevent it taking to the air, carries a ballast of lead, and the machine itself is wide, indeed so wide that it could not be used for general use. All in all, the course and the car and the driver are made for speed.

To have a machine like the Bluebird running at large on the highways, roadways would have to be as wide as a couple of fields, and the world would have to be immensely wealthy to hold up the cost. It is said that the machine could scarcely run for a full hour for lack of water or means of cooling it.

How fast will motors travel on highways when they reach their peak? Not three hundred miles, not two hundred, and probably not more than one hundred according to one editor. Speed as great as that may be achieved but probably it cannot be possible to exceed it with safety and with advantage to any person. Of course the future has a knack of upsetting predictions and it is perhaps a little too risky to guess at the high speed on the highways.

The thing that excites most persons is the iron nerve of the driver. His control must be more dependable than the nerve of an airplane pilot making an even higher rate of speed. The question of engineering as it relates to construction of mechanism and fabrics, and the experience in building such a machine will no doubt redound to the advantage of industry and the driving public.

The keenest pangs the wretched find are rapture to the dreary void,—the leafless desert of the mind—the waste of feelings unemployed.—Byron.

There are many times and circumstances in life when "Our strength is to sit still."—Tryon Edwards.

Nature knows no pause in her development and progress and attaches her curse to all inaction.—Goethe.

AFTER FEVER

After fever, after pain
It is good to lie again
In the cool and snowy bed,
Strangely eased and comforted
By the murmur of the clock,
By the rustling hollyhock.

Now the old clock's speeches flow
Gently, kindly, soft and low,
Hollyhock outside the sill
Whispers at the light wind's will.
After fever, thirst and fret
Good to find the world is yet
Simple as in childhood's time;
Hollyhock and old clock's chime,
Sun and shadows as they stray
These suffice to fill the day.

CITY LIGHTS AND SHADOWS are reflected in the daily press at great length and variety, a fact which inspires a reader of this column to ruminate about "The Great Open Spaces" as follows:

A Study In Nature

Advice has been given, enough to fill volumes—all kindly meant, no doubt—instructing and warning the country visitor, of the dangers and difficulties of the city's "Great White Way". But, now that the season is at hand when the city dwellers will be turning to the country's open spaces, it seems in order for us to repay this 'kindly' interest, and initiate our innocent and unsuspecting city cousin into some of the intricacies of our own Great White Way.

So kindly note—if observance of the proprieties is essential in the city, it is even more so in the country, and in your communings with Nature. Here your every word and act goes on record—where the potatoes have eyes; the corn have ears, and there is scarcely an orchard without its Spies!

And Nature is so sensitive: Even the grain is easily shocked. Among the apple trees you may see the Maidens Blush. On provocation the trees have even been known to leave!

We must admit, however, that Nature has her wild moods and occasionally cuts loose for a holiday. 'Flags' wave on the marshes and all the little lakes and rivers wave back. The grass has blades; flowers carry pistils; the little grains shoot; fireflies in all directions. It is no uncommon thing to see a horsefly through a window and, to add to the confusion, myriads of little insects come out on the trees—and bark!

One last word of warning. When you go near the marshes beware of the Adder's Tongue; and don't be alarmed, if, in passing along the water's edge, you see a Cowslip. But, if farther out in the marsh, you should see Cat-tails, promise me you'll not wade out to see what's the matter with poor Pussy (will you?) for fear an ugly Bulrush-es out!

—"Country Cousin."

MANHATTANESE, AS ARTICULATED by Walter Winchell, in his Broadway column of the New York Mirror is sure somefin' and a never ending puzzle to language experts. First it was thought that Manhattanese could be classed with the dead languages, but that just wouldn't jell with Mrs. Winchell's boy Walter, who started it, getting a nickle a word, more or less. The language is alive all right, and just suitable for those who understand it best, the three-sheets-in-the-wind night prowlers of the Bright Light Open Spaces of Broadway. Here's a Winchell paragraph—we doubt if it ever finds a tonguehold in Canada:

"Earl T. Smith, who was just buried in Reno's love cemetery by Consuelo Vanderbilt, will middle-aisle it with Sid Mercer's lovely child, Frances...... The Herbert Brenon, Jrs., has had it undone....... The James Bartons are multiplying ......Bettie MacDonald, formerly of the Ziegfeld nunnery, who kept her marriage such a secret so long, has shelved him for her mater's mansion at 42 W. 12th...... Bennett Cerf's house guest at Nassau got by all the reporters disguised in a pair of black specs and a sable coat. She is Sylvia Sydney...... Duke Carafe D'Andria, and his new bride, Renee Thornton, are seeking an unwinder, already...... Dorothy Hart, the loveliest of the Lucky Strike ad brunettes, has been secretly riveted for six months to the proprietor of The Versailles, the town's newest smott spot...... Rudy Vallee and Alice Faye flew to Florida to thrash it out—because of Grace Poggi, now on the "Rex."

DELINQUENCY OVERCOME BY MEDICAL CARE

An Incorrigible Child May be a Sick Child

(Copyright, 1935, King Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

A delinquent child—a boy who, in one way or another, is incorrigible—may be a chronic liar, may steal, continually play truant, or exhibit other anti-social behavior. In other words, such a child is gradually heading for a criminal career, and parents find that despite everything they may do, whether in punishment or kindness, such a child remains lawless and unaffected.

Science—especially that branch known as medical psychology or psychiatry—having made an intensive study of delinquent children, now offers considerable hope for their cure.

First of all, it should be remembered that in incorrigible child may be nothing more than a sick child. Cases of persistent lying, stealing, lack of affection and deliberate viciousness have been found to be caused by adenoids, diseased tonsils—even eyestrain uncorrected by glasses. In practically all cases, after the physical defect has been remedied, the child has become normal in every way.

After all, a healthy child tends to be a well-behaved child. To be sure a certain amount of mischievousness is perfectly natural, but this is something quite different from the trouble caused by the truly delinquent child.

Among the diseases that often are responsible for delinquency are anaemia, kidney or heart disorder, malnutrition, tuberculosis and St. Vitus' Dance. Nor are the physical handicaps which I have mentioned the only ones that may be responsible. Therefore, be sure that your boy or girl has undergone, and continues to undergo, repeated and thorough physical examinations at regular intervals.

Medical psychology states, also, that besides physical causes for delinquency there may be, and usually are, mental causations as well. First of all, a child who is physically under par is usually not as well-poised mentally as he might be, and particularly is this true of the emotional system. On the other hand, mental backwardness, if not definite feeblemindedness, may be the real and actua reason behind a child's chronic misbehaviour.

Surely, one cannot expect a boy or girl to conduct himself or herself in accordance with social standards if the brain cells are diseased or absent. In many mental defectives the nerve cells in the brain are fewer than normal and are misshapen. Such conditions may be present from birth, though sometimes they are due to severe illness or injury during early childhood.

Among the most difficult delinquents are those whose mental defects are on the border-line. Such children may become the worst criminals, having sufficient intellectual power to reason and to plan, while possessing at the same time a defective mind incapable of controlling itself, this type of individual may pass as normal for years until he commits some atrocity which called him to the attention of the authorities.

Children who are not chronically delinquent sometimes exhibit such tendencies. Often this is merely the expression of an unstable nervous system.

Lastly, the possibility of unbalance here can often be corrected; the delinquent child readily becoming a perfectly well-poised, well-balanced and loving individual.

RARE WHITE SPARROW CAPTURED

A rarity among birds of British Columbia—white sparrow—has been captured by Fred King of Vancouver. He saw it in his back yard and was so intrigued that he laid a trail to the chicken house and took possession of the tiny bird. He hopes by selective breeding to raise a family of the beautiful little feathered songsters.

Always try, before taking medicines, to correct constipation by diet and by exercise. A dish of stewed fruit at bedtime is beneficial. Three glasses of water should be drunk between meals. Leafy green vegetables should be eaten twice a day, as well as fresh fruits. Lastly exercise in the open air should be taken, with, perhaps, bending exercises twice a day in addition.

The King-to-be as a youthful sailor

IN the year 1868, Disraeli, the man who said of life: "Youth is a blunder, maturity a struggle, old age a regret," succeeded Lord Derby as Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

In the same year, the second son of Edward, Prince of Wales, and Princess Alexandra, was three years old and a mischievous child.

Little Prince George, Who is shown above at the age of three, attired in a natty sailor suit (he was destined to wear a sailor's uniform for many years of his life) was allowed much greater freedom than was his older brother, Prince Albert Victor (Duke of Clarence). Albert was being groomed for a kingship, and the royal household was under the stern rule of the aging Queen Victoria.

All during the early years of his life, Prince George idolized his elder brother, Prince Albert Victor, and when he was four years old he was allowed to go to "school" at Sandringham with him. School for the Royal Princes consisted of the tutelage of John Neal Daltin, the curate of Sandringham, and later Professor Drew of King's College, London, who often expressed his admiration for Prince George's ability and his regret that the Prince was unable to continue his university career.

The childhood of the two Princes was an uneventful one, so carefully were they watched and trained by their mother and father and by the Queen. But, since Prince Albert Victor was being groomed for the throne, Prince George grew up more freely and the natural mischievous traits of boys was not entirely suppressed in the king-to-be

LOCAL GROUP IN DRAMA FESTIVAL

Young Thespians Enter Play in Regional Festival in Kingston

This is young Thespian week when amateur groups from all over Eastern Ontario meet in Kingston for the Drama Festival which is to be held in Convocation Hall, and which also explains the frenzied atmosphere of hustle and bustle around the stage in the Collegiate Auditorium. Since the Festival was first announced, the Green Room Club in the local Collegiate had a production entered, and has matched its talent with that of groups from Ottawa, Kingston and other places throughout Ontario where the art of the drama and its production are watched with keen interest and loyalty supported; where the opening night of a new play is an event.

The play chosen by the Club for this year's presentation is "Lucrezia Borgi's Little Party" by J. A. Talbot, and is a comedy in one act.

The play is interesting from start to finish, and the various roles are more than adequately filled. It is a side-splitting comedy, and will, without the slightest doubt prove to be the most interesting and commendable attempt the club has yet made. With all the star players of "The Queen's Husband" cast in this one-act play brought under the directing hands of Miss Merry, and moulded into their parts after months of intensive training and rehearsal, those who intend seeing it can be assured that they will witness a new high in play excellence and entertainment.

The Club presents this play in Belleville on March the fourteenth and then on the sixteenth, the players perform in Convocation Hall Kingston in competition with the other competing groups in Eastern Ontario. In addition to the Festival entry, the Club also presents on Thursday two other plays "On Dartmoor", another one-act play, introducing some new talent, being rehearsed and directed under the capable guidance of Miss Billings. The other play "Half-an-hour" by J. M. Harrie, a one-act, three-scene presentation is directed by Miss Hudgins and Miss Wellbanks.

Never before has every member of the Club seemed to take such pride in its activities: offered to work so willingly, or co-operate so readily, and it is a foregone conclusion that the performance to be presented will be the very acme of excellence.

Colds Leave Impurities in the Blood

That is one reason why you are often tired, listless and weak after a cold.

To disperse these impurities, take a bottle or two of Fellows' Syrup Compound of Hypophosphites.

Fellows' Syrup contains the "Vital 3" (calcium, phosphorus, iron) and other blood purifiers that science has proved to be effective in helping to reduce blood impurities. It aids in enriching the blood corpuscles with new energy and vitality.

The restorative effect of the "Vital 3" on blood, nerves, muscles and bones is so vigorous that you'll surprise yourself with your quick "pick-up" after taking a bottle or two of Fellows' Syrup. 29G

'Refrigerator' To Heat House Will be Used

Ithaca, N.Y., Mar.12 (AP)—A "refrigerator" will heat your home by and by, says Prof. H. W. Riley of the New York State College of Agriculture, at Cornell University.

The "refrigerator" will pick up heat from outdoors and discharge it into the house, says he.

Coils of copper tubing would extend through the holes in the side of the house to the outside air. There the heat would be picked up. On the inside the tubing would lead successively through a pump, a coil and a valve. The pump would compress and move the gas. The valve would allow the gas to expand. A gas such as mythyl chloride, sulphur dioxide, freon, or ammonia would be used inside the tubing.

"This gas will become warmer than the air when the pump presses it. The pump will suck in cold gas from outdoors and compress it. This will squeeze the heat out of the gas and raise its temperature. The hot gas will flow through the coil inside the house and make the tubing hot. A fan will blow the house air around the coil and carry the heat away. That will warm the house."

The affirmative side was taken by Jack Doyle, James Peets and Angela Whalen and the negative by Douglas Duminie, Edmund Esbaugh and Helen McQuaid. The arguments were very ably presented by all the gifted speakers and the task of the judges, Miss Hurley, Mrs. P. L. Lynch and Miss Rierdon, was very difficult. The decision was finally given in favour of the affirmative. Jimmie Belair acted as chairman for the debate. Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson commended the students for the careful preparation and splendid delivery of the debate. The regular business meeting of the League followed.

World Day of Prayer

On Friday afternoon a number of interested folk from the three appointments on Rawdon Circuit, Mount Pleasant, Wellman's and Bethel gathered at the latter church for the annual "World Day of Prayer Service."

The programme was based on the theme "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens" and was prepared by a Baroness of Holland.

Seated on the platford were Mrs. Sam Elliott, President of Bethel Women's Association, Mrs. Arthur Phillips, President of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society and Mrs. James Sharp, Mrs. Geo. Maybee, leader of Wellman's Daisy Mission Band and the pastor Rev. F. G. Joblin.

Miss Mildred Elliott presided at the organ throughout the service in her usual fine style and the service opened with the Doxology and the leader Mrs. Elliott read some quotations from the 107th Psalm.

All sang "O Master of the Waking World" and Mr. C. U. Heath offered a gracious prayer.

Mrs. Phillips took charge of the responses based on "The Law of God" followed by a prayer in unison.

The congregation joined in "Jesus Lover of my Soul," and Mrs. Maybee led in the responses bearing on "The New Commandant" and "A Period of Thanksgiving with a Minute of Silent Prayer."

Another hymn "Go Labour On" was sung and Mrs. James Sharp presided over "Our Pattern," at this juncture the Misses Olive McConnell and Edna Thrasher with Miss Frances McKeown accompanist delighted with a duet "Thou Blessed Hour of Prayer."

The offering which goes for writing, printing and translating Christian literature in many lands was gathered by Messrs. James Warren and John Farrell and suitably dedicated.

Rev. F. G. Joblin gave an address on the origin and purpose of the "World Day of Prayer." He said Canada is noted in many fields if achievement throughout the world, with the production of wheat, gold and silver but greater than these material things is the "World Day of Prayer" which was started fifteen years ago by a small group of women. In two years it spread to the United States and in 1922 the first International Day of Prayer was held and today on March 8th 1935, prayer services are being held throughout the whole civilized world even at our small mission stations.

The reason for this day is simply that the world might pause in its wild rush for material things and spend an hour in supplication for the higher things of life. Christ's power and effectiveness is said to spring from His "Prayer Life" and if that avenue is chocked with worldliness, then that life is barren but if on the other hand it keeps in constant communion with Jesus then that life will radiate happiness and helpfulness to others.

The responses followed on "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens" and Mr. John Green of Bethel offered prayer for the unemployed. Mr. G. Weaver of Mount Pleasant prayed for "The Coming of God's Kingdom." Mr. Will Johnson of Salem led in prayer of Temperance and Mr. B. C. Tucker petitioned the Throne of Grace for the cause of "Missions".

A response from Mathew and Revelation was followed by singing "Lead on O King Eternal," and the pastor closed this impressive service with prayer.

DRASTIC REMEDY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have tried every means within my power to get my younger sister to take an interest in life again. Two years ago she lost her husband, whom she idolised, after eighteen months of happy marriage. She has refused to see her old friends or to go to any place of amusement, and sits at home surrounded by his pictures, books and other possessions. We're at our wit's end to know what to do about it, as we are afraid she may lose her mind through melancholia.

The other day a package of letters came into my possession, proving that her husband had been unfaithful to her during the last six months of his life. Would I be justified in showing her these, in the hope of setting her free from a morbid grief, which is likely to wreck her sanity?

Jessie

Your sister may be ill, and her depression of spirits due, in part at least, to some physical cause. Have you talked to a sensible doctor about her case? It seems to me distinctly risky to attempt the remedy you propose, without knowing first whether she would be strong enough to stand such a shock.

You hope to cure your sister by proving that the man she loved was unworthy. You may be taking from her the last shred of comfort. A much simpler remedy would be to move her into entirely new surroundings, and try to replace these reminders of her late husband.

Her Idea of Going "Steady"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I've been going "steady" with, for the past two years, has talked to me something awful. He considered himself engaged to me, and I did not. I don't think going "steady" means an engagement. It means going with one man and giving him a preference as to dates and expecting him to treat you well, take you out, give you presents, etc.

Then if you come across someone you like better, of who treats you better, you're free to go 'steady' with the new one. At least that's my idea of it. But this first boy friend called me a gold-digger and other things, which I will not relate.

Don't you think I'm within my rights in switching to a man I like better and who treats me better? That's my opinion, anyway.

Florrie

Not long ago the question of going "steady" was discussed in this column. Some young people regard that type of comraderie as the equivalent of an engagement. Others look upon it as a temporary companionship. The latter is evidently your idea. But, if the first young man considered himself positively engaged and gave you expensive presents under that impression, the conversational thing would be to return them.

Correct Manners

LADIES ONLY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Several girls have been discussing whether or not it is appropriate to have young men at a shower given for the bride-to-be. Some think it is not appropriate and others think that if the groom isn't going to give a bachelor dinner, that it is perfectly right to have both sexes at the shower. Will you please settle this dispute?

S.

At the bridal- shower- proper it isn't customary to have men guests. A shower is essentially a woman's party. However, sometimes men are invited to come in after the shower, and the party is continued. For instance, the shower may be a tea or bridge party, in the afternoon, and then the men may "join the ladies", for a cocktail party or for a buffet party, or for dinner.

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in a few months and Mother would like to send wedding invitations. Would it be proper to have them printed or otherwise, and how should they be worded. The invitation is for the church ceremony and reception after. It is to be an informal wedding and but forty guests will be invited. It would save a lot of trouble if cards were printed. We would like to do the correct thing in this matter.

Anxious Reader

It isn't the amount of trouble involved that determines the kind of invitation we send for a marriage. It's the degree of formality. An informal wedding, with only forty guests invited, demands an informal invitation. So the correct form is for your mother, who is to be the hostess of the occasion, to write the notes of invitation. Somewhat like this:

Dear Georgia,

Madeline and Tom are to be married, at a small informal wedding, in The United Church, on Tuesday, the first day of May, at four o'clock. We all very much want to have you and Jack with us at the church for the ceremony, and later at our home for a small reception of relatives and close friends. Do say that you will both come, won't you?

Dearest love to you both.

Cordially,
Martha Smith Brown

Widow's Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me as to which is the correct way to sign by name. I am a widow and I have been told that it is wrong to use his first name. I have been signing Mrs. Clarence M. Downs and they say I should use my own name, Mrs. Edith Downs. What is correct.

Widow

You are right — you use exactly the same forms of signature that you used when your husband was living. Your visiting-card, for instance, should still read as it did when your husband was living: Mrs. Clarence Morton Downs.

And the signature to your business letters, and your letters to people who must be informed of your formal name, should be

Yours very truly,
Edith Smith Downs (or Edith Downs)
Mrs. Clarence Downs

And this is the correct form of your signature of your letter to me.

MELROSE W.M.S.

On account of the regular monthly meeting and the World Day of Prayer coming so close together in the week the two meetings were combined and held at the home of Mrs. E. M. Badgley, March 8. The president presided and opened the meeting with a hymn followed with prayer by the president. Minutes of previous meeting were read and adopted.

Roll call was answered with a verse of Scripture beginning with the letter M.

Items of business were transacted.

Mrs. C. Haight and Mrs. G. McLaren were appointed delegates to attend the W.M.S. Presbyterial to be held in Picton.

Theme: "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens".

The World Day of Prayer program was followed throughout.

Mrs. G. Snider rendered a very appropriate piano solo, "Sweet Hour of Prayer", which was very much appreciated. Mrs. G. McLaren gave a short talk on the "Origin and Purpose of the World Day of Prayer". The offering was then received with dedicatory prayer by the president. Prayers were offered by Mrs. F. Bennett, Mrs. G. E. Simpkins and Mrs. C. Jeffrey. The meeting closed with the first verse of hymn, "Lead On O King Eternal" and all repeating the Lord's prayer in unison.

A dainty lunch was served and a social half hour spent.

Fashion Flashes

You will be looked at if you wear a smart new hat that is different. Such a model is a wide-brimmed affair with a high crown. It is fashioned of broad, white stiffened grosgrain ribbon braided in a basket-weave pattern.

In our arms we hold one of the successes of the mode, since sleeves have become so important again. A new coat owes much of its smartness to the sleeves, as otherwise it is quite plain. It is of nevy blue linen done on slim lines and the wide sleeves imitate a parachute by using five rows of widely spaced cording.

Stay home and give your next tea party instead of entertaining in a restaurant For then you'll have an opportunity to show how smart you look in your new negligee. A delightful modes is in white chiffon with large polka dots of gleaming silver thread. The neckline is cowl-draped and there are short, loose sleeves.

Help along your wardrobe by adding to it one of the new Norfolk jackets. These are done in the British manner double-breasted, unlined and with tailored notched revers. These jackets are made in various colors with the plaided design done in sporting colors so that they can be worn with different skirts and sport things.

Take along one of he new linen deck coats if you are going for a cruise. A nice model is in navy blue inen. It hangs to the kneeline in loose folds below the fitted waistline and has large patch pockets.

There's no use taking evening frocks of heavy fabrics to the Southland or California's desert resorts. Wear something swishy and ethereal. Such a model is in white lace with a large, raised flower pattern worn over black net with pleated ruffles of black taffeta.

Give "War" Toys To Boys?

By LISA GRENELLE

Johnny got two boxes of soldiers for Christmas, an air rifle, a toy sword and a couple of books concerning pirating, adventuring, fights, rescue and narrow escape from sudden death — boys' books, boys' toys.

Johnny played all day with his soldiers, he sat them up and shot them down, bellowed orders, arranged skirmishes and maneuvers, played at war.

Tommy Brown, Johnny's little neighbor, was brought into the game Two generals were needed. And how the battles raged! There were so many casualties that reinforcements were needed. "You got to do it," Johnny told Tom, "they were my soldiers remember — and you broke 'em."

"I didn't," cried Tom angrily, "they were defeated in battle. You never heard of a battle where no one was licked did you Not a real battle, all you lost was a couple of hundred men, Napoleon lost thousands — anyhow you should have retreated when you got to the doll house."

No One Objects

"Retreat?—me." exclaimed Johnny. "We never retreat — we fight to the last man."

Nobody objected very much. The boys didn't really do much harm. A number of parents secretly approved, for after all, it kept the children out of doors and occupied.

And then we wonder why wars don't cease.

Toy soldiers long have been considered the obvious present to give a small boy. Even spinster relatives, haters of any form of violence, mousy little friends of mothers, who wouldn't "hurt a fly" and just think war is too "horrible" are guilty. "What shall I give Johnny for Christmas " they ask. "Why not soldiers?"

There seems to exist still some idea that anything else just might be "sissy".

Is it only the destructive instinct that is manly

Some Outlet Needed

Is it only in little girls that we should develop the creative trend?

Are making bridges "sissy"? Or carpentering, modeling, chemistry

All children have a "will to power", the instinct of a healthy ego, which according to the supply of vitality and energy, demands some kind of active expression. Some destructive or constructive outlet is sought, depending upon its nature and class, on the tastes and initiative of the child in question. Depending also is the line of his first interest.

Is Johnny at three, four or six forming the habit to destroy of to build? Do you give him blocks or soldiers? Are you teaching him to model little figures out of wax or knock little figures down with a toy sword?

Remember that just as a child's first impressions are the strongest, so it follows those first toys are most likely to form his taste.

Divorced Wife Fights Division Of an Estate

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C., March 12.—(AP)—A fight by the divorced wife of the late Smith Reynolds to bar Libby Holman's son from sharing in Reynolds' vast tobacco estate became the main issue today in the court hearing for a division of the $30,000,000 vast fortune.

Mrs. Anne Cannon Reynolds Smith, heiress to the Cannon manufacturing millions, who divorced Reynolds six days before he married the Broadway singer was waging almost a single-handed battle before Judge Clayton Moore for rejection of the settlement proposed by the Reynolds family.

A battery of twenty-two lawyers presented the various aspects of the case.

Mrs. Smith's challenge to the rights of Christopher Smith Reynolds, two-year-old son of Miss Holman, was based on a contention her own divorce was invalid, and therefore ,the marriage of the actress was void and the boy not legally entitled to inherit from Reynolds.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Footlight Parade"

Gorgeous and Spectacular Musical Comedy Drama

With a cast headed by a dozen popular screen favorites and including 260 of the most beautiful girls in the world, "Footlight Parade", comes to the Capitol tomorrow for a one-day engagement by special request.

This new and mammoth spectacle is said to far surpass its predecessors in the originality and beauty of its ensembles, in its hilarious comedy drama plot, its songs and its romantic love interest. The screen play by Manuel Seff and James Seymour is a story of back stage life, but entirely different from anything before screened. It deals with a young musical comedy director who loses his job when talking pictures supplant musicals on the stage and turns to making prologues for motion picture theatres on a wholesale scale.

There is a definite and well knit plot with riotously funny situations and sparkling comedy. Two teams of players furnish the love interest played by James Cagney and Joan Blondell and Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell with Claire Dodd and Renee Whitney as the gold digging, dangerous damsels. A quartet of famous comedians furnish a large part of the hilarity. They are Frank McHugh as the dance director, Guy Kibbee, the theatrical magnate, Ruth Donnelly as his wife and Hugh Herbert the company's milksop censor. Others in the cast include such noted players as Gordon Westcott, Arthur Hohl, Philip Faversham, Barbara Rogers, Juliet Ware, Paul Porcasi, Herman Bing, Charles Wilson and William Granger.

Two of the big surprises in this vast production are the singing and dancing of Cagney, who really started his stage career as a hoofer.

Four gigantic musical numbers which he states surpass anything he has yet done are staged by Busby Berkeley who created and staged the ensembles for both "42nd Street" and Gold Diggers of 1933". They include a most unique cat number in which scores of beautiful girls and chorus men dressed in feline costumes frolic in the moonlight and make love on the backyard fence.

The scene by a waterfall is a glorified spectacle in which more than a hundred swimming girls take part. This is one of the most mammoth sets ever constructed, including besides a gigantic pool with scenes shot from beneath the water, a massive revolving fountain upon which the girls gambol clad only in golden tresses.

Never has there been such lilting music and catchy songs as in the new musical.

Complete shows 2:30; 7:15; and 9:15.

"One More Spring"

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter Co-star in Picture of Girl's Love Quest

A woman's eager pursuit of the glamor of romance is said to be the theme of the latest Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter co-starring vehicle "One More Spring", scheduled to come to the Belle Theatre for a three days engagement Tomorrow (Wednesday) as the feature attraction.

Reports from other cities where this Fox film is playing to capacity audience, reveals that it scores one more triumph for the two popular stars who belong together on the screen.

It is a dramatic modern story, of high adventure and gallant courage adapted from the widely acclaimed novel of Robert Nathan which proved a best-seller.

Into this setting drift, separately, a number of strange types, each original, each reduced by circumstance to near destitution. They include a girl out of work, a ruined auctioneer, a starving violinist, a suicide-courting banker, a whitewing worker, a cop, and a lion-tamer.

This motely crew, brought together by fate, work out their destiny, and find that their hitherto drab lives have been heightened by their adventures together.

Janet Gaynor is said to have a deeply emotional role as a courageous girl alone in the world. Warner Baxter is a romantic adventurer who clings to the right to dream.

As the slow-moving easy-going lion-tamer, the inimitable Stepin Fetchit has a role that is good for a thousand-and-one-laughs.

o,ttol 8,280

In the supporting cast are Walter King as the roving musician, Jane Darwell, remembered by Belleville and vicinity screen fans for her excellent performance in "The White Parade" appears as the motherly scrub-woman, Grant Mitchell as the humble banker, and Roger Imhof as a workman.

"One More Spring" was directed by Henry King, who has to his credit such popular screen plays as "State Fair", "Carolina", and "Marie Galante".

The combination of Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter in such a freshly conceived romance of today, makes for a screen event to which all local movie fans must surely look forward.

Edwin C. Hill presenting the Belle Latest News Flashes, Hey, Hey Fever a clever comedy creation and The Dionne Quintuplets a new complete movie record of a day with the World's most famous babies in which you see their first Christmas party.

George Arliss, Leaving

George Arliss is appearing at the Belle Tonight for the last times in "The Iron Duke" the most spectacular .... the most thrilling picture he ever made.

PROMINENT ORANGEMAN DIES

Toronto, March 12 (CP)—James Law, 71, Deputy Treasurer of the County Black Chapter of York, Past Preceptor of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland and Past District Master of the Central District Loyal Orange Lodge, is dead. He was born in Cookstown, Ireland, coming to Canada in 1887.

"Life Is Not Very Kind TO WOMEN"

A friend remarked the other day.
The womanly system is a bundle of nerves.
From the time when the maid becomes a woman
Until the "change of life" period,
There are repeated critical times,
When the nervous system is severely strained.
If good health is to be maintained
The nervous system must be supplied
With an abundance of rich, red blood.
Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes to form new, rich blood
And is of the greatest benefit to women
At these critical times in her life.
The pale, anaemic girl,
The mother whose strength is sapped by childbirth and nursing,
The woman who is nervous about middle life—
All benefit remarkably by using this time-proven restorative.

Letters to the Editor

CRUSADING FOR TRADE

140 George Street,
Belleville, Ontario.
March 11th., 1935.
The Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,
City,

Two-way Trading are words coined by the Belleville Trade Group.

As to Two-way Trading, our railways were built for handling inward traffic as well as outward traffic and the loss of the former in the last three years has had more to do with the depressed condition of these giant systems than anything else. Through-traffic from Chicago to the State of Maine; Montreal, Quebec, Halifax and St. John; is largely routed through Canada and constitutes a very substantial revenue for our railways.

Hon. Dr. Manion says that the United States Tourist Traffic is as valuable to Canada as our wheat exports.

I hope the old political slogan, "No truck or trade with the Yankees", has been buried, never to be revived again.

Two-way Trading between Canada and the United Kingdom and between Canada and the United States is the key to Canada's prosperity.

England had a heavy adverse Trade balance in 1933 and again in 1934 and these were England's two great recovery years.

Canada produced a favorable Trade balance in 1934 but starved and almost crippled our two railways. Was it worth the price?

Yours truly,
W. E. Schuster,
Chairman The Belleville Trade Group.

Belleville, Ont.,
March 7, 1935.
To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer:
Dear Sir:

At the conclusion of Mr. Beatty's address to the Board of Trade at Regina on February 5; 1935 he said "Gentlemen I promised you frankness and I have tried to keep my word. On all the topics with which I have dealt I have tried to put the interests of Canada first." Now, I can't see one single thing that Mr. Beatty has ever done in the interests of Canada unless it was in the interests of the Canadian Pacific Railway first.

It is an utter impossibility for anyone to work for the interests of the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. at the same time and any one that works against the interests of the C.N.R. is not working for the interests of the taxpayers of Canada, it seems to me.

Everyone knows that the taxpayers are the owners of the C.N.R. and that we have to operate it in order to save Canada from going bankrupt. We have had a hard struggle as Mr. Beatty had lots of money to fight us and he did everything he could to encourage business for the C.P.R. thereby taking away business from the C.N.R. and of course if the C.N.R. were to go out of business Canada would be bankrupt. He has said that he knew for fifteen years or more that we were wasting $75,000,000.00 annually through duplication of railways but so far as I know he kept this to himself until September 4, 1934 at Vancouver when he made an address to the Board of Trade and Service Clubs. This year he is giving three cash prizes, the first one $200.00, the second $100.00 and the third $50.00 to employees for the best suggestions for getting business. Now, if they are successful in getting enough business or in other words taking business away from the C.N.R. where are we at?

The C.N.R. is further in debt now than it was when we took it over. The way I see it Mr. Beatty would be in fine shape to carry on if he were successful in putting the C. N. R. out of business. He would be sure of his job then and in a position to justify his efforts in working for the shareholders of the C. P. R. who are the ones who are paying his salary even if only 10% of them reside in Canada.

The C.N.R. has not been put out of business and so Canada is still not bankrupt. It looks as if Mr. Beatty sees that the last chance to save his shareholders is in amalgamation. Are we taxpayers going to stand for that when there is such an easy way out? All we have got to do is to use our own road and the C.P.R. would fade out of the picture and politics would go out of the railways automatically. Compare the Post Office Department.

My solution for the railway problem is "ship and travel C.N.R.". Keep our money in Canada, pay off our own debts and look after our own interests. If anyone can prove to me that I am wrong in my policy I am willing to give up and say no more but not until that is done.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, March 12—(AP)—Financial markets struggled rather ineffectually to get their feet on the ground today after being made dizzy by yesterday's break in cotton. Stocks churned about indecisively in desultory trading.

Among Canadian stocks, Dome receded a major fraction but shares of McIntyre, Canadian Pacific and International Nickel remained comparatively steady. On the curb, Lake Shore eased, while Hiram Walker was more resistant. Dominion government 4s ruled a shade higher. Canadian funds were off 5-16 of a cent at 98 11-16 cents.

American Sugar and United Fruit dropped around 2 points and issues getting own a point or so included Union Pacific, U. S. Smelting, Air Reduction, Dupont, Johns-Manville, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, Westinghouse Electric and Western Union. U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, Pennsylvania and N. Y. Central declined around a point.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, Mar. 12 (CP)—Toronto industrials quieted down after the usual opening flurry this morning with the exception of International Nickel. Sellers waited on New York for an indication of trend. Losses exceeded gains.

Nickel's good report led to a firming of the price which contrasted with a small decline in Ford and C.P.R. McColl-Frontenac sold at $100.25, the highest price in three years.

Alcohols came through with slightly better figures in Walkers and Distillers Seagrams and the brewery stocks were up slightly. Canada Malting sold up the best part of a point.

Loblaw and Canada Vinegars were also higher. With the exception of Bell Telephone the Utilities were inactive. Consumers Gas was up 50.

Two utilities were up while the rest remained inactive. Consumers Gas was up ½. Steels were slightly off and Banks were lower with Commerce dropping four points.

Strength was apparent in the oils, some issues moving up slightly. North Star gained 15 to 3.25. McColl-Frontenac sold at 100.75, its highest price during the last three years.

TORONTO MINES

Mining issues softened after an early rally, the leaders losing from five to 10 points. Sellers waited for sign of a trend from New York and trading was quiet as no indication was given.

McWatters and Wayside led the morning advance but fell off under profit-taking. After reaching a high of 188 McWatters eased back to 173, seven down from yesterday's close.

The senior golds remained inactive, Lake Shore selling off 50 at 55.50. Little Long Lac was lower in quiet trading. Heavy selling in Central Patricia failed to send the price down.

Teck Hughes was steady at 4.15 and Hollinger made a small advance then dropped to 17.25 off 15 from yesterday's close.

Base Metals accepted the prevailing quietness and were generally unchanged although Hudson Bay provided an exception with a 20-cent jump. Silvers provided little of comment.

SAMUEL INSULL IS AGAIN FREED

Acquitted of Embezzlement by United States Court

Chicago, March 12—(AP)—Once again a jury of his "Peers" has given Samuel Insull the vindication he sought to charges of dishonesty, that piled upon him after his utilities empire toppled into financial ruin.

With only two hours and 16 minutes of deliberation the jury in Judge Cornelius J. Harrington's criminal court returned a verdict at midnight last night finding the aged former "Midas" of finance innocent of the State's charge he embezzled $66,000 from his one-time billion dollar treasury of the Middle West Utilities Company. Five ballots were taken.

Overjoyed by the verdict, Insull, who vowed he'd vindicate his name, when he was returned to the United States from Turkey, hurried to the jury box and said:

"Gentleman, I want to thank you".

He added he was "delighted" but declined to comment further on the verdict which was the third legal victory the Insulls have scored over their prosecutors since the State and the Government began their efforts to send them to prison.

Rawdon, March 12 (Special)—Believed to have originated through defective flues, fire which broke out in the attic of the home shortly before ten o'clock this morning, almost completed destroyed the large brick residence of Mr. Arthur Morrison, 4th Concession of Rawdon. Annette One of Quintuplets Cuts The First Tooth

Callander, Ont., Mar. 12 (CP)—Annette made herself the most talked of of the Dionne quintuplets today by producing the first tooth. It broke through the lower front gum overnight and was discovered when the nurses made their daily inspection early today. The babes were nine months, twelve days old at 4.30 o'clock this morning.

"The others will come any time now," said Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe jubilantly as he talked about Annette's achievement. "It is probable Marie will be a little tardy due to her comparatively poor start in life."

There was much excitement at the hospital as nurses chatted over the "big event". The arrival of the first tooth has been awaited daily since the infants were six months old. There have been slight signs of teething in the mouths of all the babes for about six weeks but no teeth pierced the gums until today. The little ones continue to bite on anything they grab, including the sides of their tiny beds. They show particular favor to their own toes as objects on which to bite.

Annette's effort in producing the tooth did not seem to worry her any and she was as happy as any of her four sisters. She added two ounces in weight from yesterday and the others also celebrated by registering increases. Baby Annette has one other distinction, she is the tallest of the quintuplets by one-quarter of an inch.

TO DEVELOP A NATION'S RESOURCES

In 1842, following the union of Upper and Lower Canada, when the Bank opened a branch at Toronto to succeed the agency there, and established offices in nine other cities of Upper Canada, the Honourable Peter McGill, then president of the Bank, explained why the directors had entered upon a policy of establishing branches or agencies in the then western province:

"The Legislature having conferred on the Bank important privileges, and authorized the creation and employment of a large capital, the Board, instead of concentrating it all in the large cities, felt it to be their duty gradually to extend throughout the province the benefits derivable from the use of it by the establishment of branches and agencies at such points and in such localities as appeared to them best calculated to encourage and assist the agriculture and commerce of the country, to develop its resources, and to promote the increase of its exportable productions..."

Even before the union of Upper and Lower Canada, the Bank sought constantly to encourage those factors in trade which would contribute effectively to the upbuilding of the country—a purpose which is as strong today as ever.

Oliva Dionne Hears First Reading of Guardian Bill

Callander, Ont., March 12—(CP)—Oliva Dionne attended the session of the Ontario Legislature to hear the first reading of the guardianship bill concerning his famous quintuplet daughters "to show the members I am not so dumb as some newspapermen made me appear in their writing", he said today.

Leo Kervin, his manager, intimated the fight by the parents to regain control of their babies has not yet concluded. He said they would be guided in their actions by their solicitors.

Mr. Kervin said if his association with the Dionnes was a barrier to them in regaining their children, he was prepared to "tear up" his contract immediately a settlement with the parents was made.

"My contract calls for 20 percent of what is realized by the parents through my efforts but I am obligated to pay one-third of the cost of maintaining the Dionne family", he said.

ORDAINED WOMEN MEET WITH FAVOR

Hamilton, March 12—(CP)— Approval of the principle of the ordination of women to the Ministry of the United Church of Canada was given by the Hamilton Presbytery here today by a vote of 37 to 14. There was very little discussion on the matter before the vote was taken.

Rev. Dr. G. G. D. Kilpatrick rose and pointed out that there were two aspects to the question.

"The first of the two aspects is that of principle and the second is expediency, he said. "I firmly believe the church should agree on the principle. I give the following reasons for this view:

"There is nothing in the doctrine of ordination held by the Methodist congregation and Presbyterian churches of the world nor in that now held by the United Church of Canada which debars women from the Ministry.

"There is no grace of the spirit or gift of mind or heart which is required by the church in those who shall exercise the Ministry of Christ among her members which has not been or may not be abundantly possessed by women.

"There is no office or function in the ministry of the word and sacrament which might not be fulfilled with conspicuous power and devotion by women.

"There is no conclusive argument against the ordination of women to be found in an appeal to the past practise of the Christian church.

HOGS

Toronto, March 12 (CP)—Bacon hog prices remained unchanged at all reporting market points today. Supplies selling within a range of $7.00 at Chatham and $7.75 at Hull. Kitchener, London, Peterborough and Stratford hogs sold at $7.25 while Brantford registered $7.35.

A third recommendation was that all monies spent on construction should go through normal channels of the industry and should not involve direct relief labor.

Housing Need Pressed.

Dealing with the need for housing Mr. Somerville traversed causes of present overcrowding and necessity of finding living quarters "at a monthly rental which varies in different parts of the country from $10 to $20 a month.

The council believed sale of houses to individuals in the "lowest income groups" would be effective.

"This is clearly demonstrated by an analysis of the results obtained under the Housing Act of 1919 in this country," said Mr. Somerville. "Housing on a rental basis permits of the adjustment of rents so that by control and economic ratio between rent and income may be maintained."

Use of Existing Houses.

A policy of rehabilitating existing houses was also urged. Loans for this purpose must, however, be protested by guarantee that districts rehabilitated would maintain their residential character for the term of the loan.

Slum clearance and town planning should be considered jointly.

Failure of the 1919 housing scheme taught the lesson that in any such policy there must be control of occupancy and a maximum income should be the determining factor to ensure tenancy by low income groups. This, said Mr. Somerville, was a primary factor in ariving at the character of housing and means of financing.

MAX SCHMELING TO MEET BAER

Possibility Match May be Staged in Germany

New York, March 12. — Max Schmeling's fine comeback against Steve Hamas is pretty sure to earn the Black Uhlan a crack at Max Baer's title this Summer, but whether the match will be staged here or abroad remains in doubt. Right now there are three possibilities.

One is that the two heavies will perform under the banner of Madison Square Garden, which claims to have both tied up by contracts.

Another is that Mike Jacobs will bag the plum for Mrs. W. R. Hearst's Milk Fund. Baer and his manager, Ancil Hoffman, have sworn they will never fight again for the Garden, contract or no contract. On the other hand they are very friendly with Jacobs and his co-promoters.

The third possibility is the champion will accept a $300,000 guarantee for an international joust with Schmeling in Berlin, in which event the German Government will subsidise the bout.

James J. Johnston, Garden matchmaker, says he will not hesitate to ask the courts to enforce his contract rights provided Schmeling stands out as the logical heavyweight challenger when the open-air season rolls around.

RANGERS WOULD TAKE ON LEAFS

Have No Preference as to Team to Meet in Playoffs

(By George Maguire)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, March 12—(CP)—Remarks dropped here and there New York Rangers might not be pressing too vigorously for victories in the remaining games of the Waning National Hockey League season drew some cryptic remarks from the Blue shirts today.

It has been suggested Rangers possibly preferred finishing third in the United States section in order to collide with Montreal Canadiens in the opening round of the Stanley Cup play-offs. To finish first would mean clashing with the Toronto Maple Leaf powerhouse, in a five-game tussle for the League title, an assignment Boston Bruins are seeking and probably will earn.

Lester Patrick, Ranger coach, merely grinned at first when asked what team he would prefer meeting in the opening round. Then he said:

"As I have said before we have no preferences. As far as side-stepping Toronto is concerned, that is merely gossip. The Leafs play a wide open game and that is the kind of a team we have the best chance against as we too go in for the free scoring game.

"If you want the real lowdown go and ask the players."

Captain Bill Cook was then sought out.

"In a short series," said Captain Bill, "anything can happen. When you try to pick your spots in this game you have to be minus something above the ears."

"I figure we have just as good a chance against the Leafs in a five game series as in a two game, total goal meeting with Canadiens——"

"Well we walloped the Leafs on the season's series didn't we," cracked out the determined young Lyn Patrick.

BOXING

Hello! Sports fans. The last time you came to see us two months ago, the general comments were "What a wonderful show". This time, we are going to give you something far better than you have ever seen in this district.

The boxing card that we are putting forward for your approval on Thursday, March 14th at 8 o'clock, will not only raise your hair as usual but stagger your imagination at the stamina of these combatants. By missing one month, the boys have all had two hard solid months of training with the result, that they are more like iron men than anything else. Any further explanation as to their ability does not appear to be necessary.

Just look down this list of nine of the finest bouts that were ever presented in this vicinity:—

Dave Harris vs Rusty Langman.
Len Maracle vs Joey Miller.
Gord. Woods vs Bobby Schroder
Eddy Bruce vs Scotty Cline
Bobby Vieau vs George Smith.
Johnny Teal vs Bob Cook
Jack Langman vs Sunfish Anderson
Bill Crawford vs Dick Richardson
Johnny Gorman, District Featherweight Champion, vs. "Dynamite" Wheeler, ex-District Featherweight Champion.

Our previous reputation for staging boxing shows speaks for itself and there is nothing more certain in the world in our opinion that our reputation for the coming show, will carry us right over the top. Look at those first three bouts, just three whirlwinds. Every boy out for the other one.

Take the next three. All fighters you have seen before, but not recently. Each boy will give you your money's worth alone. Then take your old friend, Sunfish Anderson. This time he is up against a hard hitting man of Belleville, but we do believe the old home towner will still hang right on to his laurels.

In the semi-final. Bill Crawford and Dick Richardson are expected to give you the battle of the ages. These two boys are in extraordinary good shape and there is not the slightest doubt it will be a hard battle to the finish, and last but not least, the two best friends in the world, who have scored one win on each other, and what their own minds are for this coming bout is not for us to say, but leaving it to your own opinions, I have a good idea of what everybody thinks and expects, that is if you are expecting what we are, there is no doubt that you will get it and it will be a fight such as has never been seen in this station before.

Don't let the weather worry you, because when you arrive here, you will be accommodated in a very fine heated hangar with plenty of seating accommodation and the usual section reserved for ladies and their escorts.

MARATHONERS

Marty Burke must feel that his transfer to Chicago Black Hawks brought him plenty of work if nothing else. He and Art Coulter, the first string defence, averaged 50 minutes per game most of the season. Both fell exhausted and were carried from the ice after one particularly gruelling struggle.

THE MAESTRO SPEAKS

Connie Mack, the grand old master in baseball managerial circles, still sticks to his faith in pitchers to win pennants. "We have as good a team as any exclusive of pitchers," he said recently. "But our pitchers make our position." Of course, the mentor has ideas for the coming season.

Memorial Cup Roundup

(By The Canadian Press)

With two Provincial champions already eliminated, Junior hockey teams eligible for top flight competition in the Memorial Cup playdowns were becoming more easily identified today.

Toronto Young Rangers game against Oshawa in the semi-final of the Junior "A" O.H.A. series headlined the Ontario elimination picture. The tilt is a sudden death affair, the teams being tied on the round 7-7. The winner meets Kitchener-Waterloo in the first of the "A" division finals Thursday.

Niagara Falls Cataracts defeated St. Michael's Buzzers 3-1 in semi-play in the O.H.A. "B" division last night and meet in the second game Wednesday.

In Northern Ontario, the Junior title rests with Sudbury Wolves. The Cubs last night won 9-4 over South Porcupine and took the two game round 20-8.

In the Ottawa and District League Ottawa Rideaus have a three-goal margin to work on against Brockville. They played the first of their two-game-total-goal series last night and meet again Wednesday.

Vancouver ex-King Georges, champions of the Pacific coast have been eliminated. They lost to Saskatoon Wesleys, smart Saskatchewan champions, 4-2 last night in the second game of their two-games series. The first game ended 7-0 for Saskatoon.

The wheat province winners now meet Edmonton Canadians, champions of Alberta at Sasatoon March 16, in the first of their interpovincial series. The second game is at Edmonton.

The Pas Huskies, Northern Manitoba winners and Winnipeg Monarchs, Southern Section champions start a two-game series for the Manitoba championship tonight. With victory goes the right to meet Port Arthur, Junior champions of Thunder Bay.

Charlottetown Abegweits, Prince Edward Island winners, bowed their way out of cup play last night when they lost 4-3 to Moncton Red Indians.

Moncton, now champions of both New Bunswick and Prince Edward Island, meet Truro Bearcats, Nova Scotia winners, the Bearcats last night disposed of Sydney Domcas 8-6 advance into the Maritime final.

UMPIRE ILL

HENRY (HANK) O'DAY

Reported seriously ill, Henry (Hank) O'Day, former National league umpire and manager of the Chicago Cubs and Cincinnati Reds, was confined to a Chicago hospital, suffering from a stomach ailment. O'Day, now 75 years old, was one of the greatest judges of balls and strikes in the history of the game.

LITTLE INTEREST IN N.H.L. GAMES

Playoff Teams And Most of Places Now Decided

(By The Canadian Press)

With all the playoff teams and most of the places decided, the National Hockey League is entering a period of dog days that will extend until the schedule is cleaned up a week from tonight.

The only scrap remaining is between Boston and Chicago for first place in the American section. Three points up, going at their best and with only four games left, Bruins seem the natural choice to meet Toronto Leafs for the league title.

Frank Patrick's team meet brother Lester Patrick's New York Rangers in Boston tonight and then clean up their schedule with games against Americans in New York Thursday, Chicago Saturday and Maroons next Tuesday in Boston.

Black Hawks play Americans tonight in Chicago and then wait there for a game with Detroit Thursday before travelling to Boston and to Montreal for next Tuesday's encounter with Canadiens.

The Toronto-Canadiens battle in Montreal tonight doesn't mean a thing to either team except a possible chance for the players to fatten their scoring averages.

Who May be Who in 1935

Fired as Bad Fielder, Bonura Returns to Lead League

Several years ago the Cleveland Indians gave Henry (Zeke) Bonura a tryout. The big fellow from New Orleans satisfied the management on all but one point. He couldn't field. They let him go.

Something must have happened to Zeke in the Texas league, whither he drifted after Cleveland quit trying to teach him. Last year he came back up to the White Sox, this time to lead the league in fielding.

Though he was not the best first baseman in 1934, his first full year in the majors, Zeke was good enough to compile a mark of .996, the highest mark. He did not accept as many chances as some of the others, another first-year man, Hal Trotsky of the Indians, leading in this respect.

Drives in 100 Runs

But that fielding average at least proves that Zeke has learned how to field and though he has been reported a holdout this year, is expected to take his place as the regular Sox first sacker. He hits in the .300 class and last year was one of the 14 American league batsmen to drive in more than 100 runs.

Bonura will be 27 years old Sept. 20 and is a native of New Orleans. Big and husky (a 200-pounder, 6 feet tall) he was an athletic star in his school days. At St. Stanislaus college he captained baseball, football, basketball and track, and held some sort of record for tossing the javelin.

Drifts to Dallas

He started his pro career with New Orleans six years ago. Cleveland purchased him and optioned him to Toledo, New Orleans and Dallas. Finally he was released to Dallas.

The release must have helped, for he led the Texas league in hitting in 1933, driving in 111 runs, one more run than he drove in for the Sox last year, and hitting 24 home runs.

HENRY "ZEKE" BONURA

The improvement he showed in fielding last year actually was amazing. He went along for two stretches without an error, one of 42 games, the other 54 games. The figure by which he led the American league in fielding was the same as that of Joe Kuhel, Washington first baseman in 1933.

He is a great favorite of the White Sox fans.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Just as if it was a big surprise er sumpin', the Peterboro sport scribe bursts forth in print to inform his readers the fact there are two strange men residing in the Liftlock City, who have the general reputation of being baseball players. Although it seems to be a deep dark mystery (?) to him, the Petes' sport scribe even admits the names of these two ballisters, one giving his monicker as Murphy and the other Kearns. Of course the Liftlock writer hasn't the faintest idea that both Murphy and Kearns played in the T.A.B.A. last year along with Art Lepper, who by the way is shovelling rolled oats into bags up along the shores of the Otonabee River these days, they tell us. Of course with Hugh Campbell sponsoring the Petes and calling them the "Sea-Horses" one can be prepared for most anything, as Hugh is a go-getter and when he go-gets, he doesn't do things in a small way. "Why we wouldn't be surprised if Hugh even equipped his players with Johnson outboard motors, especially if they have to play in the rain like the Nationals did the day they lost the C.O.B.L. championship in the muck and mire at Peterboro. At that outboard motors might have materially assisted that day.

* * * *

With the advent of warmer weather the baseball pot is not bubbling in this part of the province, but actually has come to the boiling point. Each incoming train sees new faces hop off at Peterboro, Oshawa, Kingston, Napanee and Belleville. What does it all mean, as these newly acquired citizens are nothing short of ball players taking up residence before March 15th, the last date for transferring from one town to the other under the new ruling in the O.B.A.A. Not only in Eastern Ontario, but Western Ontario is taken over to the fever, the Guelph Maple Leafs suffering recently, when five of their players migrated to other points. What it actually means is that baseball is on a higher plane once again and will flourish throughout the province, this is more prevalent in the senior series. For instance, two players arrived in town yesterday, Jim Barclay, star catcher of the Toronto Danforths last year, and another unnamed player. Coupled with Hansen, who arrived last week, and Calhoun it begins to look as though a lot of new faces will be seen cavorting on the local diamond as we have been informed, that three more players are due to arrive in Belleville within the next 48 hours. Of course it must be realized that all of these players are not being procured by one club, the Nationals bringing in their share while the Stewart Warner-Alemite A.C. also have their fingers deep into the baseball pie and are very much in the swim.

* * * *

When the next O.B.A.A. bulletin is issued to the press a few surprises await the baseball fans. For instance Art Scarlett, who for many seasons has chased the pellett in left field with success for the Belleville Nationals, today started to work in Napanee and will line-up with Ernie Gibbard's Athletics. Vern Bishop, who hurled the Gibbard 'B' squad to a championship is located in Picton and will play in the county league over across the bay. Of all the teams in Eastern Ontario, we understand, that the Oshawa Club is the club to watch during the coming season. They will no longer be known as the Dukes but will have so many new faces on their roster, that it will take the manager the better part of the training season to get acquainted with his players. What is all this talk and general baseball chatter leading to? Merely this, dear reader, the competition in the C.O.B.L. is going to be mighty tough next summer and 'twill need a mighty smart squad of ball tossers to show the way home before the curtain is rung down next fall. "Just another good reason why the local baseball clubs should get their shoulders to a common wheel and put Belleville over with a rattling good team in 1935."

* * * *

Apparently the Belleville Collegiate hockey team are quite optimistic over their chances of winning the C.O.S.S.A. hockey title. No later than yesterday noon Coach Shiels' charges lined up in the Belleville Arena and had their photographs taken in uniform. We suppose the picture is to be reproduced in the school's 1935 Elevator. Getting back to the activities of the team, however, the local "collegians" will not be afforded any too much practice before stepping on the ice at Kingston in the C.O.S.S.A. semi-finals next Friday. Arrangements have been made by Coach Shiels for the odd practice at the Arena this week to keep the boys on their toes and ready for action.

We understand that the Brockville Magedomas are to meet the winners of the senior N.O.H.A. in the O.H.A. senior play-downs, both games being played in Toronto. The winner meets the senior O.H.A. "A" title winners.......... Ralph Morden's Y.M.C.A. intermediate hoopsters are practicing diligently for their E.O.B.A. sudden death game versus the R.M.C. Cadets at Napanee on Wednesday night. Naturally the "Y" squad did not relish the idea of playing on the small, narrow floor at Napanee, but orders are orders and now that they are the sole O.B.A. representatives of the cage game in Belleville, they naturally have something to battle for........For those interested in boxing the sports committee up at the Airport is presenting its first fight card of the season. Nine bouts in all have been arranged, the majority being between local S.W.A.A.C. mittsters and Airport boys. The programme appears elsewhere on the sport page........

Allan Cup Playdowns

(By the Canadian Press)

Sudbury Wolves whose fitness for the open hockey wars will be tested by Brockville Magedomas, O.H.A. Senior "B" Champions came into the Allan Cup Arena today along with Edmonton Superiors and Winnipeg Falcons to just about round out the playdown squad.

The West's entry stood at Kimberley Dynamiters, Edmonton, Falcons and Port Arthur with Saskatchewan still to report. The Superiors won the Alberta Senior Championship last night with a sweeping 9-1 victory over Coleman Canadians in the third and deciding game of the titular series.

It had been a close struggle until the Superiors, European tourists three years ago, got going last night. They won the first game 6-1 but lost the second 5-4 in overtime. Coleman, Southern Champions who started the season in the Intermediate Division was no menace after that.

At Winnipeg the Falcons turned aside the San Antonio Mines team by scores of 4-2 and 2-0, qualifying to play Port Arthur in the first Allan Cup round. The team from the north provided Falcons with stiffer opposition than anyone expected.

Sudbury Wins in Walk

Sudbury's Northern Challengers won the N.O.H.A. Senior title with ease, drubbing Kirkland Lake Millionaires 5-1 at Kirkland Lake and 8-2 last night at Sudbury. Doug Runions, former Brantford, Ont., winger and Gordon Anderson, from Hamilton, were outstanding for the Wolves with three goals apiece last night.

The Wolves, with old Babe Donnelly, veteran reinstated professional on defence, will move southward this week to try their teeth on Brockville, the winner of this series taking on the Senior "A" O.H.A. champions—either Hamilton Tigers or Toronto.

The grim Hamilton-Toronto feud, with two ties already on the record, is to be resumed in Toronto Wednesday night and again Friday. One team must get two wins before the series is over.

Chesterville Maple Leafs hold a three-goal lead in the Ottawa District Senior finals, having beaten Ottawa Les Canadiens 7-4 last night. The total-goal series will be completed Wednesday night at Ottawa with the winners facing either Cornwall or Ottawa Westboro, who are struggling for Intermediate honors.

Montreal Royals can clinch the Montreal Senior League title with a victory tonight over Ottawa Senators. Royals lead in the five-game series with two victories. They played one tie.

Daily Short Story

The Little Black Book

By N. Florence Leech

(Copyright 1933 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Cloaking self-consciousness in a mantle of dignity, Principal Nathan Stanley entered Class High B. Daisy Hildreth was at the blackboard, explaining a problem in long division. She flushed and he stiffened, remembering the remark he had overheard.

"Horrid old snoop," she had said, and the group of young teachers joined in a flutter of subdued laughter.

Taking out his little black note book, Nathan gazed critically around the room. Daisy was standing by a window, and a stray sunbeam brightened her blonde hair. He wrote: "Her hair is a flame of glory," and snapped the book shut. She glanced at it, and swallowed apprehensively.

What a purgatory this six weeks of summer school was proving to be! Nathan had planned to spend his vacation abroad, but was offered this position as principal of the University Summer School. One of his duties was to observe the work of the teachers; and whether or not they received a contract for the next year depended largely upon his report. That responsibility was bad enough, but in addition he had fallen in love with diminutive Daisy Hildreth who feared and despised him.

The teachers had planned to hike up Green Mountain that evening, and with mingled fear Nathan joined them. If only he could make himself act naturally, perhaps Daisy would treat him more kindly. Her profile was lovely in the moonlight, and he had a mad desire to kiss her provocative little mouth. Instead he walked stiffly beside her, holding her arm tightly. She didn't giggle at everything, and fall helplessly against him on the rough mountain paths, as did the other girls. She talked brightly, and her chatter included the whole party. Obviously she hated him. Coming back, however, she was silent.

"I wanted to visit France and Belgium this summer," he said, desperately making conversation.

"I wish you had," she answered, pleasantly....He was almost glad when he finally left her at her gate across from the boarding house where he lived.

At the end of the six weeks, Nathan told himself, bitterly, Daisy would go out of his life as had so many desirable things. For fear ruled Nathan; always he had been afraid to assert himself and take what he wanted. If he could break the power of the complex which bound him, he would be like other men. But only a terrible crisis could effect this.

Another week passed, and only seven days remained of the school term. Nathan hopefully made plans to take Daisy driving on Saturday afternoon. They would eat a picnic supper, and watch the sunset from the highest peak of the mountain. He would make her understand that he was not an ogre, but a diffident young man, desperately in love. He dressed carefully in his new white suit, and called to deliver the invitation, only to learn that Daisy had gone shopping.

His head bowed under the buffeting of fate, Nathan climbed the steep trail which led to the summit of Green Mountain. There he lay face down in the grass, while the sun set in splendor and shadows crept out of the hollows. At last he started back. The descent was slow and painful along dark, bewildering paths, and it was long past midnight when he reached the town sleeping in the valley.

Wearily, he plodded along the quiet street. How sweet the magnolias were. But there was another scent—he stopped short, recognizing the acrid odor of burning. This was the Burton home, where Daisy lived. He went inside the gate, sniffing and peering about, and his heart contracted with fear when he saw smoke drifting from a basement window. The house was on fire.

"Fire!" he shouted, and pounded on the door.

"Fire!" shrill voices took up the cry.

He broke open the door, and a burst of flame swept toward him, fed by the current of air. Fire crept along the walls and up the stairway, and the lower hall was thick with smoke. Escape from upstairs was cut off.

Spurred on by anguish fear of the girl he loved, Nathan wrapped his coat around his head, and rushed through smoke and searing, reaching tongues of flame up the burning stairs. "Daisy!" he shouted, hoarsely.

Mrs. Burton was screaming. Mr. Burton dashed out of the nursery with his small daughter wrapped in a blanket. Nathan rushed into Daisy's room at the head of the stairs, where the heat and the fumes were strongest. She lay unconscious just inside the door. He picked her up, noting even in that moment of stress how small and helpless she was.

"Back this way!" Mr. Burton shouted, and helped his wife toward the rear, where a window opened on the roof of the kitchen porch. Nathan followed with Daisy in his arms and, choking and gasping for breath, reached the comparative safety of the roof. The house was frame, and burning like tinder. With incredible rapidity the flames had spread and were licking from the kitchen windows up toward them.

The small-town firefighters had not arrived, and the shouting, milling crowd offered no practical help. Nathan looked down and shuddered at the thought of broken bones. Then he noticed at one corner a strong waterspout, which extended along the wall down to the well. Here the fire had made little progress. Somehow, with Daisy a dead weight in his arms, he climbed down this to the outstretched arms of rescuers.

"Let me take her," someone was urging.

She stirred in his arms. "Darling" he cried, and kissed her. She opened her eyes.

"Daisy, I love you", he declared. She smiled. "Let me go, Nathan. I can stand up," she answered.

Kindly hands supported her, and he was led across the street, home. What had he said! What had he done! He winced under the doctor's first aid treatment, and groaned aloud.

"You're a hero," Dr. Lee declared. "I'm proud to know you."

Something snapped in Nathan's mind. At last he had acted spontaneously, fearlessly. He shook himself, conscious that he didn't feel afraid of anything....

"Is Miss Hildreth able to see visitors?" he asked. "I must see her."

"Later on", "temporized the doctor.

"Now," insisted the new Nathan.

"Then," said Dr. Lee, "you'd better dress."

Nathan awkwardly put on his everyday suit, and knocked gently on Daisy's door.

"Come in," her voice answered.

She lay on a couch, covered with something blue. He strode across the room to her. "I love you," he said, firmly. "Will you marry me?"

She reached up and with a bandaged finger touched his blistered face. He dropped down on his knees beside the couch.

"All your eyebrows are gone," she murmured.

He kissed her. "Will you marry me?" he repeated. "I've loved you for a month."

"Why didn't you tell me sooner?" she mocked, gently. "I've always wanted to love you. But you were so dignified, and were always making criticisms in that black book."

"Criticisms?" he echoed. He fumbled in his pocket and handed her the book.

She opened it at random. "High B," she read. "Her eyes are blue as larkspurs."

"Oh,' gasped the girl. She dropped the book, and her arms went around his neck. "We'll go to Europe on our honeymoon."

LANDED BY PLANE

Gurieff, U.S.S.R., March 12—(AP)—Sixteen of 60 fishermen marooned on an ice field 50 miles off shore in the Caspian Sea were brought to land today by aeroplane. No trace could be found of 31 others who became separated from the main body of ice. Planes and ships were still searching with the hope the missing group may possibly have reached land at some isolated point.

CAMPBELL 50 YEARS OLD

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 12—(AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell turned the half century mark Monday, still hoping for conditions that will give him an opportunity to realize his greatest ambition—to travel 300 miles an hour in an automobile. The British speed king saw his 50th birthday dawn with little hope he might be able to take his bluebird onto the beach in an effort to raise his own speed record from 276.815 miles an hour to the neighborhood of the 300 mile goal he has set for himself.

Just over two years ago I started taking Fruit-a-tives, and now I am up at 6:00 A.M. every morning, doing my own housework. I am quite regular and my complexion has lost its yellow tinge. I have seven children and rely on Fruit-a-tives to keep them regular, too."

Hedges, Fences Water Hazards Again Loom for Steeplechasers

By CHARLES "HORSES" AYRES

Central Press Canadian Writer

Toronto, March 12—With the 97th running of one of England's greatest turf classics just a few weeks away, the wildest, dizziest and altogehter the most thoroughly insane manifestation of sporting fervor known to the world approaches. At the same time the Grand National is the most magnificent, thrill-charged spectacle imaginable, and easily the stiffest test of stamina in the racing game.

Just sit back and try to picture the field of sharply trained, nervous, snorting animals, halfbreeds and thoroughbreds, a field that usually ranges from thirty upwards, starting off in a thunderous roar over a course four miles, 865 yards long, cluttered with a total of 30 hazards, fences, hurdles and water holes.

Imagine, if you can, as they break from the barrier and start the short run on the flat that leads to the first obstacle, a thorn fence, four feet, six inches high. They are still pretty much together, and, as the fence is reached, a mighty wave of arched backs, pawing legs and huddled jockeys splashes against the skyline.

By some miracle, perhaps all of them get over. Or perhaps some of them fall back in defeat before the race has scarcely begun. For there are 29 more jumps, including Beecher's Brook, the Canal Turn and Valentine's Brook, three of the most terrifying challenges in steeplechasing.

Then ten minutes later, the curtain is lowered on this bizarre drama of horseflesh and the vast crowd that is usually estimated at 500,000 people, begins to break up. Another chapter has been added to the almost century-old book of English racing.

Huge Sweepstakes

The records show us that the first Grand National was run in the year 1839. Those were the days when we find that Victoria was a shy maiden in bangs, and the first race saw 17 horses face the starter, and run over a plowed field. A great number of horses have taken informal baths in treacherous Beecher's Brook since that February afternoon and a great many astounding incidents have been written into the history of steeplechasing.

There was something poetically prophetic in the circumstances which returned a hunter's horse, named Lottery, as the winner in 1839, in the first National ever run. For in no other race is the distribution of fame and fortune so largely governed by chance or lot, both on and off the course.

Apart from the melodrama of the race, there is the frenzied speculation of the sweepstakes that has grown around the race.

For the first fifty years the race was run over a course, that was nothing but just plowed farm lands. There was no inside rail, the course was without grass, the stand, a rickety affair of no importance.

When the brass hats and gray wigs of British racing finally decided that the National was sufficiently decent in character and morals for paternal adoption, the ground work was laid for the present course, which is the stiffest test course in the world.

The history of the National is threaded with rich cords of fiction-like facts. One of the early winners, Emigrant (1857), changed hands in a card game a few nights before the race. Another early winner, Pioneer (1844), was so little thought of that his owner didn't even wager a shilling on him. He must have been a champion, too, because he ran five miles to win in the good time of 10 minutes and 46 seconds, the distance having been inadvertently lengthened, due to laxity in regulations typical of the period.

Another outstanding winner of the National was Abd-el-Kader (1850), who set a record of 9.57 1-2 for his era, but few knew he was even in the race. The bookmakers neglected to list him among the possible winners. There were no odds quoted on him. He beat a field of 30 and came back the next year to repeat.

Work Horses Used

The legend of the cart horse dates back to a four-legged animal named Roquefort, who was bought at an auction sale of labor animals. A curious nag he was, too. His only interest was jumping. This National winner of 1885 ended his career harnessed to a Ben Hur chariot on the American stage. The background of Old Joe, the gallant winner of 1886, indicated he could do everything. Before coming to the National, he pulled a cart, rode to hounds and performed in class D horse shows. . . .

The American-bred Rubio was purchased for $65. For months he pulled a bus between a hotel and railroad station. There came a day, I presume when business was bad. His owner thought he'd enter Rubio. The records show he was the winner in 1908. . . . .

The 1935 Grand National will bring together one of the best fields to ever try for this famous English turf classic. Trocadero, Canadian-owned, is listed as a starter. At the present time Miss Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller seems to be the public choice. There is one thing certain that only a scant few will survive the gruelling test. At some time during the National, many horses will fall, some never to breathe again. An ambulance may be rolling through the streets of Aintree with a limp form of a jockey. Perhaps, back in a barn, a reformed cart horse will be munching his oats, blissfully unaware that he has just won a glorious race at odds of 200 to 1. And somewhere, perhaps in Canada someone will be holding a winning sweepstake ticket.

HEROIC DOG TWICE SAVES VETERAN'S LIFE

By CENTRAL PRESS CANADIAN

Toronto, March 9—This is the tale of a dog.

It starts with the war and Edward O'Hara of Toronto. Mr. O'Hara was so badly battered in Flanders, that they shipped him home in a basket. But with a courage equalled only by his dog, he determined he would learn to walk again—and did. But he needed a dog and that's where Sir Bob of Cluny enters the scene.

O'Hara and Bob were out walking along the lake front when the veteran fainted and slipped into the icy water. Quick as a flash, Bob grasped Mr. O'Hara's coat between his teeth and hung on. So great was the pull, that one tooth was torn out, but Sir Bob, the blood of heroic ancestors in his veins, hung grimly on.

The first rescuer on the scene was Mrs. W. Diment. She fell in love with Sir Bob and determined to have him. O'Hara finally agreed on condition that Bob be allowed to see him every day. She agreed, and O'Hara and Bob continued their walks.

Then one day they were crossing the road when Mr. O'Hara fainted right in the path of an on-coming street car. But Bob was there, and pulled him out of the path of the grinding wheels, just in time. A policeman rushed up to help the man, and Bob, mistaking his intention, grabbed on to the leg of his pants to protect his master, and held on until the trio reached the police station where it was decided that Bob should die for biting an officer. "But he didn't really bite him," insisted O'Hara, "He was just protecting me." So Bob was spared.

Now Bob, who recently won eight ribbons and two cups at a Detroit show, is to be presented with a Humane Society medal by the Governor-General for his bravery.

PROFITS OF COMMISSION WANTED BY KINGSTON

Council Favors Mayor Reynolds in Asking For Revenue

Kingston, Ont., March 12—(CP)—Mayor J. C. Reynolds today left with council a plea to ask the Public Utilities Commission for $40,000 to be paid into the general revenue of the city.

The Mayor declared last night 1935 was a critical one economically for Kingston and the payment would not deplete the reserves of the Utilities Commission. The $40,000 asked is approximately the net profits of the Electric and Water Departments for 1934.

By a vote of 17-1, council passed a resolution asking the Mayor, "as its representative on the Public Utilities Commission, to obtain from the Commission a sum of $40,000 to be paid into the general revenue of the city of Kingston. This payment to be taken from their current profits and liquid assets, as shown in their annual statement."

If the Commission favors the proposal the case will then be laid before the Hydro Electric Commission in Toronto.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

"You'd better find out about patents and things first," Faith said with the shyness of nerves. He was so humble at having bothered her that she felt guilty.

So she kept him on for dinner and was nice to him, and sent him away early on the pretext of fatigue. "I'll feel better if I get to bed, Paul, dear," she said. But she didn't go to bed; she went to Mrs. Monte Hazard's penthouse. She put on the green tulle edged with sable that she had worn the ill-fated night of her housewarming party in Paris. Her lovely white neck felt cold without the pearls Hunter had drawn around it that night. Her hair and eyes were as cool as Spring, but her lips were the deep red of roses.

From the moment she stepped out of the elevator Faith was sorry she had come to the party. She knew no one there. She stood looking in at a tangle of black coats and bare shoulders. A young man banged on a piano in one room, a radio was going in another. No one of the women acted like a hostess, although they were all making themselves at home among glasses and cushions.

Unconscious of the stares and whispers her beauty attracted, Faith moved rather hesitantly forward to a glass-enclosed room that winged out on the terrace.

A middle-aged gentleman stood in a corner with his back to the door, monopolizing a pretty brunette in yellow. As he turned the florid good-looks of his profile, Faith gave an involuntary exclamation. It was Philip Stevens, but something had happened to him. He was debonair and bland, as if he had been stroked the right way. He was toned down and trimmed off.

"My dear Faith!" He came prancing forward with the cheer of a host. "Grace"— he drew the brunette within the range of introductions—"you remember I've spoken to you about Mrs. Hunter Barclay. Mrs. Hazard is a wonderful little woman, Faith." He stepped back, as if he had explained a lot that needed explaining.

Mrs. Hazard's soft pansy eyes took in Faith's gown. "Awfully nice of you to come, Mrs. Barclay." She was simple and cordial. "Phil, will you get Mrs. Barclay a glass of punch? Someone out there seems to be hunting for me." With a friendly nod, she left them.

Philip Stevens adjusted his white tie a trifle self consciously, reddening under Faith's questioning gaze. "A man can stand just so much from his wife," he said, as if he were willing to argue. "I don't know what brought you over here, Faith, but—" His expression grew confidential, and he poked his finger at Faith. "Let me tell you this—you can monkey with dynamite, but you had better run away before it explodes. No more fireworks in my life." He thrust his florid face nearer. "I'm more than half in love with Grace — and Gertrude can go to hell. I told her so before she sailed."

DAN RIDER TRAILS FAITH

CHAPTER THIRTY

Philip Stevens would have nothing to do with the airplane motor. He told Faith so quite testily the day after the party. "My dear girl, I'm a broker, not a promoter," he protested. "Inventors are a drug on the market. I don't care what this young man's done or how much you're willing to put up for him. What's more, you're crazy to throw your money around when the rest of us are drawing in."

"I gave you credit for more imagination." Faith retorted with spirit. "You won't meet Paul. You won't look at the model. You won't even listen to me when I tell you that no one has ever made a lighter, cheaper motor that's near as safe. Doesn't it mean anything to you when I expain that he's used a special alloy of metals for an eight-cylinder in line—"

"No, it doesn't," Philip interrupted very definitely. "How about some apple pie. And, for Heaven's sake, let's talk about something else."

They were lunching in the rather dreary corner of a downtown restaurant whose specialty was oysters and grilled chops. Faith sat slimly in her dark green tailored suit, her ash blond hair folded in the slant of her tiny green hat, her mouth a scarlet wing under the brooding grey of her eyes.

It was useless to argue further. All Philip wanted to do was to talk about Gertrude; to hash and rehash his grievances. "Lord, what I've stood from that woman," he ground out. "Can you blame me for taking up with Grace? Now, there's a girl for you—sweet, gentle, loyal. You don't have to watch her every minute——"

Faith looked at him almost pityingly. Philip didn't seem quite as jaunty and complacent today. "You are just trying to sell yourself and me the idea that you're in love with another woman," she said. "But if Gertrude so much as crooked her little finger, she could have you again."

Philip, frowned, squinting down his cigar. "Perhaps you're right," he admitted. "But that goes for you and Hunter, too, or I miss my guess."

Faith gathered up her gloves and bag. "Even if I could," she said with decision, "I should never, never go back to Hunter under the same conditions."

So she and Philip Stevens parted after lunch with the unspoken sense that neither could be of further use to the other. Faith went thoughtfully back to her hotel. She felt depressed and uncertain now where to turn. Fifteen thousand dollars had seemed such a lot, and Philip had told her it wasn't enough to do more than get all involved in business she couldn't swing. You had to have friends and influence. The advice of experts. Yet she couldn't desert Paul, whose hopes she had raised to such a high pitch.

All that afternoon Faith sat in the salon of her hotel suite, dreading the talk she must have with Paul that evening, for, expecting Philip Stevens to help, she had told Paul she might have news for him. How complicated everything was, she thought, with the beginning of a bad headache. Cinderella back from the ball, with no hope that the prince would come after her. A Cinderella wishing — Faith knew suddenly what she did wish, and laughed at herself. She wished it could have been Hunter who had invented the airplane motor. Hunter with a future to make. Needing her, trusting her to share in his work, his dreams. Loving her in poverty as he would love her when success came. That was what welded man and woman together. And there was nothing in all of Hunter's life he had had to earn. Nothing she could help him achieve.

When at five o'clock her telephone rang, she answered it listlessly, thinking it was Paul. But the name the desk clerk announced electrified her, Mr. Dan Rider to see Mrs. Barclay.

Faith had not yet recovered from the shock of her surprise as she opened the door and stood staring.

"I kicked myself from Paris over her on the fastest boat," Rider said. "I suppose you'll never forgive an old meddler, Faith."

"I don't know what you mean," Faith answered uncertainly. She knew now that she was glad to see him, no matter what trouble he had brought upon her. He, at least, had been sincere. And he looked so solid so dependable standing there, his glasses two shiny disks under his bushy brows, his dark suit so trimly fitting his soldiery shoulders.

Rider took Faith's cold hand in his and led her to the sofa. "I was a blind old fool not to know that a girl with those loyal eyes wouldn't get mixed up with a blackmailing skunk," he said. "But—well, Hunter's like my own son, and though the lad has his faults, I guess I've always felt the best was none too good for him." With something like a sigh, Rider took off his glasses, wiped them on a silk handkerchief, and fitted them back over his anxious eyes.

Mr. Rider nodded vigorously. "From what he told me, the de Luze woman went all to pieces the day after you sailed. She got Hunter over there, swore him to secrecy, and told him the whole rotten story. Said it was on her conscience—she never thought you'd leave—faugh!" There was no doubt of Dan Rider's opinion of Madame de Luze.

So Therese had come through, after all! "Did Hunter send you?" Faith asked after a pause. Her slim, lovely hands twisted, untwisted in her lap.

Mr. Rider's face grew pink. His eyes seemed brightly to jump at his glasses. "No, he didn't obstinate young fool," he said in a loud voice. "Too proud. But you're going back, young lady—there's to be no more nonsense about a divorce. He'll be mighty glad to see you."

Faith shook her head sadly. "No, Mr. Rider," she said. "Hunter's in love with someone else."

Pouting and bristling, the old gentleman jumped to his feet. "Eh? —Fiddlesticks!" he snapped. "If you'd seen the boy when I told him I was going to send you back, you wouldn't say such things."

"All the same, Faith insisted, "he's in love with Gertrude Stevens and she sailed Saturday."

Mr. Rider straddled in front of her, his grizzled head thrust forward. "So you're going to let that hussy get him, are you?" he said harshly. "Going to let his life and yours be ruined——"

Tears stung in Faith's grey eyes. She sprang up, her hands clenched at her sides. "He doesn't want me, I tell you," she cried. "What can I do? Besides, even if he did, we'd never be happy the way we were living. You once told me Hunter was an idler," she went on fiercely. "Well, suppose I tell you that I've found out I'm not the right kind of wife for an idler. Money, society aren't enough. I wouldn't feel safe ever again unless Hunter had some real ambition, some work to keep him away from women like Gertrude. He'd have to respect me, and I'd have to respect him——"

"By George, you've hit it," Mr. Rider exclaimed with the enthusiasm of a boy. "You can do it, too."

"Suppose I tell you," Faith said in a low, hard voice, "that I know a man now who has the very thing I wish Hunter had—an object in life —a man who needs me to help him. Oh, I don't love him," she went on, smiling faintly at Mr. Rider's apoplectic glare. "No it isn't that. It's just that there's a job for me to do right here. Let me show you—" Impulsively she pulled Mr. Rider over to a corner of the room, where, covered by a white cloth, was Paul's model. "You know all about machinery," she said. "Look at that —it's an airplane motor, and here are drawings—"

"Eh?— What's this!" spluttered Mr. Rider, Scowling, he bent over the model, touching it with expert fingers, turning to the unfolded drawings Faith spread on the floor. "What are you up to, young woman?" he growled, but his expression had become intent.

"You can see for yourself," said Faith and turned at a knock on the door.

Paul had come, unannounced. His face, under its thatch of red hair, grew intense with emotion as he glanced past her to the old gentleman stooping over his model.

"Am I—? Were you expecting me?" he stammered.

"Come in, Paul." Faith's voice was a little strained. Explanations couldn't be avoided now, and she was almost glad to have the situation cleared. "Mr. Rider, this is Paul Tuckerman, who invented that motor," she said slowly.

"Mr. Rider?" Paul sprang forward, his hand outstretched. "I could hardly wait to see you, sir. Why, it was the greatest day in my life when Faith told me you'd had advanced the money so that I could come over here and get my patents, before we started manufacturing—"

Mr. Rider whisked about to glare at Faith. "I don't know what this young lady was thinking of, Mr. Tuckerman," he said. "I never authorized her——" His keen eyes bored through his glasses, his lips were clamped in a thin line.

Two spots of red burned on Paul's high cheek bones as with mute question he turned to Faith.

She had done her best, but it was hard to meet the trust in his eyes. "Today is the first time Mr. Rider ever heard of you, Paul," she confessed at last. "You wern't well enough in Paris to think things out for yourself. I was afraid you would not take any money from me"—her quiet voice faltered —"so I used my own judgment in what I told you."

Paul stood as if stunned. I was terrible to see the hope die in his face. "There was never anyone interested, then," he said dully. "And I've come over here on your money. Oh, my God!"

"Don't take it that way," Faith cried in distress. "Don't you see, Paul, I believe in you? The money's a loan. What does it matter——?

Paul stood as if stunned. It was about as he reached it. Faith thought again of a flame as she looked at him. A flame torn ragged by the winds, but never extinguished.

"There isn't anyone like you, Faith", he said, with a catch in his voice. "But I can't let you do any more. I'll see that you get back every penny you've lent me, of course, as soon as I get on my feet —"He started to open the door.

"Hold on, young man," Mr. Rider rapped out in a dry note of command, and he turned to Faith. "You think the boy's got something?"

"Yes, I do." Faith's throat tightened.

As Olga, keeping in the shadows, neared the natives' orgy, she was suddenly discovered on the edge of the crowd. Shrieking, a huge woman ran toward the girl, meaning literally to tear her to pieces.

This uncalled-for attack found Olga entirely unprepared. She could not have escaped the vixen's wrath, had not Usanga, noting the interruption came lurching forward to question her. "What do you want?" he cried, "food and drink!"

"Come with me!" he said and throwing an arm about Olga he dragged her toward the circle. "No!" she cried, "I want Naratu! Where is she?" This seemed to sober the man a moment. He cast quick, fearful glances about, for he was in fear of his wife

But being assured that Naratu had noticed nothing suspicious in his actions, Usanga ordered the warrior who was still holding the infuriated female from the girl, to take Olga back to her hut and remain there on guard over her.

HOPE FOR DEATH IS SATISFIED

Big Game Hunter Dies From Complication of Diseases

Hillersdon, Devon, England, Mar. 11.—(AP)—Death ended the suffering Sunday of the 84-year-old explorer and big game hunter, W. J. A. Grant, who, a year ago— having bought his coffin and instructed mourners what to wear —entertained at a "swan dance" to celebrate his then momentarily expected end.

Grant, who almost daily since prayed that he might die, and had asked doctors to put him painlessly to sleep and been refused, died quietly in this Devon village. He suffered heart trouble and a complication of ailments.

In a tiny barn behind the cottage stands a red granite tombstone carved with the words: "O Death, where is they sting, O grave, where is thy victory."

Grant publicly advocated the practice of euthanasia by physicians saying "Take my own case. Here I am over 83 and no use to anybody. I should be only too happy to be given a double dose of sleeping draught, being always in pain and unable to read."

He left a last message in which he said: "I have offered money to be killed painlessly and no one has come forward. I have offered my living body for experimental purposes if it would produce death, but my offer has not been accepted.

"Good health," he added, "is the most important thing in the world and is a greater goal than the North Pole. I tried to reach both and failed.

SEEK REVERSAL ON GOLD CLAUSE

European Investors Planning Joint Legal Action in U. S.

LONDON, March 11. — (UP) — Joint legal action by investors in Great Britain, France, Holland and Switzerland to obtain a reversal by the United States Supreme Court of its gold-clause decision was forecast today in financial circles.

A letter accompanied by the expert opinion of legal counsel has been delivered to the London advisory and protective committee for American investments, envisaging the possibility of bringing new suits before the court.

The legal opinion holds that the Supreme Court might overrule its first decision if foreign holders of certain classes of gold clause obligations could prove before a United States court of claims that they had suffered actual damages, especially due to the effects of devaluation, upon obligations either of the Government, private companies or individuals.

Sir Harry Armstrong, chairman of the committee, informed the United Press that he would summon the committee into session possibly this week, to determine upon what action should be taken.

The chief counsel for the group has recommended that a committee representing the United Kingdom consult with corresponding committees of France, Holland and Switzerland, and urged an early joint meeting of the four committees, either in London or Paris.

Armstrong told the United Press that he believed it "an excellent idea".

A five-thousand-word opinion called attention to the closeness of the five-to-four decision, and emphasized that the Supreme Court is not bound by its present decision but might change its mind, especially in the event of any change in the personnel of the court.

MORE MONEY NEED HEPBURN STATES

Municipal Income Tax May be Discarded For Provincial

Toronto, March 11.—(CP)—Indication was given today by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, the Ontario Government may take some action regarding municipal income taxes. The Premier made no definite statement of the Government's intention but said the present situation of varying income taxes in different municipalities constitutes "a state of chaos".

Mr. Hepburn was queried concerning Ontario's efforts to balance the budget and saw some merit in a proposal to discard municipal income taxes in favor of a provincial tax.

"Will there be a provincial income tax?" he was asked.

"What do you think?" he queried in return.

"We will have to find a lot more money if we are going to balance the budget," Mr. Hepburn said but asserted there would be no increase in the gasoline tax or in fees for motor car licenses.

He admitted the process of balancing the budget cannot be carried out only by reducing administrative expenses.

HUEY LONG MAY HELP REPUBLICANS

Will Take Enough Votes From Roosevelt to Help

Washington, March 11 (AP)—Republican old guarders are feeling better nowadays about their party's presidential prospects in 1936 for the row between the Roosevelt administration and Huey P. Long may have wide ramifications.

Despite the usual Conservative-Progressive dissension within their own ranks, the Republicans realize that Long, if he has the help of Father Charles E. Coughlin and others, might take enough normally democratic votes from President Roosevelt next year to allow their candidate to squeeze through.

Long, Louisiana's vociferous "kingfish," has announced he plans to run for the Senate again but he has made it plain also that he has in mind seeking the presidency in 1936 on his share-the-wealth" program. Already, his office claims he has 8,000,000 people pledged to support his plan. If they are all voters he has a fair head-start.

Father Coughlin, whose name was linked with Long's by General Hugh S. Johnson a week ago, is on friendly terms with the Louisianan. In addition, many advocates of the Town-plan are Long inclined. Further there are rumors here that other prominent critics of the Roosevelt policies in the south and northwest lean more and more to the Louisinanan's idea.

Meanwhile independent Republicans are clamoring for more Liberal policies.

HOUSECLEANING TIME

Soon be time to Paint Up and Clean Up from Cellar to Garret.

Ma is planning to set out some new Shrubs and Rose Bushes and is longing for the time when she can don her old sunbonnet and loose house dress and get out in the garden where Nature is singing the Resurrection Song.

Dad is also getting ready for the annual spring exercise with the Lawn Mower, and the shifting around of the furniture which always accompanies Housecleaning Time, besides heaving the ashes out of the Cellar.

Sis and Bub are getting their excuses ready so as to be absent, if possible when the battle begins, not to return until after the order "cease firing" has been given.

Housecleaning Time is a necessary evil and comes round just as regularly as the measles, and is best remembered by the cold victuals, lame backs and head colds which accompany it and the drafts from open doors and windows.

So, Hurrah for Housecleaning Time, which is always a sure sign of Spring.

AUTOMOBILE TARIFF PROBLEM TO BE STUDIED

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Detroit, March 13 (CP)—While he had criticism for the United States schools, Rev. Cyril A. Alington, D.D., of Durham, Eng., has nothing but praise for this nation's bathrooms.

The Dean of the historic Durham Cathedral remarked although he didn't know if the Americans were any cleaner than the English, the former "certainly make it easier for one to wash."

Edmonton, March 13 (CP) — With every government supporter in his seat and labor members solid in support, the Reid administration defeated a Liberal non-confidence amendment in the budget debate last night 36 to 19. The amendment was moved by W. R. Howson, K.C., Alberta Liberal leader. It charged the government with having increased taxation at a time when people could least afford to bear it and continuous over-spending from year to year until accumulate deficits amounted to over $12,000,000.

Bimbey, Alta., March 13 (CP) —Faithful till death a small dog still mounts guard over the body of his master, Thomas Wilson, 61, found dead from exhaustion and exposure by the roadside last week.

Camden, N.J., March 13 (CP)—Everyone sighed with relief when Walter Baker, 43, was given a suspended sentence and left—with the evidence.

He was accused of threatening to "blow up" Constable Edward Lewis of nearby Lawnside with a stick of dynamite. As Assistant Prosecutor Isaac W. Eason displayed dynamite evidence, it once nearly slipped from his hands.

As Baker, dynamiter for a contractor, was leaving, the Prosecutor called:

"Here, take this with you."

Chicago, March 13 (CP)—Lewis Dexter is probably one person the absent minded professor will remember.

The Belmont, Mass., youth whizzed through his college courses so fast he was granted a Bachelor's Degree this week after only 18 months in the University of Chicago.

His speed, made possible by the university's "new plan" allowing swiftness in proportion to the student's ability, included ten college courses in one quarter.

Blue Mountain, Miss., March 13 (CP)—Hicks Foster contends there's no need to discard that worn-out automobile. Here's what he did with his old car:

UTILITIES FIGHT, CHARGE MALICE FROM PRESIDENT

Public Utility Holding Companies Engage in Struggle

'FEARS FALLACIOUS'

Senate Decides to Investigate Charge of Propaganda

Washington, March 13 (AP) — The United States Senate today ordered a Federal trade investigation of propaganda circulated on legislation to regulate public utility holding companies.

The inquiry was proposed in a resolution by Senator Norris (R. Nebr.), and approved without a work of debate.

President Roosevelt struck out at such propaganda in his message to congress yesterday urging enactment of holding company regulatory legislation the fight over public utility holding companies became one of the hottest raging in Washington today as utility executives struck back at President Roosevelt's charges of "propaganda."

One spokesman said the administration "diregards the pleas of the people" while another saw a "strain of malice' in the message which the President urged control of utility operations be taken away from "a few corporate insiders" by ultimately abolishing all except "necessary" holding companies in this field.

Fears Called Fallacious

Mr. Roosevelt had said that "far-fetched and fallacious fears" about the effect of pending holding company legislation are being spread.

To this, Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, replied:

"The utilities have endeavored honesty to inform investors and the general public as to the disastrous effects of this legislation.

"We shall continue to urge them to express their opinion frankly and fully."

Gadsden added "the destruction of the holding company as provided in the proposed public utility bill is no longer a concern for the public utilities alone, but for all industry."

ALYCE McHENRY MUCH IMPROVED

Desires to go Roller Skating And Ride a Bicycle

Fall River, Mass., March 13 (CP) —Alyce Jane McHenry, 10-year-old Omaha, Neb. girl, was apparently on the road to recovery today from a delicate operation to correct her mis-placed stomach. An official hospital bulletin gave normal readings for her temperature, pulse and respiration, while her condition was described as "satisfactory" after a comfortable night.

The entire atmosphere of the hospital was one of optimism today as the girl chatted about the things she was going to do as soon as she could get around again. She told her mother yesterday when she recovers she wants to visit other children at the Truesdale Hospital and share with them some of the gifts she has received.

Then of course, there's that desire to go roller skating and ride a bicycle.

Brockville, Ont., March 13 (CP)—When 103 Elizabethtown township hogs were destroyed today, Brockville faced an acute garbage problem. The beasts disposed of today belonged to Harry Vipond, who was feeding his hogs with Brockville garbage, pending erection of an incinerator approved by the ratepayers.

Health regulations forbid keeping of swine on any farm for three months after an ou'break of hog cholera. More than 200 hogs have been destroyed.

Bible Stories Corroborated By Archives Found Near Gaza

Jerusalem, March 13 (CP-Palcor Agency)—One of the most important corroborations of the Bible during the period of the Kingdom of Judah was made known today with the discovery at Tel Adduweir, midway between Beersheba and Gaza, of archives with Hebrew inscriptions which give the names of the most famous Israelites mentioned during that period is Scriptures.

The discovery was the work of a British Archaeological Expedition headed by J. L. Starkey. The find is regarded as of unique importance because hitherto the discovery of written documents of the Biblical period has been rare and, pottery usually has been the only available witness of the Bible stories. Hitherto the archaeology of the period of Kings has revealed only two or three inscriptions.

The remains of the Kingdom of Judah period would date back to between 900 and 600 B.C.

PLANE OF MYSTERY LEAVES AIRPORT

Robot Pilot And New Radio Compass Used

OAKLAND, Calif., March 13. —(AP)—The United States Department of Commerce "mystery" plane which headed toward the Pacific Ocean this morning after a 4.56 a.m. takeoff, reported to the airport here less than four hours later.

Oakland, Calif., March 13 (AP)—The United States Department of Commerce's "mystery aeroplane" took off from the Oakland Municipal Airport today for an unannounced destination.

Her objective on another test flight of a new radio compass and robot pilot has often been reported to be Hawaii but Eugene Vidal, director of the Air Commerce Bureau of the United States Department of Commerce in charge of the flight, refused to confirm it.

He said flights 1,000 miles over the Pacific would be made to test the new equipment but admitted, "you never can tell what we might decide to do."

The plane headed for San Francisco which lies between Oakland and the ocean.

Beyond the fact the plane was loaded with 1,600 gallons of gasoline, reportedly enough to carry her to the Fanning Islands of the Aleitians little was known of how the plane was equipped.

Presumably she carried the eight men who brought the craft from San Diego Monday night.

MAYOR OF DUBLIN NEW YORK'S GUEST

"Alfie" Speaks to Whole Countryside After Arrival

NEW YORK, March 13.—(CP)—New York today took to its bosom "Alfie", otherwise Rt. Hon. Alderman Alfred Byrne, Lord Mayor of Dublin for five years, here to take part in St. Patrick's Day celebrations Saturday.

He is the first Lord Mayor of a city of the Irish Free State to visit the United States and his country's large Irish population is very much interested.

Greeted by an imposing group of dignitaries Lord Mayor Byrne's first words of greeting—broadcast over the country—were, "Hello, this is Alfie speaking," using the popular name by which he is known in Dublin.

Speaking of Ireland's efforts towards prosperity he mentioned Dublin had undertaken a large unemployment programme which includes the building of a great waterworks plant. This is necessary, he laughed, because the thousands of new homes under construction are all equipped with modern bathrooms.

The Lord Mayor is of medium height and dapper appearance with a white moustache terminating in "sergeant's points" half an inch in length. To please his greeters he wore the mayoral chain, a massive decorative affair presented to Dublin in 1609 by William of Orange.

BRITISH WRITER UP FOR HEARING ON ILLEGAL ENTRY

Arrested as Alien Communist and May Be Deported

BOND IS FURNISHED

Strachey Claims Charge Against Him Absolutely False

Washington, March 13 (AP)—Clause Swanson, United States' Naval Secretary, indicated today he was considering fyling formal charges against twenty-six alleged Communist civilian empoyees at the Washington navy yard.

Earlier, Labor Department officials said a deportation hearing probably would be held tomorrow in Chicago for Strachey, British writer and lecturer, arrested there last night, charged with being an alien communist.

Dismissals Promised

Swanson said he had endorsed a bill authorizing dismissal of Government employees for Communist activities. He acknowledged formal charges were necessary to dismiss civil service employees and indicated that Communist affiliations warranted bringing such accusations.

Free on $500 bond, Evelyn John St. Leo Strachey, British author and former member of Parliament, who was arrested last night on charges of illegal entry, was on his way to Cleveland today to continue his lecturing tour.

Charges Denied

"The charges against me are absolutely false," Strachey said as he boarded the train after posting bond at immigration headquarters. "I will fight them to the last ditch."

Stachey, accompanied by two attorneys, visited the office of Fred J. Schlotfeldt, District Director of Immigration and Naturalization, for a secret conference.

His Arrest

Strachey was arrested in suburban Glencoe last night after he had completed a lecture. A brief stir was caused a few minutes later by the arrival of a woman who identified herself as Mrs. James F. Porter of a North Shore suburb. She said, "This is an outrage!. If Mr. Strachey needs money for bond I will supply whatever amount is asked."

Her offer was communicated to Schlotfeldt and Mrs. Porton was invited to join the closed conference.

Ample of Literature

Another North Shore woman was the next arrival but her purpose was the opposite of that of her neighbor. She was Mrs. Albert W. Dillon,(lecturer against Communism. She carried an armful of Communistic and Anti-Comunistic literature which she asked to be permitted to lay before the immigation authorities.

Selecting one publication, which she described as a Communist organ, she quoted:

"Strachey is a forthright advocate of Communistic revolution."

Strachey's two attorneys were identified by Hugh Miller, secretary of the Civil Liberties Union, as Edgar Bernhard and Alfred Kamin, attorneys for the union.

"For what reason can't you understand it?" enquired the Magistrate.

"Too long a word for me," observed the accused.

He was sentenced to two months imprisonment on the charge. Crown Attorney E. D. Wilkins, K.C., was principal witness for the Crown, the stolen rug being his property, while Chief Constable David Louden conducted the prosecution.

STUCK NEEDLES IN BODY, DENIES HE'S CANNIBAL

Fish Accused of Murder of Little Girl Goes to Trial

SKULL IS PRODUCED

Letter Written in Prison Admits Needles Used to Kill Pains

White Plains, N. Y., March 13 —(AP)—A brown weathered skull dug from a mat of dead leaves on the grounds of an abandoned East Irvington, N. Y. cottage was placed in evidence as that of the slain Grace Budd by the prosecution today in the murder trial of Albert Howard Fish.

The skull, dug up by Fish Dec. 13, 1934, the day before he was formally arrested was the last part of the Budd child's body unearthed by Fish under the glare of police flashlights the night he led them to the cottage.

Detective King said Fish had denied he had ever practiced cannibalism — despite the taunting letter he had written the child's mother, Mrs. Delia Budd, indicating he had cannibalistic tendencies.

"I have whipped and tortured myself", said Fish in a letter written from the Tombs prison in New York to King, the detective testified. "A few weeks after the Budd thing I stuck needles in my body. I got awful pains sometimes."

Ex-Ray pictures taken of the defendant show he has injected 29 needles in his stomach and other parts of his body.

CHARRED BODY OF FARMER IS FOUND

Buried Under Household Effects With Fractured Skull

Pembroke, March 13—(CP)—Leslie Scheumaman of Alice Township was today held by Provincial police in connection with the death of Herbert Berger, 35. The charred body of Berger was found yesterday beside the ruins of his burned farm house near White Station, 15 miles from Pembroke.

Pembroke, Ont., March 13 (CP)—The badly charred body of Herbert Berger, 35, farmer of Alice Township, 15 miles southwest of this town, was found late yesterday under a heap of household effects, near the buildings on his farm which had previously been razed by fire.

Near Berger's body was found an axe and Dr. D. A. McKercher, coroner of Cobden district, after an examination of the body said the skull had been fractured.

The body of Berger was found by Provincial Officer E. V. McNeill, who had gone to the farm to investigate the circumstances of the fire, which destroyed the buildings on Berger's farm. When discovered Berger's body was partially covered not only with snow but a partly burned mattress and some kitchen utensils.

Dr. McKercher opened an inquest at the scene of the fatal fire last night and adjourned the hearing sine die. He said the body was so badly burned a thorough autopsy would be impossible.

Berger is understood to have come from near Petawawa township about three years ago. He was unmarried and lived alone.

The fire was first noticed by Michael Goglin, whose farm is close to the Berger farm. Goglin said he saw a man running from the Berger place towards the railway station. Goglin returned to the scene of the fire later with several neighbors when an axe was found lying in the snow some distance from the burned house. There was no blood on the axe, however, and it was believed Berger might have dropped the axe where it was found.

Provincial Constable McNeill will continue the investigation today.

Painting Hung Although Artist Is Still Bitter

By ELENORE KELLOGG
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 13—(AP)—Louis Eilshemius, whom the art world laughed at for more than 40 years, was still bitter today though a painting of his family hangs, by invitation, in the exhibition of the National Academy of Design.

"I've been so mad all these years that when the invitation came at last, it was nothing,' he said. "I knew I deserved it. The artist is the best critic.

"The Academy rejected fine paintings of mine in the past. They rejected Blakelock, too, and after he was dead, they hung him. It's stiflingly silly.

"I never got as much as $60 for a painting in my life," he said.

"The art dealers get it all. They pay me almost nothing and sell the pictures for $2,000. Why don't museums and collectors come right to the artist "

Modern art the old man snorted. "These modern abstractions are ridiculous rot. I could paint one of those in five minutes."

APPEAL ENTERED BY H. BURBRIDGE

Jury Improperly Instructed Burbidge Claims

Toronto, March 13.—(CP)—Howard Burbidge has filed Notice of Appeal against his conviction by Judge D. O'Connell, York County, on a charge of robbing and kidnapping Gerrard Beriteau and Lionel Hebert, near Napanee, and against the sentence of seven year's imprisonment imposed by the judge. The conviction concerned the "hijacking" of a truck.

The appeal will plead the judge improperly instructed the jury at the trial and improperly allowed jurors who were on the jury panel at the first trial when a disagreement was reported, to serve on the jury at the second trial. Further, Burdidge contends the evidence submitted at the second trial was insufficient to warrant a conviction.

VENIZELOS FREE AMONG ITALIANS

Government Will Not Take Action Against Rebel Leader

Rhodes, March 13—(AP)—Former Premier Eleutherios Venizelos, leader of the unsuccessful Greek revolt, arrived here today accompanied by his wife and insurgent associates. The governor of the island received the rebel leader and told him he is a free man so far as the Italian government is concerned.

A previous order that the former Greek Premier was to be interned has been cancelled, the Governor said, assuring Venizelos he may go where he likes.

Venizelos will probably stay here several days. It is understood he will go to the Italian mainland, ultimately proceeding to Paris to spend his remaining years with his two sons. Although somewhat downcast on his arrival, Venizelos indicated he was by no means crushed by the failure of his attempted revolution.

The Island of Rhodes is an Italian possession, 50 miles off the southwest coast of Turkey in the Aegean sea and approximately 75 miles from the island of Cassos to which Venizelos and his followers fled yesterday from Crete.

EIGHT-HOUR DAY CHARGE COST $15,000

Stratford, Ont., Mar. 13 (CP)—The estimated extra annual cost of inaugurating an eight-hour day for the fire department would be from $15,000 to $18,000, according to Alderman D. E. Marks, member of a sub-committee asked to look into the question. The information was requested when the committee considered it possible municipal fire departments might be included under the federal government's new limitation of legislation.

No action is likely to be taken on the eight hour day scheme for this year at least.

Alderman Marks expressed the opinion the scheme would be too costly to be undertaken at the present time.

MACDONALD ASKS CAR TARIFF PROBE BE INSTITUTED

'Unfair Burden' Charged By Nova Scotia Premier

REFERENCE BY GOV'T

Decision Practically Made To Open up Question

Ottawa, Mar. 13 (CP)— Early submission to the tariff board of a reference on the question of automobile prices to Canadian purchasers and the relation of customs duties to cost of manufacture and distribution in Canada has been considered by the government, it was learned today.

For some weeks Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes has been in personal consultation with representatives of the automobile industry in Canada and there has been much correspondence. Every detail of costs and tariffs has been under consideration and it is understood the desire of the industry was to have a special commission appointed to make a report on the relation between tariff and sale price compared with the cost of the same cars to United States users.

Submission of Question.

It is understood the government has practically decided to submit the whole question to the tariff board as the best means of securing a report fair to producer and consumer. Definite announcement on this point will be made shortly.

Halifax, Mar. 13 (CP)—An investigation by the tariff board into the relation of Dominion tariff policies to the "high level" of automobile prices in Canada is sought through Minister of Finance E. N. Rhodes by Premier Angus L. Macdonald of Nova Scotia.

The premier stated he had written the finance minister March 1 asking for the investigation into the contention that tariffs and import restrictions had sent motor vehicle costs to such figures as to "seriously interfere" with the volume of sales and constitute an "unfair burden" on buyers of automobiles in Nova Scotia and the rest of Canada.

At a meeting of the Halifax City and County Liberal Association last night, Premier Macdonald announced that acting on the Jones Commission report the government would seek an investigation into the tariffs as affecting the prices of farm implements, fishing gear, fertilizers and other articles of production.

New Policy Adopted by the Argyll Regiment is Successful

Some of the uneasiness felt by the officers commanding the Argyll Light Infantry as to the success that would attend the new training policy adopted by the regiment last year, was dispelled on Monday night when over sixty new recruits were taken on the strength for the coming drill season. This is believed to be a record for the opening night of recruiting.

The policy adopted a year ago was that of pooling all pay, the pool to be used to finance a four-day camp in some locality having a rifle range and facilities for bathing and outdoor sports. Cobourg was considered to be the most suitable location for such a camp and it will very probably be chosen again this year. A program of sports consisting of volley ball, basketball, softball, bowling and shooting was integrated with the somewhat less interesting, but nevertheless essential, disciplinary drill. The Officer Commanding, Lt.-Col. E. A. Geen, V.D., reports that at the time the policy was instituted there was some uneasiness regarding its ultimate success but events soon proved the soundness of the new plan. An improved type of personal was apparent from the beginning. There was present a greater willingness to co-operate with the officers and N.C.O.'s, all of whom had been giving their time and pay to the Battalion for a good many years. The final result was that the unit was recruited to well above the authorized strength and on the season's total work moved up to third place in the district. The two units ranking above our local Battalion were the Governor-General's Foot Guards and the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa.

This year's training already gives promise of surpassing that of last year.

Recruiting is still being carried on for the remainder of this week. It is expected that by next Monday night when the first dress parade will be held the unit will be over strength.

Police News

A small epidemic of petty thieving kept the local police department on their toes during the past 24 hours, when two cases of such a nature were presented to the authorities. A two dollar bill was stolen from a rear room at Givens' floral establishment on Victoria avenue, last evening. The money was taken from the purse of a lady attendant. Subsequently a local youth was apprehended and after questioning at the police station, admitted the theft. The matter was enlarged for further consideration, all of the money being refunded, except twenty-five cent. The second case involved a local young girl and is being further investigated by the police today, no details being available until the matter is thoroughly gone into.

Fourteen transients slumbered at the police station last night, all wending their various ways out of the city early this morning. A slight motor accident happened near the upper bridge this morning, when two autmobiles collided resulting only in fender damage. The police investigated but the matter had been amicably settled before their arrival, so slight was the damage.

Prince George, his brother and sisters

A GREAT empire fell; two great armies were battling on the war-torn fields of Europe; industrial upheavals were changing the course of man's destiny; history was being made.

But no hint of trouble or strife was allowed to penetrate the serene lives of the children of the royal household in this, the year 1870, fifth year in the life of Prince George, destined one day to be king.

But in his fifth year there was no suggestion, no thought, that George would one day sit upon the throne. His brother, seventeen months his senior, was being groomed to eventually succeed his father (Edward) as ruler of the British Empire. Prince George was being taught other things.

Discipline in the royal household was strict. From the first the children were taught self-reliance and encouraged to assume responsibility for their actions.

As a youth, Prince Albert Victor, heir to the trone, was amiable, shy and delicate; Prince George, while he was never robust, was nevertheless alert, active and wiry, with no trace of the bronchial trouble which was to cause him so much trouble in later years.

PUBLIC ENEMY NO.1 Must Go!

Kill that cold at once!

The real No. 1 Public Enemy is the "common" cold. It is a constant menace to our health and well being and should be "killed" quickly.

A cold is an infection produced within the system by a germ. Common sense dictates that you treat it internally as an internal infection. When a cold attacks don't waste time. Use Grove's.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is an internal treatment that goes directly to the source of the trouble. It does the four things necessary: First, it opens the bowels; Second, it combats the cold germs in the system and reduces the fever; Third, it relieves the headache and "grippy" feeling; Fourth, it tones up the system and helps forpify against further attacks.

At the first signs of a cold buy a box of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (the large size is the most economical to buy). Make sure you get Grove's. They're in a white box. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine has what it takes to stop a cold quickly and effectively.

History and life are being taught in pictures as never before in the world. Today world history, as well as the present is being taught consciously or unconsciously through the eye. Everything is being dramatized in the realm of human interest and all the wealth of invention which modern science can throw in to stir the interest in life is being utilized.

One has but to look back over the past year at the movies with their riches flashed on the screen, showing scenes from British and American history. When people will give up a little time of studies of the present civilization for an hour or two of the past, vivified with the personalities of heroes, it means that the moving picture and the theatre are playing a role never before played in all the history of the world. Today riches of so many kinds are showered upon us that we doubtless are not great enough to grasp them all. Here is a play, "The Iron Duke" dealing with the story of Lord Wellington, and on the stage is a story of Mary of Scotland. Then there are such dramatized novels as "David Copperfield" and "Oliver Twist."

If this richness is poured out on the screen and across the footlights it is poured out in the newspapers. Visualization seems the demand of this age. See, see, see is the order. The picture pages attract a great deal of attention and possibly the trend will continue leaving the funnies by themselves but giving more and more dramatization in pictures and picture sequences, for the picture somehow gives a local habitation and a name.

With these three great agencies, the motion picture, the stage, and the newspaper using this mighty element of dramatic presentation there is no end of the riches of all life which can be flashed into the consciousness of mankind.

Movies have even gone farther. It is difficult to make a fairy play in the world but the movie has done it. One has but to remember the countless lovely and rich pictures which are pure fabrications of the artist's brain and yet how true to the finest experiences of human life they are! This week at a local theatre—there was a colored sound picture of birds, teaching one of the loveliest lessons that only a picture can teach effectively, one which the strap fails to teach or one which even the kindly word of admonition may fail to impress. It is the story of a little boy with a pump gun he uses to shoot at a young cock robin. The bird tragedy was followed by the purification of the boy's heart as he heard the threnody of the bird parents and mates about the body of the little songster, struck by the thoughtless boy's bullet. But the miracle — movies can produce miracles and even the firmest realist can thank the movies for miracles — the raindrops revive the little creature and the boy rises from his restless pillow to join in the romantic scene of the revived bird hopping from one hand to the other. Hitherto this lesson entered the mind of man in song or in the form of thought—today it is actualized in pictures.

IN NEW YORK PULPITS

Relief from present difficulties will come not so much from political and moral reforms as from spiritual regeneration, according to Monsignor F. J. Sheen who preached at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York City. He gave two definitions of Christianity, historic Christianity and ethical brotherhood. "If we question the failure of Christianity, we mean historical Christianity, the abiding personality of the church, that certainly has not failed, because it has not been tried. But if we mean the broad vague goodfellowship that dissolves itself in a kind of humanitarianism that has failed and is passing away along with the established social and economic order to which it allied itself," he said.

The great defect of modern ideas is that they suit the times which means that they suit no other ties, he declared. He predicted oblivion in thirty years for Freud and in twenty-five years for the philosophy of Bertrand Russell. "People call things modern today because they do not now what is ancient. The world today believes that progress consists of changing ideals. The church believes that progress is advancing towards one's ideals. The world says 'Change your principles to suit the times'. The church maintains that the times must be changed to suit principles."

Rabbi Samuel H. Goldenson of Temple Emannu-el, New York City, said "To ask of a human being whether he is getting something out of life implies that he has a choice in the matter, that he could try another life. Behind that question lies a very crude idea of life, that it is a storehouse or banquet hall or a house of mirth where all kinds of gifts may be found and where all appetites may be satisfied. But life is not a storehouse. It is not separate and apart from us. Life is a grand totality of the experience of the human race to which we are all adding some contribution. "We are the bearers of this life in its totality. When we come into the world the whole of life comes with us. We are the heirs of the ages."

Affirming that the question man should ask is not "what may I get out of life?" but "what may I contribute to life?" the rabbi said the departments of life to which man can contribute are industry, art, science, philosophy, religion and metaphysics. In addition to contributing "each individual should get sufficient out of the great variety and fullness of life to bear with him into the beyond some account of what he has done.

"In order to get something more out of life in that sense everyone must do three things: cultivate competence, meaning reward as well as ability; cultivate understanding for man gets more out of life if he understands the meaning of every invention, of great sculpture, of great paintings, poetry; and the third way of getting something more out of life is in self-dedication to some altruistic purpose greater and nobler than one's self. We have the entire stage of human living and it is our part and opportunity to make our contribution to the grand total of human experience."

"If we are going to have the kind of Lent we ought to have, we are going to have it by the method of Jesus Christ, who always saw God before Him and always practised His presence," said Very Rev. Milo H. Gates at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. "I now there are certain misguided people who want to give up all thought and all faith in the presence of supernatural personalities in the world. Everything must be reduced to cold, mathematical, chemical, physical, science. And what a Sahara life would be. I am sure there is just as much rationality in the appeal to the reason of poetry, music and all art as there is in the appeal to chemistry and biology and mathematics."

Rev. Harry Rimmer, of the First Presbyterian Church of Duluth, Minn., preaching at the Calvary Baptist Church, said "predestination was a result of human cooperation and not merely of God's will." Foreknowledge looks back to what God has accomplished. Predestination looks forward to what God will accomplish with the aid of man."

"Here we have grades, classes and systems of caste, but Heaven knows no such inequalities. It will be a place of multitudinous surprises," said Rev. Dr. H. Williams of First Baptist Church, defining Heaven "as a place of perfect democracy and equality."

"When is a man rich?" asked Rev. Carlos G. Fuller of Featherbed Lane Presbyterian Church. "When we read or hear the name Mellon, one word is associated with it—the word money. And the human personality seems like a statue, cold, impersonal, no longer alive. And we call such a man rich! On the other hand if a poet starves to death in a garret we call him poor, though he may leave immortal lines of beauty that live through generations. This is a false standard of values."

"There are destructive forces all around us," declared Rev. Dr. R. F. Jenney, Presbyterian. "In life there is always a dual process, destruction and construction. The question of the day is, 'Can we build up more than we tear down?" There are always some things that need to be destroyed, those that tear down life and human values. These should be uprooted. But if we shattered everything to bits, can we build up again so life can be abundant for us and for our fellow men? We need abundant life, full of joy and goodness and beauty and truth. We need today a realist who will realistically face the worst in order that we might intelligently fashion the best.

"We are living in an age that calls for master builders. The trouble with our age is not that we are heretics in theology but that we are heretics in fact. We do not adhere to Him who can repair the wrecks of life.

"One of the crying needs of everyone of you is security. Yet how can we have security in a world such as this? Another of our needs is peace, not war. The world is suffering today for its folly for the ignorance of men."

The effect of religion on men is ambiguous like water, said the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, pointing that it can refresh and fructify or flood and ruin. Some of the worst characters in history as well as some of the best have been motivated by religion........ Religion for example can be one of the most depressing influences in human life. Lady Astor once called Dean Inge a gloomy man, which is utterly unfair to Dean Inge but is a correct picture of one kind of religion. Some people have just enough religion to scare them half to death and make them wretched. On the other hand religion can produce radiance, resilience, gaiety and joy."

It is a great evil, as well as a misfortune to be unable to utter a prompt and decided "no".—C. Simmons.

If he had sat still, the enemy's army would have mouldered to nothing.—Clarendon.

EXULTATION IN STORM

When clouds pile up in the east,
Dark bank on bank,
And the forces of wind are released,
Strong rank by rank,
Then a voice in my bosom cries
With a lusty shout;
I am part of the darkening skies
And the Storm-King's rout!

My will is the tempest's will,
I laugh, I rejoice
At the music, fierce and shrill,
Of its angry voice.
There is never wind so swift
Nor gale so strong
But the wings of my being lift
To greet its song!

IT IS BAD ENOUGH when two nations quarrel and engage in the ancient madness of trying to kill as many as possible of each other's citizens in the shortest possible time, but in these enlightened days when a nation breaks out in civil war and starts killing its own citizens then the height of idiocy has been reached. Greece, torn with civil war and press reports state that many were killed and wounded. What are they murdering one another for? Place, power and pelf. The outs want to get in office and the ins don't want to get out. At least that's the way it looks from here.

THE CUP THAT CHEERS but does not inebriate is just as popular as ever, or more so, according to a letter received by this newspaper from The Salada Tea Company of Canada, Limited, which states: "Salada Tea sales in Belleville in 1934 showed a considerable increase over 1933. We attribute this to the fine quality of our product and to the use of advertising in The Ontario Intelligencer. We take this opportunity to express our appreciation of the valuable service rendered by your publication." And in this connection let us call attention to the method of this firm which has built up an immense business through newspaper advertising. Regular, continuous advertising has always featured the Salada Tea advertising, no splashes or spurts, not large spaces, but so frequent that the idea of tea is firmly implanted in the reader's mind as associated with Salada. To our mind that's the secret of the most successful advertising, continuous, not spasmodic. Never let the public forget your product. One great nationally advertised article in the United States changed hands and the new firm thought that previous heavy advertising would carry the product along for a year or so. The firm dropped a million dollars before they recognized their error. A costly lesson but never again for them.

THE LONDON TIMES, "The Thunderer", a great newspaper, a national institution, in fact one of the corner stones of the British Empire. Accuracy has always been the keynote of the Times organization, which made it all the more sensational when "The Thunderer" got hooked with the publication of the spurious Pigott-Parnell letters. However, the most perfect organization in the world will get fooled some time. There was a saying that The Times would hold an important news story three days until every thread of it was verified. A recent copy of the weekly edition of The Times has reached this column through the courtesy of a constant reader. It is interesting and instructive from cover to cover, a mirror of the world's most important news and comment of the moment.

LET LAUGHTER ASSIST ALONG PATH OF LIFE

Laughter is a Safety Valve For Repressed Emotions

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

(Copyright, 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Laugh as much as you can, for it is good for you. Laughter is a tonic that feeds on the ego. When you laugh, you are expressing self-flattery. And this does no harm!

When you laugh, you assume a position of superiority and condescension. This, too, does no harm. Superiority and condescension, in themselves, are not worthy qualities, but when associated with laughter they lose their pernicious content, become socialized, and thus help the laughter along Life's path.

Everybody laughs. Some are better laughters than others. Strange as it may seem, so common an emotion as laughter has never been explained satisfactorily. Many theories have been propounded. Each of these theories hints at a fairly plausible solution of this psychological problem. Yet no one has been evolved thus far that covers all forms of laughter.

Laughter, of course, is a convenient safety valve for repressed emotion. A girl giggles when embarrassed. A man, when accused of something, of which he is guilty, may try to pass it off with a laugh. Sometimes, when the emotion is actuated by intense grief, a hysterical type of laughter comes to the fore.

Have you ever noticed how we laugh at the minor misfortunes of others? A person slips on a banana peal—we laugh. Another sits on his hat—we laugh. In fact, one can always get a laugh out of a mishap to a hat.

Smiling is a mild variety of laughter. We smile when the emotion is not strong. A man with a flaming red tie would be more apt to make us smile than laugh. The vagaries of young people, their supposed sophistication, make us smile rather than laugh.

We laugh at jokes because they visualise situations that are strange and uncommon. We would laugh if they happened in real life.

In all of these forms of laughter, we assume the position of looking down, in perspective, on the peculiarities and antics of the situation, whatever it may be.

That is why laughter, from a mental standpoint, is so stimulating. For, in the last analysis, it gives us the change of viewpoint which is so essential.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

Persons who are endeavoring to overcome the habit of indulgence in alcoholic liquors will find it to great advantage to eat candy and other sweets. Such persons have become used to foods which oxidise rapidly. In this case, the oxidation of sugar takes the place of alcohol.

The public reception to the Honorable Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C., M.G., Senator, Premier of the Dominion of Canada, by the citizens of Belleville, his former townsmen, yesterday was a grand success. The finest possible weather favored the occasion, the air being cool, clear and bracing and the sleighing excellent. The streets presented a gay appearance with displays of flags, banners and mottoes. The procession was formed on the market square at about noon and proceeded to the Grand Trunk Railway station in the following order: J. J. B. Flint Esq. Marshal; Chief Newton and police force; I.O.O.F. and; Company of the 15th Battalion, A.L.I.; Mayor Walmsley and members of the council; Board of Trade; Board of Education; Separate School Board; citizens in conveyances; citizens on foot. There was a large crowd assembled at the station and when Sir Mackenzie stepped from the train shortly after one o'clock he was given a rousing reception. Before Sir Mackenzie left the Government car "Cumberland", Mayor Walmsley and Mr. Thos. Ritchie, president of the Board of Trade, and a number of prominent citizens boarded the car and welcomed him. The procession was formed in the order in which it had marched to the station and proceeded down town. In the first three conveyances were a number of prominent citizens. Mr. Corby's handsome pleasure sleigh drawn by a four-in-hand, was occupied by the Premier, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir A. P. Caron, Mayor Walmsley and Mr. Thos. Ritchie. In the following sleigh were Mr. H. Corby, M.P.; Hon. Messrs. Daly and Curran and the next sleigh contained Hon. J. F. Wood, Senator Sanford and Mr. W. B. Northrup, M.P. Besides the Premier and Ministers at the luncheon the following were present: Senator Sanford, Rev. E. N. Baker, pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church, Mr. Thos. Ritchie, President of the Board of Trade; Mr. H. Corby, M.P.; Mr. W. D. Mace of Tamworth and Mr. C. P. Holton. INTEREST SHOWN IN SERMON SERIES

Rev. J. A. Koffend Continues Lectures on Life of Christ

Stirling—The congregation of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church grows larger each Sunday evening, as increased interest is shown in the special series of illustrated sermons on the life and teachings of Jesus Christ. In spite of the very bad weather on Sunday, a large attendance listened with interest as Rev. J. A. Koffend compared the present day faith of professing Christians with that of the early church. Every type of stewardship, as well as opposition, found in these days, has continued down through the ages. Opposition to Christ's teachings was shown by the intellectual class of that day as it is today. These people were educated to the point of not being able to grasp the simplicity of Christ's teachings. Also there were those who were ready to sacrifice social standing and to suffer humility to emphasize their faith. The blind and maimed were made whole because of this portrayal of undying faith. Many today, who through adverse circumstances brought about by general conditions throughout the world are still clinging steadfastly to their faith in God. It is a testing time for them, and if their faith continues strong, great will be their reward. Others there are, who because of accumulated wealth of worldly goods, fail to see that this abundance of wealth is also given into their hands to test their faith and righteousness, and that their reward will be according to their good works. Their wealth should provide for a greater amount of service. Like the Scribes and Pharisees of old they must guard against the narrowness of believing themselves especially blessed by God, and by thus believing, fall into the sin of self righteousness, placing themselves above their fellow creatures.

These sermons go deep into the minds and hearts of the listeners, and with the aid of beautiful lantern slides they are made more interesting. Mr. James Ward, who assists Mr. Koffend by operating the lantern, does so in an expert manner, carefully timing the change so that no apparent cue is necessary. As one picture passes, another appears without the slightest flicker of confusion.

Harry Lovibond Leads the Fireside Meeting

At the conclusion of the regular evening service of St. Paul's United Church, a large number of members and friends remained for the fire-side service. The meeting was opened with the usual song service of familiar hymns. Mr. Ted Hilderbrand favored the gathering with a cornet solo. Mr. Harry Lovibond led the discussion on the question, (What is success and failure?) in a very interesting manner, and invited the expression of thought of those present by a series of questions at various points in his fine talk.

Twenty men may work together, and one of outstanding ability may become a partner in the firm. Can we term him a success, and the others a failure Competition is so great in all business that often those who reach the top in the eyes of the public become a failure because of their position. We may say success is not based on dollars and cents but do we really mean it? Are we not inclined to term the man who has acquired great wealth, a success? Is not success selfish Some must fail where others succeed. Do we not try selfishly to put ourselves with the successful ones? These two elements go hand in hand. Even in competitive sport, both winner and loser has a selfish eye on the winner's laurels, but only one can win. Are the others who made the contest possible to be termed failures?

Henry Ford with his contribution to mankind has been referred to several times as a success. In giving the working man a car he has also increased the financial obligations of the poorer people and robbed them of their home life to such an extent that the good he has done is off-set by the harm of his product making neither a success nor a failure. Chance and circumstance have their hand in the gathering of material wealth, and all credit is not due to the individual owner of it. Wealth is sometimes forced upon us by circumstance, not success. The speaker spoke of the achievements of the speed king, Malcom Campbell, who received all the glory for his feats. What of the mechanic who put nut number 272 on the machine He is the forgotten man who makes the record breaking runs possible. All great figures depend largely on the ability of others who receive little credit. Christ the perfect example of success had no desire for personal or material gain. His life was a success because of its service. Coming to our present day, the speaker spoke of Edison and Dr. Banting, whose lives were a success because of their service to humanity. Success only comes to a man when he has successfully contributed to the benefit of humanity.

Great interest is being taken in these periods of discussion. The thought given to them by the speakers makes them very educational.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

EAST SEYMOUR WOMEN MARK DAY OF PRAYER

Service is Held in St. Sephen's United Church, Hoard's

East Seymour, March 13— The World Day of prayer was observed in St. Stephen's United Church, Hoard's on Friday, March 8th, 1935 in which the following groups participated: The W.M.S. and Mission Band of Burnbrae Presbyterian Church and the W.M.S. of Hoard's United Church. The attendance was good considering the state of the roads, some forty women being present.

Seated on the platform were Mesdames John Rannie and Will Hutcheon, Presidents of Hoard's and Burnbrae respectively.

The printed program was followed with the exception that "Zion's King Shall Reign Victorious" was substituted for the hymn "O Master of the Waking World."

The printed programme which by the way, was the Youth's World Day of prayer programme, prepared by the lady principal of the Baptist Moulton College in Toronto was then followed.

Scripture was read by Misses E. Wallace, Thelma Wallace, Aileen Hay. What would it mean to obey Christ's new commandment in our homes, in schools, in business, in our community life, among the nations? These questions were answered responsively, also in our personal life.

Interspersed throughout the program were musical numbers, piano solo, Miss Fern Weatherell; vocal duet by Misses Aileen and Maudie Hay; vocal solo "Trust and Obey", by Marion Walker.

Mrs. McMillan briefly addressed the meeting along the topic of the evening. After the Benediction was pronounced dainty refreshments were served and a couple of contests brightened up the wits of the assembled folk.

Correct Manners

GUEST HOSTESS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am from the country and am now living in the city, acting as guest hostess in my brother-in-law's home. He has three boys and a girl. Is it all right for me to suggest that they invite some boys and girls in while I am here to over-see or help them get ready for a party? I do not feel that they do enough in that way as they are invited out quite often, or would that seem officious

2. When my brother-in-law has guests to dinner, when dinner is announced, should I lead into the dining-room ahead of the other ladies And if, so, should I seat myself as soon as I reach my chair, or wait until all the guests are standing at their chairs? In case one person waited to fix the radio to suit himself, should we still stand and wait for him

3. Should I rise from the table first, or should my brother-in-law who is really master and host?

4. Should I lead out of the dining-room, or let the other ladies pass out first

5. When guests arrive, I arise from my chair and extend my hand in greeting, also when they are leaving. Is this correct?

6. My friend's son has just been married. I was invited to the wedding and reception. Is it correct for me to call on the bride in her new home, or should I wait for an invitation I feel that I should call, but a friend says I should not.

7. Should a wedding invitation be addressed to Mr. and Mrs. on the outside and inside envelopes?

S.

1. I am sure that you will plan this kind of thing so graciously and exquisitely with these girls and boys of the household that they will "rise up and call you blessed". With such kindness in your heart as you have about them, there will not, I am sure, be the slightest tinge of "officiousness". In this kind of household I can see that there might be a lack of return-of-hospitality, and I am sure that they will be overjoyed to have someone talk this over with them, and help them with their plans.

2. Since these dinners will be apparently informal, the group of guests will walk into the dining-roon casually — no set order, but the ladies first, of course. Since it will be you who will indicate the seating, you might go first, to stand by your place and tell your guests where they are to sit. You would not take your seat until you have indicated the seats to your guests.

I hope that it isn't the custom of the house to have the radio on during dinner — it is so difficult to "talk against it" — but if a guest does do as you say, I suggest that you, during this adjustment of the radio, seat your other guests and leave to the last your indication of his place at dinner. By that time, we will hope that he will be finished with the radio-adjustment. If he isn't, he will take his place later, but he won't, I am sure, expect you to wait for him.

3. It is you who rises from the table first, you as hostess.

4. You might lead the way to the living-room.

5. Yes. The hostess rises to receive her guests, and shakes hands with them. And as the guests leave, she rises, shakes hands with them, and tells them how happy she is that they came.

6. It is correct and gracious for you to call on the bride in her new home.

7. Yes.

MISSION BEGUN BY MISSIONARY

Rev. J. F. Brabazon Brings Message From India

The annual missionary convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance began at the Alliance Church, West Moira street, last evening, and an interested audience listened to Rev. J. F. Brabazon, who for sixteen years was a missionary to India, speak on the unique subject, "The Gifts of the Trinity".

Rev. Mr. Brabazon, who is here for these special services spent his last term in Ahmedabad Gujarat, the headquarters of Mr. Gandhi, the "Swaraj" leader of India. On several occasions he has had personal interviews with this man of loin-cloth fame and reminds us that when all has been said Mr. Gandhi is a worshipper of the cow and an idolater and these facts color his life's program.

Rev. G. N. Bell is also in the convention party. He has spent two terms in the Sudan, French West Africa and brings one of the most thrilling tales of progress in the developing of the cause of Christ in modern times. In his field at the present time there is a mighty turning to God. Tonight he will show slides and tell of the work in that great pioneer field.

Each evening, including Saturday there will be slides of either Africa or India. The public is cordially invited to all these meetings.

RIVER ICE BREAKS UP

Wallaceburg, Ont., March 13.—(CP)—Ice has started to break up in the River St. Clair and a fast flowing current is gradually pulling the ice away from the shoreline.

Heavy pressure of water from the Upper Lakes is driving small ice under the heavy ice fields that still hold in the lower channels of the St. Clair delta and many blow holes have formed as a result.

Much open water is reported on the Michigan side of St. Clair river and water has started to flow over the ice.

Making Gifts To Children

By LISA GRENELLE

Every time grandmother came to visit she brought Jimmie a present.

"What you got for me, grandma he would yell at her the moment she stepped inside the door. And when the poor woman was unfortunate enough to forget, she simply got no attention from Jimmie at all.

Jimmie was scolded for his rudeness, of course. But it made little impression. Whenever he heard that grandmother was coming to call he thought "present" automatically, and then, of course, if it turned out there was none — it was too much of a tumble to recover from at once.

You can't blame Jimmie. The fault rested with grandmother, kind, generous grandma.

Destructive Practice

It is very destructive to any small child's character to be led to expect a present upon the occasion of every arrival. How can Jimmie learn to appreciate the more subtle and far more valuable gifts grandma offers him in her companionship and affection if his attention is always diverted to "that present"

The first thing a baby learns to value is what is sweet to the taste and satisfying to the stomach; the second, what is pleasing to the eye; and the third, what is pleasant to the touch, something he can take hold of, squeeze or pull apart.

It's all very well for grandmother to bring Jimmie a present occasionally, although it would be better if nothing were given him that he did not earn. Certainly the presents should be so spaced that Jimmie never learns to expect them. They should appear at such long intervals that Jimmie has time enough to discover what else grandma has to offer, time enough to learn to love her, not as a present-giver but as a friend.

Don't Reward Illness

Giving children presents daily when they are ill is another pernicious practice. After all, sickness, though to be condoned, is not anything deserving of reward. Many children find great difficulty in adjusting themselves after a severe illness. Nothing seems to compensate them for the dropping off of presents and attention They want to be ill again and often try to feign illness.

Presents, even during illness, should not come too often or without reason. As a reward for bravery occasionally; as a means of passing the time — a book, perhaps, later a game. Surplus gifts should be saved and presented later at intervals during the difficult time of adjustment when the drama of illness no longer gives a child the center of the stage.

Fashion Flashes

Still in the scene sartorial are lame evening frocks. At a recent function, several lame dresses were worn, including one model in light blue and silver brocade; skirt and bodice are of the pointed Basque type.

Look out for brown and pink this Spring. Pink accessories, consisting of felt hat, pink lingerie blouse and pink suede gloves, are worn with a softly tailored suit in fine brown tweed. The jacket has a flared back and is belted and fitted in front.

Get the blues and be fashionable. Some of the smartest ensembles combine different shades of blue, rather than highlighting blue with white. A gown of medium blue net has a wide hen. band made of dark blue paillettes. With it is worn a loose net coat with an all-over scattering of the dark blue paillettes.

In the shadows of prophecy can be seen the coming importance of ombre or shaded fabrics. An advance frock for gala evening wear is of white chiffon, shaded through all the tones of gray, from light to very deep. The skirt, entirely pleated, has a fuchsia colored velvet girdle with long panel ends.

Just made for smart every-day wear is a two-piece frock in navy blue taffeta with a line check design in white. There are square self-covered buttons and a red patent leather belt with a large silver buckle.

So soft that they can be worn as a dress without a blouse, or as a real suit with a blouse, is a new group of soft tweed and flannel suits done after Chanel originals. One model is in soft blue woolen in a diagonal weave and can be worn with or without its blouse, which is of brown linen with blue wool-covered buttons.

Says Unification of Two Railways Solves Problems

Capt. W. C. Innes of Ottawa Speaker at Kiwanis

UNIFY RAILWAYS

Discusses National Problems in Most Spirited Address

Unification of Canada's two railways, with a resultant saving to the taxpayers of the Dominion $100,000,000 a year, would make possible the abolition of the Federal Income Tax and would lower taxation generally, Captain W. C. C. Innes, chairman of the Commercial Bureau of Canada, Inc., told members of the Kiwanis Club here on Tuesday at their weekly luncheon. He advocated unification of the railways under the management of the privately owned system, the Canadian Pacific, for a given number of years, as the ultimate solution of the greatest problem facing Canada today.

So great was the outpouring of members, that it was necessary to seat some in a different dining room. President Cliff Barrager was in the chair with Eddie Logan handling the fine box. Because of the absence of the pianist, Lea B. Riggs, the community singing was dispensed with. Of considerable interest was the welcoming home by the club of George Pepper, who last week established a world's record for Class C Motorcycles at Daytona Beach of 93.497 miles per hour and who also finished third in the North American 200 mile race, he being the first Canadian to ever attain a place in this important race. Accompanying George on his trip south were Henry Wallbridge, John McLean and Gordon Chalmers. The boys were introduced to the club by Claude D. Tice, who gave a resume of their activities in the southland and Gordon Chalmers replied telling the club of their trip to and from Jacksonville. George Lee, president of the Sports Committee on behalf of the club presented George with a signet ring and although taken completely by surprise, George thanked the members for their kindness and was most modest in saying "he would have won had he been able to ride better for his machine was capable of winning."

Memory Honored

In memory of Fred H. McLean, lieutenant governor of this district, who died suddenly in Toronto on Monday, the club observed a minute's silence and Eddie Shapiro moved, that a telegram be sent the family and also wreath. Ernie Finkle will represent the club at the funeral on Wednesday in Toronto. Phil McKee, chairman of the Achievement Committee gave a most comprehensive record of the activities of the club since the first of the year. Phil is a very ardent Kiwanian and his tabulation given in so concise form and explanation of certain phases brought instant and hearty applause from the members. The Picton Club will pay an inter city visit to the Belleville Club next Tuesday, the luncheon to be held in the evening.

Joe Shortt, secretary of the "Y" also reported for the Ki-Y Hockey League and certainly sure the Club is doing something to advance the interests of the young boys in the city. Over 200 players in four series took part this year, many of them showing exceptional ability at the pastime but more important they were learning how to play the game, which will stand them in good stead in future years. A report of the league will be found in another column.

Eddie Logan energetic chairman of the membership committee and his efficient staff have certainly been active in increasing the membership. The committee set as their goal a club membership of fifty by the end of the year and although only four months have passed, that objective has been reached with many more to be added. On Tuesday Charles A. Mott, City Engineer was introduced as a new member and was welcomed by the president and presented with his button. The program was lengthy and Charlie was not introduced to the individual members but that will be done at a future meeting. Charlie was born in this city, educated here and served with distinction in Canada and Siberia with the Canadian Artillery and after leaving the army joined the City Hall staff, where he has been a valued member since 1919. He was made City Engineer in June 1929.

The speaker of the day was introduced by George Griffin and Kiwanian appreciation was expressed by Dr. R. A. Flynn.

Origin of Income Tax

The speaker began his address by referring to Section 91 of the British North America Act, which vests in the provinces the right to levy direct taxation. This was adhered to up to 1917, when conscription was introduced in Canada. The masses of the people demanded that if men were to be conscripted for war service, then wealth too should be conscripted. Thus, income tax was born.

It was hoped that it would be repealed after the war, when, Captain Innes maintained, all the extreme measures of the wartime period should have been repealed. However, because income tax had been found to be an easy method of raising large sums of money, and because, politically, no government had the courage to repeal it, income tax had been continued up to the present. It would have been an easy matter, the speaker thought, to have abolished income tax in the prosperous years of 1926-28, when the revenue was not required.

Captain Innes compared Canada to Great Britain. The mother country has but one form of income tax; Canada has two, and in some provinces, three. He pointed out that old countries have generations of accumulated wealth, and require no world capital in their development.

"The folly of income tax in this country is apparent, Captain Innes declared, "when we realize that this form of taxation takes $75,000,000 out of Canadian business each year, money which would be much better spent in expansion of business."

The speaker referred to the fact that although corporations pay a corporation tax of 12½ percent., individuals collecting dividends from these corporations pay from two to 65 percent, in income tax. He felt that this duplication of taxation was one of the most vicious features of the act. He did not agree with the graded income tax, feeling that a straight percentage would be more in keeping with standards of British fairplay than a system which taxes from two to 65 percent.

"The effect upon the individual is that one who dares to go into business and creates a large business, soon finds that his growing profits are eaten up in income tax", Captain Innes said. "Income tax kills initiative and ambition. It is foreign to a young country. It is dangerous and vicious. We all pay indirectly. We pay through unemployment. You cannot take money out of business without crippling business.

The speaker went on to tell of proposals for the introduction of new forms of income tax in Ontario and in Montreal. He felt that businessmen are already carrying enough taxation to break their backs, and warned that unless a halt is called, business people will soon be taxed out of business.

The Alternative

"I would not say that income tax should be abolished unless I were able to suggest some alternate means of meeting the situation," Captain Innes said. "The $75,000,000 per year derived through income-tax is necessary now, and will be necessary until we can stop the leaks and save that much money and more. We are facing a crisis today as serious as that which we faced in 1914. The Prime Minister said not long ago that the railway situation is the biggest problem facing the people of Canada today, and that unless a solution is found, he fears for the credit of Canada. The Canadian National Railway is now costing the people of Canada $100,000,000 per year. That cannot keep up indefinitely."

The speaker declared that prior to 1919, there had been a period of extravagant and unnecessary railway building, and many reckless advances and loans to the railways. In 1919, the people of Canada found themselves in the position that, to save their own credit, they were forced to take over the railways which are now known as the Canadian National railways. The speaker did not criticize the officers or employes of the railway, who had given loyal and efficient service, but he felt that the time had come to call a halt on the annual expenditure of $100,000,000 of the taxpayers' money.

Will Bankrupt C. P. R.

Captain Innes said that the C.N.R. had been set up in competiton to the privately-owned C.P.R. and that in a matter of years, the C.P.R. will be bankrupt, because no private concern, no matter how small or large it might be, can stand against government competition.

The Duff Commission had made an exhaustive survey of the railway situation and had recommended co-operation. This had resulted in the closing up of a few lines and the running of pool trains but, on the whole, the co-operation plan had amounted to very little, as co-operation with the government is impossible.

The popular belief that the railway situation would right itself when prosperity returns is a fallacy, the speaker thought, as even in the peak of 1928, the C.N.R. had shown a deficit of $39,000,000. The growing competition of buses, trucks and automobiles should also be considered.

"The solution, in my opinion, lies in the unification of the railroads, under the management for a given number of years of the privately-owned company," Captain Innes declared. "The government would continue to own the C. N. R. properties, but the C. P. R. would be given a free hand to cut out duplication, cut down overhead and get the railways down to a paying basis."

Cut Cost of Government

Captain Innes also urged a sharp reduction in the cost of government, by the elimination of some forms of government. He felt that Canada with its federal parliament, senate, nine provincial legislatures and local governments, is over-governed.

"The cost of government for this country, with less than 10,000,000 people and less than 3,000,000 taxpayers, is now $900,000,000 per year," Captain Innes said. "With 10 governments, federal and provincial, we have so much legislation that most businessmen are working, not for themselves, but for the governments. No government builds anything Young countries are built up by the initiative of their businessmen. If I had my way, I would be quite content to abolish our provincial legislatures and get along with a federal parliament of 245 members and a senate of 90 members. The day of provincial governments is gone. It would be a simple matter to consolidate the prairie provinces, whose characteristics are exactly similar in every respect, and the same would apply in the Maritimes. By consolidation, we could eliminate four provincial governments, with a saving to the taxpayers of Canada of $60,000,000 per year.

Amend B. N. A.

"I would advocate that the British North America Act be amended," the speaker went on. "It is sadly out of date after being in existence for 67 years. It could be amended to give the federal government more freedom in legislating for the benefit of all the people of Canada, and could be amended without affecting the right of any race or creed.

"Will any political party give us unification of the railways? Or abolish provincial governments? Or abolish income tax? Or amend the British North America Act? The answer to all these questions is no! We need a national government comprising the best elements of all our political parties, a government that would be free of politics and would have a free hand in carrying out the much-needed reforms for Canada's salvation."

CORNCOBS, LEAVES RUN GERMAN CARS

Effort to End Dependence on Foreign Fuel's Use

Berlin, March 13—Germany is rolling along toward freedom from dependence upon foreign fuel oil in vehicles propelled by power from coal dust, dried leaves corncobs, illuminating gas and wood.

Chancellor Hitler told German engineers to "build motors that can be driven by domestic fuel or substitutes" and gave government subsidies to get the results he wanted.

Today many trucks running on Germany's new highways have made possible a cut of 17 or 18 per-cent in foreign oil importations. To help things along the government reduced by 50 per cent taxes on trucks driven by fuels from substitutes and home produced oil. Community and city administrations will give preference in their municipal purchases to these trucks.

The automobile show in Berlin demonstrated the progress made in these efforts to help Germany's trade balance. One of the more popular types is a big truck for cross-country deliveries. It is driven by gas generated from wood.

It looks like an ordinary truck except that it has a large container for wood in the rear. It is said that its cost of operation is abou 30 per cent less than that of a gasoline-driven vehicle.

Only a few alterations change an ordinary gasoline motor into one that can be driven by illuminating gas. The Berlin Gas Company operates several of these cars and says they save 40 per cent. A special service station which will be the forerunner of a whole chain, can fill gas containers in three or four minutes.

One of the most impressive trucks at the show was a streamlined steam car built by a factory that hitherto has built only railway locomotives. The truck is said to develop a speed of sixty miles an hour with 120 passengers.

A stationary motor driven by coal dust is intended for farmers. It was intended in 1916 by Rudolf Pawlikowski, a former collaborator of Rudolf Diesel, inventor of the Diesel engine. It costs 25 cents an hour to operate it. It can use refuse from farms like vegetable dust, dried leaves and corncobs.

Oshawa, Ont., March 12—(CP)—Charles N. Robson, President of the Robson Leather Company and race-horse owner and breeder died today. He was 62 years of age. His thoroughbreds were known on many race tracks in Canada and United States. Last Fall he was elected to the Board of Directors of the Ontario Jockey Club.

DRIVE ON RACKETEERS BEGUN

Montreal, March 12 (CP)—Quebec Provincial Police started a drive on bail bond "racketeers" in Montreal today with the arrest of two men, one of them a court house employee. About fifteen more arrests are expected within the next few days, police said.

When Bobby.. scalded himself!

YOU will never forget his screams and your own panic. It seemed hours before a tube of Unguentine was rushed to you from your nearest druggist.

You spread it on gently and generously. Quickly Unguentine began to soothe and cool. It drew out the fire of the scald. Changing the dressing caused no pain because Unguentine does not dry out.

Today, there is no disfiguring scar. Just a memory of the accident and a resolution kept to always have a tube of Unguentine where you can reach it instantly.

The wise Mother keeps a tube of Unguentine in the kitchen where it can be reached quickly—and another in the medicine cabinet for cuts, infectious scratches and bruises.

Unguentine Quick!

Letters to the Editor

Rossmore.

Editor of Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—

Will you please allow me a small space in your paper?

In reply to Lover of Fish and Game I would say he has been greatly misinformed as there are plenty of fish of all kinds in the bay yet, and will be, after he and I are both gone and forgotten.

There were more bass taken last year than in any one year for the past fifteen. If he can't get them to bite his hook that's his hard luck and no fault of ours. I would like to make a few statements which I am prepared to prove.

On the opening day last year one angler took forty-eight bass from the bay bridge. They were also taken from there from the time the ice went out till after the season closed, nearly every day, ranging in size from four inches up.

Another angler went out and took twelve bass before nine o'clock, went and sold them, and went out again in the afternoon and probably took as many more.

Now, Sir, would it be any wonder if the bay was depleted of game fish when this is allowed to go on. Now why doesn't Lover of Fish and Game suggest taking all the farms up the Trenton road if the farmers have poor crops next year and turn them into tourist camps. This might help the tourist trade and to my mind would amount to just about the same thing. Leave him with his equipment on his hands, which no doubt would happen to the fishermen were they not allowed to fish, the trade in which amounts to many thousands of dollars.

As regards lake fishing, there is just about one per cent of the fishermen that go to the lake in summer as you have to have altogether different equipment both in boats and nets which cost a lot of money to secure.

We all agree the tourist trade is a fine thing, but why persecute those that were born in Canada, have worked and in many cases fought for her, to send a few tourists home happy, when you may be sending a good Canadian to bed hungry. Is it because they won the war or did we have a hand in it too?

As to fishing west of the bay bridge, this water has been closed for thirty years and ninety per cent of the bass are taken east of there where netting is legal. This should be proof that netting doesn't destroy game fish.

Now, Sir, is fishing the only industry that hasn't been making big profits the last three or four years? What about the farmers with their poor crops and small prices. They have been hit the same as the fishermen and I think if all the industries had been closed that haven't been making money, our country would be worse off than it is today, so why single out the fishing industry?

Now, Sir, in closing, let me say I would be glad to debate fishing at any time with Lover of Fish and Game in public or private and I think I can show him where he is all wrong. I would like to have him come to my fishing camp this Spring. I could show him pike, perch, suckers, carp, and all kinds of coase fish being scooped out by the tons in spawning season when there is absolutely no sale for them. And speaking of carp, I think they should be taken out of the water by any ways or means as they are fast destroying all feeding beds for wild ducks and spawning grounds for fish.

Hope you will see fit to print this, Mr. Editor.

I remain,
Yours truly,
FRANK BELNAP,
Fisherman,
Rossmore.

Steam Engine Busy At Government Dock

With a steam engine belching smoke at the upper end of the government dock and driving the hot steam through hundreds of yards of pipes to the heated forms and piles of sand and gravel on the dock, workmen engaged on the new dock extension construction south of the city were prepared and awaiting today the arrival of the first cement for mixing and pouring into the upper cribs specially prepared.

From the mixer on the dock the cement will be trundled by the workmen in barrows along the platform built over the cribs where it will be poured into the heated sections. Arrangements for the mixing and the pouring of the cement will take into consideration the continuance of the work even in the near zero weather even though such extreme temperatures at this late date are not expected.

It is stated by Chairman of the local board of Harbor Commissioners under whose direction the work is being carried on that the completion of the dock proper was hoped for by about June.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLE

"One More Spring"

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter Co-Star in New Film

"The Spring Festival of Certified Entertainment" continues at the Belle Theatre to usher in an extraordinary number of motion pictures now being released by the major film studios, based on the work of classic and modern authors of outstanding achievements, according to Manager Forhan.

Shakespeare, Dickens, Poe, Thackeray, Dumas and Victor Hugo will be represented on the screen this season, Manager Forhan said. Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream" produced by Max Reinhardt heads the schedule of outstanding pictures, with Dickens' "David Copperfield", Poe's "The Raven"; "Becky Sharp", based on Thackeray's "Vanity Fair"; "The Three Musketeers" from Dumas, and the two Victor Hugo classic, "Les Miserables" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" continuing the line-up of really worthwhile motion pictures.

In selecting modern authors for representation on the schedule of current season picture releases, producers have seemed to measure them with the same yardstick of greatness, Manager Forhan said, pointing to Sir James Barrie, C. K. Chesterton, Booth Tarkington, Jack London, Edna Ferber, Ferenc Molnar Hervey Allen and Sinclair Lewis as examples.

The new season list includes Tarkington's "Mississippi" which Paramount has made with Bing Crosby and W. C. Fields in the cast, also the translation into pictures of Hervey Allen's gigantic historical romance," Anthony Adverse", will probably prove one of the major alltime achievements of the screen, Manager Forhan believes.

Movie lovers who remember the enjoyable screen entertainment that resulted from the talents of Janet Gaynor and Warner Boxter, will delight in the announcement that this team of screan lovers are again costarred. The picture is "One More Spring" and starts a three day engagement today at the Belle Theatre.

These stars, who made such a screen furore of "Paddy" and "Daddy Long Legs" appear in a poignant and tender romance of today, adapted from the acclaimed bestseller from the pen of Robert Nathan.

Janet Gaynor has a deeply emotional role as a courageous girl alone in the world, and Warner Baxter is the romantic adventurer who clings to the right to dream. Advance reports from cities where "One More Spring" is playing hail the performances of these stars as extraordinary and memorable.

Stepin Fetchit brings his peculiar and original comedy to relieve the tenseness of this picture that has been called hard as earth and soft as clouds. The talented supporting cast is composed of Walter King, Jane Darwell, Roger Imhof, Grant Mitchell, Rodemary Ames, John Qualen, Nick Foran and Astrid Allwyn.

Hey Hey Fever is the title of a Technicolor comedy creation to be presented on the same program with an interesting Topical offering, and the Dionne Quintuplets, a new complete movie record of a day with the world's most famous babies in which you hear Doctor Dafoe describe the youngsters and see their first Christmas party.

Complete performances start daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.10, the feature offering commencing at 3.10, 7.40 and 9.50 p.m.

JUNIOR CHEMIST HONORED

Winnipeg, March 13.—(CP)—Selwyn Gwillyn Blaylock, 37 years ago a junior chemist in a British Columbia Smelting plant, today was given one of the highest honors within the realm of Canada's mineral industry.

At the 36th annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy, of which he is President, Dr. Blaylock was presented the Institute's platinum medal for "distinguished contribution to Canada's Mineral Industry."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Man of Aran"

A Fascinating Picture of The Natural Life of the Aran Islanders

"Man of Aran", which opens tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre is a fascinating human story of the struggle to earn a livelihood of the islanders off the coast of West Ireland. The picture opens with a breath-taking thrill, the three principal actors being nearly overwhelmed and swept to sea with one of those sweeping "ninth waves" of a rapidly-flowing tide. The folk of the Aran islands live a hard life, wresting sustenance from nature with determination and courage. The charm of the picture lies in its unrivalled closeness with nature and the cheery optimism with which the islanders go about their daily business—whether it is making a potato patch on the barren limestone rock, fishing or harpooning the basking shark. Thrill follows thrill in these exciting encounters, but even the desperate nature of this work is overshadowed by the tremendously engrossing scenes of a fierce southwest gale, with a "boiling" sea, threatening to submerge not only people but the islands.

The shark-capturing episodes are among the most thrilling scenes in "Man of Aran". This class of deepsea fishing belongs alone to the West Coast of Ireland. The sunfish or basking shark passes in a shoal off the coast towards the end of April on the way from the southern to the northern seas.

The fish are easily approached and struck with harpoons while basking.

Allowing him half an hour to tire himself, the fishermen begin to coil up the slack line and play him, sometimes for hours, before they can get him to come to the surface. Then he is struck with other harpoons, and when exhausted pulled alongside and lashed to the curragh. The only part of the fish deemed serviceable is the liver, which weighs from a ton and a half to two tons, and gives from six to eight barrels of oil as fine as spermaceti.

Second Big Feature

"The Camels are Coming" is a starring vehicle for Britain's most famous comedian, Jack Hulbert. Jack has scored a big success in the past as a policeman and a sailor, and now in "The Camels are Coming" he becomes Squadron Leader Jack Campbell, arriving in Egypt in charge of ten aeroplanes bought by the Egyptian Government to assist in fighting ever-active smugglers.

The fun begins straightaway with the opening scenes and continues with a crescendo movement to the climax which is a positive riot. He blunders into the smugglers' headquarters and, obliging chap that he is, actually runs a cargo of contraband, known as "Arab's Delight" for them. He is later involved in a desert-fort siege, when disguised as a shiek, at the head of a camel caravan manned by lifeless straw dummies, he is surprised by the real shiek.

Played before novel backgrounds, the story provides Jack with limitless opportunities for comedy situations of which he readily avails himself. His scene with a camel, for instance, is a priceless piece of work that will cause beholders to literally curl up with laughter, yet this is only one incident in a picture absolutely packed with happy laughter.

Complete shows at 2.30; 7.15, 9.15. Last time tonight, beautiful Barbara Stanwyck ably supported by Warren William in "The Secret Bride" and Lyle Talbot with Mary Astor in "Ret Hot Girls". Shows at 2.30, 7.00 and 9.15.

Toronto, Mar. 13 (CP)—Secretary W. A. Hewitt of the Ontario Hockey Association announced today playoff dates with senior representatives from the Northern Ontario Hockey Association had been set but the junior dates would depend upon how the Kitchener-Oshawa series progressed.

Sudbury seniors will meet Brockville Magedomas, O.H.A. senior "B" winners, Friday night and Monday afternoon in Toronto.

Sudbury Cubs will meet either Kitchener or Oshawa possibly on Monday and Wednesday, but progress of the O.H.A. teams may mean the dates with the northerners would be Wednesday night and the following Saturday afternoon.

ARMY CADETS ARE MADE WELCOME

Capt. E. S. Payne in Charge of Party Directed Meeting

The Salvation Army Cadets, who arrived in the city yesterday, received an enthusiastic greeting in the Citadel last night, almost a capacity audience was observed on the opening night of the campaign.

An introductory march and open-air meeting was held yesterday afternoon, when citizens in large numbers observed and heard the student visitors.

Captain E. S. Payne of the Training College staff, who is in charge of the party, directed the meeting last night. The cadets made a brief initial appearance in "mortorboards" and surplices, singing their stirring College Yell, Hip Hip Hurrah. Here we are again, Garrison Students we" and being introduced in song-manner by Cadet A. Fitch Welcome remarks were expressed by Adjutant A. W. Martin and Sergt.-Major Hart, also Y.P. S.M. Stanley Lessells, replied to by Captain E. Payne.

The cadets in sentence-speeches gave their names, former home and Christian experience. Cadet D. Kaill read the Scripture selection, leading into an appropriate quartette selection, "I Want My Life to Tell for Jesus", the party being composed of the following—Cadets Fitch, J. Veill and W. Shaver and Captain Payne.

Make Jesus King

"Make Jesus King" is the stirring campaign theme and the Bible address given by Captain E. S. Payne centered wholly around that supreme thought and the speaker made an earnest appeal for human surrenders to the divine Kingship. Seventeen persons came voluntarily to the altar for such consecration. The meeting concluded with the oldtime blood and fire Army spirit.

Following the afternoon open-air event the Cadets made a canvass of greeting among the business officials of the city, and were warmly received by all, and they were given a cordial reception and warm commendation of the Army's work in the city.

The cadets will form a contact with the public in House-to-House visitation, and downtown shoppers will observe a "Round the World Salvation Army Display" in special window, kindly loaned by Walker Hardware Co., which will change daily.

It was noted in the list of activities made public last night, that a very special feature will appear this evening, "What Ails You?" This will introduce Dr. Cure-All's Surgery, with up-to-date remedies, illustrative of spiritual rejuvenation. The quartette party will also furnish vocal selections.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Owing to continued mild weather the committee in charge of the past season district play-offs was foced to postpone last night's dual bill for the Burrows trophy at the last moment. Directly following the cancelling of the games, however, the Madoc club informed the committee that it would be practically impossible for them to compete in such a series this year. Due to the fact that both Trenton and Picton have challenged for the Belleville and district championship a series will be arranged and played on Thursday night, weather permitting. It has been suggested by the officials that Grills, defenders of the cup and title, must meet Trenton in an abbreviated game of two periods, following a short interval the winner of this game is to meet the Picton team for the district title in the final game. This may sound like a hardship on the winner of the first game, asking them to turn around and meet a fresh team, but it is the only possible way in which the series may be hurriedly terminated under such changeable weather conditions. At that such a set-up should provide the fans with one last interesting night of hockey to ring down the curtain.

While on the subject of hockey it might be of interest to know that Lionel "Gunner" Arnott is once again living in Belleville. Just whether "Gunner" intends settling down in the old home town or not, we cannot say, but if sufficient inducements were offered him it is believed that he would welcome the opportunity to return to his native city and assist in the coaching and tuition of all hockey players in the community. Already plans are being formulated to endeavour giving Belleville fans a winning team for next year. Dame Rumour has a star defenceman from Oakville coming to the city, while there is absolutely no foundation to the rumour that Roy Covert is located in Campbellford, at least, not yet. Incidentally if the Sudbury "Wolves" and the Brockville Magedomas clash in the O.H.A. play-downs there will be ex-Belleville players lined up on each team, Doug Runions playing for Sudbury while Sherry, Nicol, Tice and Red MacDonald of the Magedomas all have seen service in a local uniform. (Won't you bring back those wonderful days?)

Congratulations are due to Russ Blinco, born in Grand'mere, Que., 27 years ago yesterday. Coming out of Bishop's College, Lennoxville, he helped Brooklyn Crescents win the amateur hockey championship of the United States in 1931-32. In 1932 he turned pro and after playing with Springfield and Windsor, he was bought by Montreal Maroons in 1933. He quickly made good in major league ranks as a centre.

Then remember when two years ago University of Western Ontario's hockey Mustangs gained a 6-1 victory over Ottawa University, in a sudden death play-off at London, Ont., earning for Western students their first intermediate intercollegiate hockey championship of Canada.

Up in London, Ont., the baseball celebrities experienced a difficulty something similar to that presenting itself right here in Belleville today. After endeavouring to amicably settle the London differences without avail a tribunal of six men was appointed and they soon settled the trouble by taking over the baseball franchise themselves and operating the senior team themselves. Incidentally the move proved most satisfactory, and all troubles have been amicably ironed out to the satisfaction of all parties concerned and they expect to have a real smart team of ball tossers in the Forest City next summer; which is as it should be right here in Belleville.

Belleville seems to be the haven for baseball players just about this time of the year, just as Napanee was every spring for the past two years. Yesterday three Queen City ballsters dropped off in the city in quest of employment, but apparently found themselves very much misinformed. "Why we heard that there were plenty of jobs for ball players here in Belleville," quoth the trio, "but it looks as though we'll have to 'thumb' our way back home." "How did you get down here," they were asked. "The same way we intend to return, hitch-hiking," came back the reply as the trio struck out for the western city limits afoot. We ran into "Speedy" St. Louis, pitching catcher of the Kingston Ponies last night on the street. "Where yer goin', Speedy?" we querried. "Home," was his reply and that's that for baseball today except to say that the Nationals will meet within the next 24 hours to name their delegates to attend the C.O.B.L. meeting at Oshawa on Saturday.

Secretary Joe Shortt of the local Ki-Y Hockey League tendered his annual report to the Kiwanis Club yesterday and a very creditable report it was too. For instance there were four series in the Ki-Y League this year: Bantam, Midget, Juvenile and Junior. Over 250 boys registered in the league, that embraced 22 teams in all series. Sixty-six games were played during which over 1200 boys participated. The executive of the Ki-Y League supplied such sundries as goal equipment, pucks, goal, sticks, ice, lighting, referees, timekeepers, besides supervision. The success of the Ki-Y League can be clearly shown in the calibre of hockey players turned out each year. It is a well-worth-while organization and deserves the moral support and patronage of the citizens in a greater measure than it receives. A complete resume of the year's activities in Ki-Y hockey circles appears in today's issue.

The newest heavyweight fighter to create a stir in England is Gunnar Barslund of Finland—and he hasn't fought yet in this country. Fight critics took one look at the six-foot, one-inch Finn and decided he might cause a lot of trouble among the Petersens, Harveys and Gains.

Tonight's local sport interest lies down in Napanee, where the local "Y" intermediate basketball team meet the R.M.C. hoopsters in sudden death game for the championship of the E.O.B.A., intermediate series. The locals will be at full strength, as will the Cadets for this all important cage tilt.... ..Tomorrow evening the fight season is being ushered in up at the Trenton Airport when nine all-star bouts are on the card ...... Incidentally we understand that the wrestlers are scheduled to return to Belleville just as soon as the ice can be removed from the Arena.

George Pepper, the local motorcyclist who made such a creditable showing at Daytona Beach, Fla., in the recent National Motorcycle races, returned home over the week-end after having broken one track record down where the sun shines on both sides of the fence these days. Besides racing motorcycles and seeing Sir Malcom Campbell drive his Blue Bird over the sands at Daytona Beach, George also watched the big league baseball players during their early spring workouts and had a general good time, he says. Yes, he's going back next year.

Pro Clubs Grab Amateurs At First Sign of Ability

By FRANK FREDRICKSON

Princeton Hockey Coach

The law of supply and demand has given amateur hockey a black eye.

Frank Fredrickson

Years ago, before the United States took professional hockey to its bosom and before the professionals were constantly crying for talent, an amateur had to be a standout before he was handed a cash contract.

Today, with nine National League clubs in operation and not enough amateur standouts to go around, the demand is exceeding the supply. Where ten years ago mediocre simon-pure players were ignored by their professional brothers, they now are grabbed in a hurry. Amateurs of the present era are practically as proficient as their predecessors. But an amateur today isn't given a chance to develop. He's signed by the pro clubs at the first signs of ability. It is said of Conny Smythe, Toronto mentor, that he gets an option on every boy in Ontario the day that boy puts on his first pair of skates. This is a gross exaggeration, of course, but a fairly good barometer of modern times.

Amateurs of the modern era don't take their game seriously for the most part except as a prelude to professionalis. I mean that pro hockey has given amateurism an impetus that it has never known before. Every good amateur, unless he is independently wealthy, has an eye on a professional contract. If he is worth his salt, he gets it. With all the major and minor league pro clubs now operating, it is only logical to suppose that no worthwhile amateur could emulate the proverbial flowers and blush unseen.

I believe this need of new talent is the very breath of hockey, if not carried too far. Of course it dims the ancient glory of amateur hockey. With all good prospects being snapped up by the pros, the simon-pures have to get along with the best material available. But, considering the expansion of professionalism, such a situation is to be expected. Ten years ago the amateur ranks were replete with fine performers. Now, if a good man is playing for him, it's a reflection on the big league scouts.

Conny Smythe

Way back in 1920 I predicted a big hockey future for Europe. My prediction has to a large extent come true. The future for the game in North America is still more promising. However, the amateurs are being plucked too fast for the good of the amateur game. Temperance in professional promoting is necessary, or our amateur ranks will be washed out before they are truly competent.

Hornsby's Confidence in Buck Newsom Rewarded

One of several surprises Rogers Hornsby worked out for the benefit of the American League and to the horror of the Brooklyn Dodgers and Louis (Buck) Newsom, a man who came back.

The story of Newsom is typical of Hornsby management. Especially is the Rajah a splendid teacher of pitchers. When he was with the Cubs, Hornsby was credited with developing Lon Warneke, among other slabsters. It was as manager of the Cubs that the Rajah greeted Newsom when Buck first saw the majors, in 1931.

Rajah Remembers

The big fellow impressed Hornsby from the start, and when Hornsby went to St. Louis to become manager of the Browns, he kept track of Newsom who was released by the Cubs to Los Angeles, in 1933. When the draft call came after the 1933 season, Hornsby claimed Newsom for the Browns.

Buck started slowly at St. Louis and was wild. One not so patient as Hornsby might have become discouraged. Then in mid-season Buck picked up, started winning regularly and finished the season in a blaze of glory.

Newsom proved a horse for work, performing with the same gusto he had shown the previous season at Los Angeles. He worked in 47 games, two more than any other American league pitcher (Schoolboy Rowe) appeared in. Only two innings. Newsom pitched 262 innings. Gomez 282, Rowe 266.

His earned run average for his first full big league year, 4.02 was lower than that of any other Brownie hurler, and was seventeenth in the league. He won 16 games, while losing 20.

Hitless Nine Innings

Newsom pitched nine innings of hitless ball against the Red Sox Sept. 18, but lost in ten innings, 2 to 1. He followed up this fine game by beating Tigers, Sept. 22, in the first game of a double-header, allowing the champions, with Rowe pitching against him, only four hits.

Newsom is a native of South

LOUIS (BUCK) NEWSOM

Carolina, born at Hartsville, Aug. 11, 1908. Leaving Carlisle college in 1928, he started his professional career with Wilmington, N.C. Pitching for Macon, Ga., he was purchased by Brooklyn, and optioned to Jersey City and back to Macon in 1930.

In the following year he pitched for Springfield (Ill.) in the Three-Eye league, got up as far as Kansas City in the A.A., and was dropped back to Little Rock. Then the Cubs drafted him, optioned him to Reading and Albany in 1932 and released him in 1933.

A great season at Los Angeles followed in which Buck won 31 games. From there, back up—to stay.

THE BIG SEVEN

(By the Canadian Press)

The big seven scoring leaders of the National Hockey League remained unchanged in their positions today. The marksmen picked up four assists and one goal between them but it failed in any way to change the standing. The three-way tie for second place between Harvey Jackson of Toronto, Syd Howe of Detroit and Frank Boucher of Rangers remained unbroken.

The standing:

	G.	A.	Pts.
Conacher, Toronto ..	32	21	53
H. Jackson, Toronto	22	21	43
Howe, Detroit	20	23	43
Boucher, Rangers ..	11	32	43

Eighth Shutout for Hainsworth Ties Thompson and Chabot as Leafs Defeat Maroons by 1-0

Boston And Leafs Most Likely to Meet For N.H.L. Title

NEW STUNT TRIED

Patrick Puts Six Forwards on Ice to Get Tieing Goal

(By A. E. Fulford)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Pointing to a big-gate series with Toronto Leafs, that would fill their pockets with playoff money, Boston Bruins were away out on top in the National Hockey League's American division today. They entered the last week of the schedule five points up on Chicago Black Hawks with three games to play.

With a thought in their minds of the summer holiday money an N.H.L. title series with Leafs would give them, Bruins went through the motions smartly enough at Boston last night to defeat Americans 4-1 in a listless game.

If they can do that again Thursday, when they clash with Joe Simpson's team again in New York they will make it almost impossible for Hawks to catch them. Winning all their remaining four games Chicago can make their total 59 points. A victory Thursday would give Bruins 58 with two games more to work on.

Their playoff position secure, Leafs set out at Montreal last night to give George Hainsworth, their goalie, a benefit and it worked. The idea was to enable Hainsworth to score his eighth shutout of the season and tie Lorne Chabot, Chicago and Tiny Thompson, Boston.

Conacher, Horner Absent

They prevented Maroons from scoring even without Charlie Conacher and Red Horner, who were not up to par and were left in Toronto. Hec Kilrea won the 1-0 game for Leafs in the second period, picking up a pass from Bill Thoms after Harvey Jackson had started the play. Hainsworth had to stop only 17 shots and Alex Connell, in the other goal, 22.

New Yorkers saw a preview of the probable meeting of Canadiens and Rangers in the playoffs, the Montrealers winning 4-3 after Rangers had come from behind twice to tie the score.

St. Louis Eagles set something of a record when they scored the tieing and winning goals in three seconds at St. Louis to beat Detroit Red Wings 3-2.

Nels Stewart and Red Beattie accounted for all the Bruin scoring in the game at Boston, both getting two goals. Stewart also had an assist. Bill Brydge saved Americans from a shut-out with his second period goal.

Lester Patrick gave the customers in New York a thrill when he pulled Davie Kerr out of the nets in the final minute and sent six forwards up the ice to try for the tieing goal. They didn't get it but neither did the Habitants score, when the goal was empty.

TECS STILL IN TIE

LONDON, Ont., March 13— (CP) London Tecumsehs still shared the top rung in the International Hockey League with Detroit Olympics today and Cleveland Falcons were in a three-cornered deadlock with Buffalo and Syracuse for third position.

A desperate set-to last night between Falcons and Tecs, was concluded with a 2-2 tie after 70 minutes of play which saw a free-for-all in the opening stanza. Even the goal-tenders and subs got into the battle which started when Dick Benson slashed Eric Pettinger and the London left winger retaliated with an uppercut. Pettinger drew a major penalty, Benson a minor and Bill Cunningham emerged from the pile-up with a gash on his face that required three stitches.

LEG HAS HEALED

Making a comeback at the camp of the St. Louis Cardinals, Bradenton, Fla, Charles Gelbert, star shortstop who has been out of the game for two years after being shot accidentally in the ankle while hunting, goes up for a high one. Gelbert says his foot is okay again. He will battle Leo Durocher for the regular job.

PICKING AN ALL-STAR TEAM

Following is the 33rd of a Canadian Press series of National Hockey League All-Star selections by sports writers in N.H.L. cities. A consensus will be prepared later.

By Kerr N. Petrie, New York Herald-Tribune.

First Team	Position	Alternate Team
Chabot (Chicago)	Goal	Worters (Americans)
Shore (Boston)	R. Defence	Clancy (Toronto)
Seibert (Rangers)	L. Defence	Goodfellow (Detroit)
Boucher (Rangers)	Centre	Morenz (Chicago)
C. Conacher (Toronto)	R. Wing	W. Cook (Rangers)
H. Jackson (Toronto)	L. Wing	Joliat (Canadiens)
L. Patrick (Rangers)	Coach	Irvin (Toronto)

Allan Cup Playdowns

(By the Canadian Press)

A hockey threat from the far-West left its first mark on the eastern side of the Rockies today and threatened to make many more. The danger signal is up on the Allan Cup highway to watch the Kimberley Dynamiters.

The British Columbia champions inaugurated interdivisional warfare in the 1935 Canadian Senior playdowns last night by Calgary by defeating Edmonton Superiors, Alberta Champions, 3-1. By winning the Dynamiters popped up among the favorites for the western challenging role.

Ralph Redding, former Regina Junior Star, scored two of Kimberley's goals in a game played on water-covered ice. Hub Mackie got the other and Buster Brown, Canadian Olympic sprinter in 1932, bagged the only Edmonton tally. The teams will finish the total-goal series at Edmonton Thursday night.

The Montreal Senior League finals went into a fifth stanza, when Ottawa Senators defeated Montreal Royals 6-4 last night in the fourth game. It was Ottawa's first win in the best-of-five series. Royals can finish it all with a victory Thursday night.

Juniors Make Headway

The Maritime playdowns moved a step nearer the final when Kentville Wildcats, Senior "B" champions of Nova Scotia, played at 3-3 tie with Edmunston Eskimos, Intermediate Champions of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. The winner of this series, which concludes Thursday night, will play Halifax Wolverines for the right to represent the Maritimes in the Allan Cup race.

Juniors made headway last night, too. Wininpeg Monarchs won the Manitoba title and Oshawa Majors qualified to play Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts for the Ontario Hockey Association Championship.

Monarchs administered a 12-2 trouncing to the huskies from the Pas and the Northern team decided when it was over that they wouldn't bother the Monarchs about the balance of what was to have been a three-game series. The Monarchs will start their Memorial Cup trek Saturday night against Port Arthur.

Oshawa scored a 3-1 win over Toronto Young Rangers in the third game of their grim series. They were tied at 7-7 after two games.

Ki-Y League Success Report Given to Kiwanis Club Members

250 Teen Age Boys Take Part in Four Series

Completing another successful season of Canada's National winter pastime, Secretary J. E. Shortt of the local Ki-Y League tendered his annual report to the local Kiwanis club at their weekly meeting held yesterday. The report proved most satisfactory and was warmly received by the members of the Kiwanis Club, who work in conjunction with the Y.M.C.A. to provide organized hockey for local teen age boys.

Incorporated in the report were figures showing that over 250 boys had signed registration cards in the four series sponsored; namely — bantam, midget, juvenile and junior. Twenty-two teams in all series competed embracing four junior teams, four bantam clubs, nine midget clubs and five juvenile teams in all. Some 66 matches were played during the season, 12 in the bantam, 36 in the midget, 10 in the juvenile and six in the junior series. Nearly 1,200 players participated in the various games with 240 boys playing in the bantam series. 720 in the midget, 200 in the juvenile and 48 in the junior. All of the bantam, midget and juvenile games were played at the old curling rink on George Street put into playing condition by the local city council. The juniors played their games at the Belleville Arena however.

The Ki-Y League executive provide such necessary playing equipment during the season as goal pads, pucks, goal sticks, ice, lighting, referees timekeepers and supervision. The various champions in the different series were—bantam, "Y" "A" Preps; midget O.S.D.; juvenile, Rough Riders; while the winners of the junior series is still undecided, a play-off to subsequently follow.

Assisting Secretary Joe Shortt in the operation of the league were members of the Kiwanis Club who are — Merle Wickett, Les Nicholl, George A. Lee, Bill Cook, Frank Follwell and Jos. Imlah. During his report Secretary Shortt wished to thank all those who had refereed gratis in the league and also the Kiwanis club, the Y.M.C.A. and all those responsible in making the 1935 edition of the Ki-Y League one of the most successful ever enjoyed by that organization.

BASKETBALL

In the last scheduled home game of the Junior Interscholastic basketball series, Albert College defeated the fast and close checking Trenton youngsters by the score of 21-20, Friday night. The game began with a furious attack by Albert but the Trenton defence turned all threats aside until a personal foul on Mann allowed McDonald to open the scoring for the college. Trenton managed to elude the defence but found the basket hard to locate. A perfect McDonald to Musk to Hodder pass-attack put Hodder in position beneath the hoop where a nice jump shot put the Albert boys three points in the lead. Trenton opened up and two quick baskets by Mann and White changed the lead but this was short lived for McDonald dribbled the length of the floor dodging the whole Trenton team to make the nicest basket seen this season. Three fouls by Albert gave Trenton the same number of points by a persistent attack gave McDonald an opening and half time left the score 7-6 for the Belleville crowd.

In the first ten minutes of the second half Albert College ran in six baskets while Trenton were getting two. Trenton then found their scoring eye and began to cut down the lead, while the forwards played a fast passing game the defence stopped everything that Albert had to offer. With two minutes to go Trenton, three points behind were awarded two shots, White making both of them. Both sides threw everything they had into the game but the defensive work of Wallace and Mutton kept the ball well out and the whistle blew with Trenton one point down.

The teams:

Albert College: Hodder 4, Musk 6, McDonald 9, Mutton, Wallace, Fillmore 1, Bone, Lewis.

Trenton H. S.: Hunter 6, Douch, Mann 2, Gainloth 1, White 9, Crews, Probert 1, Cots, Webb, Campbell.

Referees: A. W. Bishop and R. S. Summers.

Herman Conway

London, March 12—Guarding the goal for West Ham United in the second division of the English Football League, is Herman Conway who was once the net custodian with Burnley. Conway is playing a grand game for West Ham who can thank the goalie for holding them up on more than one occasion. He is a dog fancier aside from bootball, but his interest in the canines does not affect his football work. Conway is on the job all the time and there are few more conscientious players among league goalies. He once voluntarily gave up the game, feeling that he was not filling his role in the manner he desired, but the advice of those who appreciated his ability was brought to bear on the retiring Conway and he was persuaded to return to his first love. The move was one in the right direction, for subsequent events have revealed him as one of the smartest and best goalies in the second division. He is a smiling good-natured chap with plenty in reserve to carry him over the tough spots in a net guardian's life.

INSURANCE BILL PASSED IN HOUSE THREE OPPOSING

Two Liberals And One C.C.F. Say "Nay" in Recording Vote

AMENDMENT CLOSE

Liberals Believe Opinion of Supreme Court Should Be Obtained

Ottawa, March 13—(CP)—Relying on the Courts to prevent any infringment of Provincial rights the Liberal opposition in The House of Commons will supprt all reform measures of the Bennett government, such as the eight-hour day Bill, the Weekly Day of Rest Bill and the Minimum Wage Bill.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, made this declaration in the House yesterday as the Unemployment Insurance Bill received its third and final reading. He said the Liberal party still entertained some grave doubts about the constitutional validity of all these measures but did not propose to allow itself to be manoeuvred by the government into the false position of opposing measures the principles of which it had always approved.

Neither, he declared, did his party wish to raise an election issue of Provincial Rights although it feared the legislation invaded that sphere. If such as issue were raised the responsibility would rest wholly with the government which had departed from the established rules of constitutional propriety in embarking on the legislation without securing the opinion of the Courts or consulting the provinces.

The Liberal leader's statement was his first general reply to the government's reform legislation and from a political viewpoint, was considered one of the high-lights of the session. Mr. King said the Liberals believed the Insurance, Eight-hour day and the Minimum Wage Bills could not be passed by Parliament without amendments to the British North America Act or agreements with the provinces.

Liberals Approve Principle

"We still believe," continued the statement, "that in a mater of such importance, the best method of relieving uncertainty (over constitutional issues), of avoiding unnecessary disturbance of business, and of determining jurisdiction in accordance with our national traditions, by taking an advisory opinion from the Supreme Court or by a Constitutional Amendment (to the B. N. A. Act).

"The Liberal party," the leader declared, "approves the principle of the Social Legislation thus far introduced and desires to see it in operation."

The Liberal leader's statement concluded with a prediction his party's viewpoint would prevail in the long run. "We do not propose to permit the adoption by the government of a method which, for the reasons mentioned, we believe will prove to be ineffective. To place us in a false position as to our aim and desire to achieve.."

"That method we shall yet pursue and that aim we shall yet attain when the inadequacy of the method now being adopted with respect to Social Legislation has been made apparent and is proven to be insufficient to serve the government's professed end with respect to its measures of Social Legislation and what we believe to be the government's real purpose in introducing the measures in their present form at the present time."

Three Oppose Measure

The Unemployment Insurance Bill was second of the reform measures to pass the House of Commons. Amendments to the Farm Loan Act which involve the agricultural end of the reform policy were approved some time ago.

J. S. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg North Centre) wanted a change which would make it impossible for the employee to lose his benefits by reason of default of the employer in making contributions. He also wanted the whole responsibility for legal action against defaulting employers placed on the insurance commission, and not on the employee.

His amendment was rejected and the House adhered to the view of Sir George Perley, Acting Prime Minister, that ample safeguards were provided. Sir George had an amendment made to provide the Commission might sue a defaulting employer on behalf of employees.

On final vote on third reading only three members voted against the bill, all for different reasons. The vote was 123 to three and the negative votes were cast by E. J. Garland (Bow River) Henri Bourassa (Ind. Laballe) and J. F. Pouliot (Lib. Temiscouata.) At one time or another all have stated their reasons and they are: Mr. Garland — The bill does not go far enough and should be non-contributory; Mr. Bourassa — It is State paternalism and will encourage laziness, dishonesty and extravegance; Mr. Pouliot — It is political propoganda at the expense of the people.

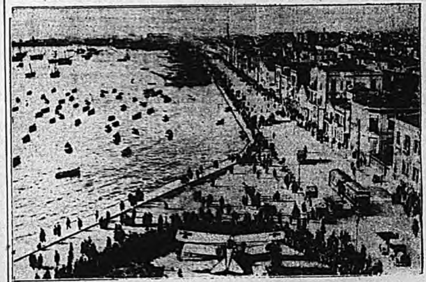
REBEL TROOPS BATTLE GREEK GOVERNMENT FOR SALONICA



Rebel forces have pushed through waist-high snow drifts in Macedonia to attack this city, the possession of which Greek military strategists hold, gives mastery over Greece. The advance of Salonica, from which they were driven earlier in the week, was the first major rebel offensive of the civil war that broke out last Friday. Unconfirmed reports from across the Bulgarian frontier, stated the rebels had bombarded from the sea and air, and were moving 100,000 men to the attack. DIVISION FORCED BY GEO. S. HENRY FOR ADJOURNMENT

Government Wins by 47-14 And Debate Has to Proceed

Toronto, March 13—(CP)—Wearied from more than six hours debate on the throne speech, Ontario legislators turned today to discussion of public and private bills with the possibility Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck's bill to centralize Ontario police under a special director in time of emergency might come up again for second reading.

The measure was talked out by Conservatives twice last week and opposition members have signified their intention of continuing the attack. They object to the centralization principle on the grounds it interferes with municipal autonomy.

Debate on the throne speech went into overtime last night following refusal of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn to adjourn the debate on motion of A. H. Acres (Cons., Carleton). At 10.40 o'clock Mr. Acres asked for adjournment and was refused He repeated the request 10 minutes later. Mr. Hepburn said, Conservatives had complained the government was not moving fast enough so he was prepared to sit all night.

Opposition leader George S. Henry moved adjournment of the House but the motion was defeated by 47-14. Mr. Acres spoke for about 35 minutes, sat down, and Dr. A. D. Roberts (Lib., Sault Ste. Marie) moved adjournment of the debate after which the Premier moved the House adjourn.

Five in Debate

Five speakers took part in the debate yesterday. Arthur Ellis (Cons., Ottawa South) continued the address he started last Thursday and dealt at length with the Hydro question. He declared supplementary agreements were included not only in the Gatineau power agreement but also in other Quebec power purchase agreements but Mr. Roebuck had not told the legislature this in his lengthy Hydro address two weeks ago.

Mr. Ellis reiterated the opposition's demand for a committee to inquire into the purchases and said the Conservatives have enough faith in Hydro to make the request in order the air might be cleared and the people of the province know the truth.

Following Mr. Ellis, William Newman (Lib., Victoria-Haliburton) praised the Liberals for taking the liquor question out of politics and urged a road building plan to take care of unemployment and open up the north.

Assails Government

"I have sat here for three weeks and heard nothing but booze and hydro," said Sam Lawrence, Hamilton East, lone member of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation in the legislature, as he assailed the government for its failure to deal with the unemployment problem.

He declared the government must take steps to remedy the situation or "go down to oblivion like your predecessors."

As remedies for the situation he suggested reduction of the hours of labor in industry and services, reduction of interest rates and a slum clearance scheme.

Mr. Lawrence read the sub-amendment he had intended to make to the opposition amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. A Liberal amendment by J. H. Clark (Windsor-Sandwich) last week had prevented this.

The C.C.F. sub-amendment was "this House regrets the absence of any mention in the Speech from the Throne tending towards alleviation of the terrible unemployment conditions throughout the province, being a menace to the welfare of many of our finest citizens."

Denials Produced

Ian Strachan (Lib. Toronto-St. George) followed Mr. Lawrence and produced a statement from two Hydro engineers, E. T. Brandon and H. C. Don Carlos that they did not approve power purchases they were reported to have in minutes of a special Hydro Commission meeting of May 20, 1929.

Col. W. H. Price (Cons., Toronto-Parkdale) said last week these two engineers and two others, T. H. Hogg and R. T. Jeffery, had approved the purchases. Later Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, read a denial by Hogg and Jeffery they had approved the purchases.

Mr. Acres charged although the session was in its fourth week there had been nothing but a re-hashing of campaign speeches. He suggested institution of zone areas in the province to revive the dairy industry and a flat rate on Hydro power to benefit farmers and simplify Hydro accounts. Also, he suggested, the province should assume the task of disposing of all municipal debentures and thus bring about lower interest rates.

"Take your medicine", Provincial Secretary H. C. Nixon urged the Carleton member, when the Premier would not permit adjournment of the debate.

"I am not going to take insinuations from a man who is U.F.O. yesterday, Progressive today and a Liberal tomorrow if he thinks there is a chance of getting into the cabinet," Mr. Acres replied.

Experimental Shipment Of Cheese from Belleville

Mr. W. B. Somerset, Commissioner of Marketing for Ontario, has requested me to give publicity to the returns of an experimental shipment of cheese sent from Belleville, during the early part of October, 1932. The final payment for this car of cheese was made in the spring of 1934 and the data concerning expenses of this shipment has just been received, and in order to avoid errors we are publishing the letter as received.

February, 20, 1935

F. R. Mallory, Esq.
Stirling, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Re: Belleville Experimental Cheese Shipment

In some instances it is almost impossible to give you exactly the data you wish because, as previously explained, the Belleville shipment was handled simultaneously with the second Woodstock experimental shipment by the overseas broker and in making advances the broker did not distinguish between the two parcels.

The information we have directly concerning the Belleville shipment however I am glad to send to you.

The various charges made for handling the experimental carlot are in keeping with regular British brokerage practices of firms of the highest repute and were as follows:

Landing charges — 14/ —per ton (26 boxes)
Port rates —1/9 per ton (26 boxes)
Turning cheese (once per month) — 2/6 per ton
Storage—summer — 2/3 per ton per week
Storage—Winter—1/ .. per ton per week
Interest on advances—1% above current bank rate with a minimum charge of 5%
Selling Commission—2%

The gross receipts from the carlot of 517 boxes from Belleville were £1,645/7-11 subject to an adjustment explained later.

Total expenses against the shipment were £340—10—4 leaving a net return of £1,304—18—7 subject to the adjustment mentioned above.

The expenses itemized are as follows:

To—Less allowances made to customers for waxing, re-waxing	4/17/6
" Discount—2d to the pound	13/1315
" Freight —	114/15/1
" London Clause charge	2/ 3/1
" Port rates	1- 7/7
" Landing charges	13/18/0
" Rent	92/10/10
" Weighing net for A loss and taking marked weights	2/ 0/10
" Turning	16/14/ 2
" Setting aside	2/19/ 7
" Cartage	3/ 9/11
" Passing Customs entry	3/6
" Fire Insurance	2/14/ 4
" Commission @ 2%	32/16/ 3
TOTAL	£304/5/1
Further adjustment.
Dr. To interest on advance £1,110 Dec. 7, 1932—Dec. 11, 33 @ 5%	49/14/3.
Dr. to interest on advance £1,060 Dec. 11, 1932—Dec. 24, 33 @ 5%	7/17/5
TOTAL	£57/11/8
Cr. By interest on net proceeds £1,341/3/10 from July 31, 33 to November 24, 33 @ 5%	£21/ 6/5
Diference	36/ 5/3
TOTAL EXPENSES	£340/10/4

In addition to the above you will remember that after later negotiations a further sum of £100 was received from the broker on account of excess storing charges against both the Belleville and Woodstock shipments. The Belleville share of this rebate was $380.88 which was sent you late last spring and was the third and final payment on the experimental shipment from your district.

The final result was a net return of 9¾c per pound f.o.b. Belleville before reducting for waxing, wiring, trucking and insurance.

In view of the wildly chaotic exchange conditions prevailing at the time of this experiment I believe it was your opinion that the final result was satisfactory.

Yours very truly.
G. F. Perkin,
Secretary.

The charges for waxing, wiring trucking and insurance were paid at the time shipment was sent by F. R. Mallory acting Secretary and were as follows:

Jas. Cook and Son, Waxing and Wiring	128.50
F. L. LaPalm, Trucking	25.86
Insurance	9.63
Total	163.98

The foregoing are complete figures of details concerning this experimental shipment in as far as they have been received by me.

F. R. Mallory.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Mr. Rider studied the model again. Neither Faith nor Paul moved. Presently he made a clicking sound and walked up to Faith. His eyes were singularly piercing. "I am inclined to agree with you. Here's my proposition," he went on bluntly, ignoring Paul. "Go back to your husband. You may not know it"—there was a faint twinkle behind his glasses—"but anything to do with aviation interests Hunter. If you can get him to take up this motor of Mr. Tuckerman's — I might go into it with him. Mind you, I'm making no promises—" There was a shrewd challenge in the old man's look.

"Oh, I'll have to think—" Faith cried, the color rushing to her cheeks.

"She'll do nothing of the kind," Paul burst out. "If that's your proposition, Mr. Rider, I refuse it."

RETURN TO PARIS

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

Faith was sailing back to Paris. She hardly knew herself how it had happened, but she supposed she still loved Hunter enough to be persuaded that she should go back. Mr. Rider had done the persuading.

"You're the right gal for Hunter", he had vigorously assured her. "You gave him a jolt when you left him. Are you going to let that Stevens she-tigress get him on the rebound? Of course you're not." Mr. Rider had a paternal trick of patting her hand. "Go sell him your young friend's airplane motor to play with. It's healthier than the toys he's got now."

It was hard to explain to Paul; hard to make him understand that she wasn't sacrificing anything for him. 'Please trust us, Paul,' she said. "I didn't tell you about my divorce because I didn't want to worry you, but Mr. Rider seems to feel I should try again. And perhaps he's right. He's a very shrewd business men. He likes you and your ideas, and I think it's a compliment to you that he should suggest interesting Hunter in the motor."

But at the last moment Faith was seized with disturbing thoughts. Perhaps it was Paul, with his vision, his gentleness of heart, whom she cared for. Not as she had loved Hunter, of course. You couldn't love that way more than once. But it was the feeling of need Paul had for her that moved her so deeply and tenderly.

The look in his eyes, the hunger in his voice lingered with her after he had said goodbye. "Children of the brain," he said, with a strange little smile. "They grow up and leave us to hunt their fortunes. But unborn dreams stay with us, Faith. You're that to me— an unborn dream, stirring and hurting divinely inside of me."

Then Paul stood waving on the dock beside Mr. Rider. Paul's hair was a flaming spot like a beacon-light among a blur of faces. Soon the fringe of people along the pier dwindled to a black smudge, and the giant outlines of the city were blended into mist.

So Faith turned to the coming shores and what lay before her. Christmas on the high seas meant nothing to her. She remained aloof from the other passengers, an exquisite woman of silvery gold tints, with the mystery of spring in her hair and eyes, and the hope of fulfilment in her lips.

The Count de Markoff met her at the Gare Saint Lazare when the boat train got in. She had wired him to engage rooms for her in one of the less conspicuous hotels. It was better, she decided, not to let Hunter know of her coming until she was actually in Paris.

Odd how things were. When you got away from a place and came back, you felt as if a thousand years and yet only a moment had passed. The big blond Russian, with his gusty humor and his flashing smile, took her return for granted. He was saturated with the gay intrigues of his crowd.

"So you are back with us, you little darling!" His pale blue eyes caressed her. "We shall dine together and I shall tell you all the gossip.' "

The golds and blues of winter days in New York had made Faith forget the drizzling damp of Paris in late December. But there were beauty and magic in the soft grey and glistening pavements, the old piles of stone, and the thick flowing river Seine. Faith was caught again by the charm of the old world.

But when de Markoff had left her at her hotel to dress for dinner, she felt let down. She wondered if she shouldnt have gone straight to the house. She wondered if she should have come at all. She hesitated, her hand hovering over the telephone. No, she would wait until tomorrow.

Dan Rider and Paul were shadowy figures against the stark outlines of sky-scrapers. How had she ever supposed she could be a crusader, preaching anything uncomfortable that would summon Hunter away from his play-grounds! If she were frank with herself, how easily she could be drawn back into the pleasure of beautiful clothes, sensuous music, handsome men!

As Faith looked at herself in the mirror, she realised how lovely she was. The soft cream satin of her gown fell from her young breasts with an effect of Greek draperies. She touched the tops of her ears with perfume, haunting as jasmine at night. Her lips were red for smiling.

She was smiling when de Markoff called for her. "You are an enchanted Princess tonight," he said, with a quick eye for the picture she made in her ermine wrap and satin. "But you need your pearls".

"You should have said I didn't need them," she lightly answered. There was a different, a more detached, note to his admiration this evening, as if her coming back were an anti-climax. He had exhausted his noble gestures, and his slavic heart had been made self-conscious. He couldn't be romantic, Faith reflected half humorously, with a woman who knew so much about him.

Well, he stood for the things she no longer wanted. And —tomorrow she would see Hunter.

But de Markoff had a shock for her. He waited until they were seated in the narrow dining room of the Boeuf sur le Toit, one of those informal and expensive restaurants where society and the arts met to wonder which was which.

Over their first glass of Moet and Chandon 1911, de Markoff, a shade too casually remarked: "Hunter does not expect to see you?"

"What makes you say that?" Faith glanced at him quickly. "And I haven't said I wanted to see him," she added.

Before answering, de Markoff speared an oyster, and nodded to a pretty woman who had just come in. "My dear Faith, don't you know?" For him, he sounded quite embarrassed. "Hunter went to Monte Carlo yesterday with the Dawtreys and Gertrude Stevens."

"Oh!" Faith murmured faintly, and lifted her glass of wine. The news was a blow, but she mustn't permit it to discourage her. Hunter hadn't known she was coming back. She might have been prepared, she thought bitterly, for some audacious move on Gertrude's part. Monte Carlo —— glamorous fascinating —the gambling rooms, yachts in the blue bay, suppers and dancing.

De Markoff fingered his small, blonde mustache, scowling down at his sweetbreads and mushrooms. "You should not have gone away, Faith," he said crossly. "That Stevens woman is a rotter. I will tell you something else—"

Faith's grey eyes were bright and calm as she returned his gossipy look. There was fierce satisfaction in her heart at the thought that she would soon clear up the situation for good. The final test.

De Markoff lowered his voice. "A few nights ago Therese and I were having supper in a little 'boite' in Montparnasse. Who do you think was one of the professional dancers there?"

"The bounder you introduced us to chez Florence." De Markoff smiled wryly. "Therese was in such a hurry to get away, she hardly gave me time to pay the bill. But this is the point, ma chere ——" He leaned his blonde head closer to Faith's. "Gertrude Stevens was there with some people I didn't know. And she seemed very much taken with the little beast."

Faith shuddered. A chill little wind ran along her back. Gertrude and Roger Welsh—evil both of them.

De Markoff's fleshy hand, with the crested seal ring, held up a big glass, light and round as a bubble slowly twirling the old cognac in it, and sniffing its aroma. "Therese wants very much to see you," he said, in his soft, guttural tones. "She is not well—poor Therese!"

Faith sat slender and white, fighting off the icy touch of fear Roger's name always laid upon her. He couldn't hurt her now. "I'm leaving Paris tomorrow," she said, "but I'll try to see Therese." She had forgiven Madame de Luze, realising what the Frenchwoman's confession to Hunter must have meant to her. She knew in her heart, however, that she didn't want to see Madame de Luze.

The evening had gone stale for Faith. Smoking one of de Markoff's thin Russian cigarettes with the gold-tipped tube, she listened absently to his recital of small scandals and social events, his slightly self-conscious reference to Mrs. Duane-Smith who had bought a chateau near Paris.

Faith's red lips curled cynically at that news. "You've made it up, then?" It was a mean dig, and she was sorry when she saw the color rise to the Russian's handsome face.

"That is not nice of you, little dove," he said in a low voice.

"No, it wasn't —very." Faith admitted contritely. "Sacha, dear, do you mind taking me back to the hotel? I don't feel like going anywhere."

In the lobby of the hotel, as de Markoff clicked his little military bow and bent over her finger tips, Faith felt he had gathered all the loose threads of an unfinished pattern and handed them over to her tonight. And that was the very last thing he could do for her.

The next day, without trying to see Therese de Luze, Faith left for Monte Carlo on the Train Bleu, one of the famous luxury trains. She planned deliberately to surprise Hunter to discover with the first flash of expression on his face what her coming meant to hm.

"I've grown up," Faith thought, giving a last deft twitch to her smart little travelling hat, as the train drew into the station. "A year ago Monte Carlo was a name in the movies to me. Now here I am in the most famous gambling resort in the world—here to gamble my happiness on the most fascinating man in the world."

The foreign spell wove about her as she drove through flower scented air in the brilliant whites and blues of Mediterranean sunshine, to the imposing entrance of the Hotel de Paris, across from the Casino. She felt very young and adventurous walking into the great columned hall, with its spread of carpets, plants, and stairs.

Before she reached the desk, she saw sauntering toward the door Beatrice Dawtrey and Gertrude Stevens, whose exotic beauty in this setting had a quality of sultriness about it.

While Faith hesitated, half screened by a plant, Hunter joined the two women. The light grey flannels he wore set off his stunning figure, accented the black of his hair, the brilliant blue of his eyes. How handsome he was! At the sight of him, Faith's heart beat so wildly that it seemed as if he must hear it. "He's my husband," she said to herself with a fierce sort of triumph. "I love him." And the image of Paul vanished.

Impulsively, she went toward them. "Hunter," she called in her lovely husky voice.

The little group seemed to go blank. Then, with a bound, Hunter reached her side. "Faith, my dear girl——" he cried. "How did you get here?"

"By train. D'you mind?" Faith laughed unsteadily. In that brief second something as wild and glad as her own heart had leaped into Hunter's face. Then it was gone, and she saw that he looked dreadfully tired.

Before she could speak again Beatrice Dawtrey hurried up, and behind her Gertrude. "Why, I was never so surprised. I thought—" Beatrice checked a blunder, hit it under a hug and a warm—"You simply must join our party. Hunter, go and arrange for a room to be included in our suite."

Gertrude stood with a mocking smile on her full red lips. "Hello, Faith," she said carelessly. "Have you come to wish us a Happy New Year?"

Faith looked straight into her dark, challenging eyes. "I've come to see the Old Year out," she said, and she did not need to add: "That means you, Gertrude."

FAITH TRAPPED

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

Faith and Hunter stood on the terrace of the casino in the moonlight. It had been hard to get him away from Gertrude Stevens. Gertrude's brilliant, discontented eyes had watched them stroll out of the gaming rooms, Faith swaying in daffodil silk against Hunter's tall, dark figure, but she had not dared to follow.

Faith tilted her sleek young head to smell the flower scents. "It's so soft out here," she said, "and in there"—she waved to the lighted windows—"it's hard. All those hard eyes, those jewels glittering around a small clicking ball. Funny isn't it?"

"Not so funny," Hunter said soberly.

Faith was sure he was thinking of Gertrude; of the tentacles she had thrown all about him until he seemed bound. She had watched them through dinner, noticing the stamp of fretful boredom about his eyes. "I have a chance," she thought with rising excitement.

Lightly now she touched the white carnation on the smooth, tapering fit of his evening coat. "You still wear them?"

"Yes, I still wear them," he said, without an answering smile. "Along with my other habits."

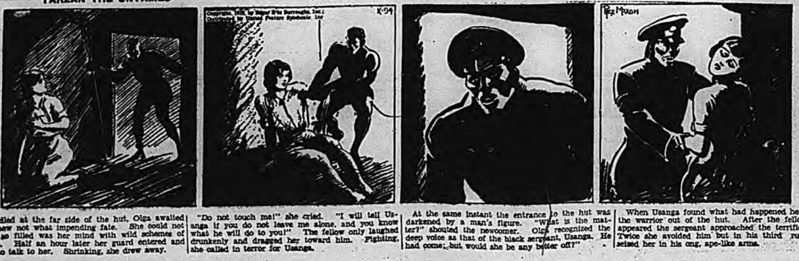
By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Huddled at the far side of the hut, Olga awaited she knew not what impending fate. She could not sleep, so filled was her mind with wild schemes of escape. Half an hour later her guard entered and tried to talk to her. Shrinking, she drew away.

"Do not touch me!" she cried. "I will tell Usanga if you do not leave me alone, and you know what he will do to you!" The fellow only laughed drunkenly and dragged her toward him. Fighting, she called in terror for Usanga.

At the same instant the entrance to the hut was darkened by a man's figure. "What is the matter?" shouted the newcomer. Olga recognized the deep voice as that of the black sergeant, Usanga. He had come; but would she be any better off?"

When Usanga found what had happened he kicked the warrior out of the hut. After the fellow disappeared the sergeant approached the terrified girl. Twice she avoided him but in his third rush he seized her in his ong, ape-like arms.

REINDEER FOR ESKIMOS END FIVE YEAR ARCTIC TREK

For five years and two months a great herd of reindeer has been trekking across Arctic wastes to the Mackenzie river delta in Canada's northwest territories. The great trek will end about the middle of March. In 1929 the Canadian government purchased from the herds in Kotzebue Sound area in western Alaska, a herd of 3,000 picked deer. For four years they wandered, under guidance across the Arctic circle until they arrived within 70 miles of their destination. But blizzards and extreme cold held them up for another year and only now is the herd, vastly different to the original, arriving at the Mackenzie delta to feed and clothe the Eskimos of that district. Layout shows guides leading great herd and a close-up picture of some of animals taken last summer.

LOCAL HEBREWS CELEBRATE FEAST

Festival of Lots Will Draw District Jews to City

Commencing Sunday evening at sunset the local Hebrews will celebrate Purim the Feast of Lots which recalls the triumph of their people over injustice and tyranny, Rabbi B. Gertsel stated today.

All Hebrews from the surrounding vicinity, Campbellford, Trenton, Tweed, etc., will congregate at the local synagogue and will begin the celebration with a feast at six o'clock Sunday night. On Monday the Book of Esther is read and on Tuesday all needy families known to the Jews will be given baskets containing food and clothing.

The festival is based on the Book of Esther, the story relates that Ahasuerus the King of Persia and Media had deposed his queen, Vashti and chosen Esther, a beautiful Jewish orphan for his new queen. About the same time Ahasuerus likewise had raised his general Haman to a position of Prime Minister. Haman had had a dispute with Mordecai a cousin of Queen Esther and he made his private quarrel a basis of hatred against the entire Jewish people.

One day, when Haman saw that the king was pleased with his advice, he brought charges against the Jewish people living in Persia falsely accusing them of being a turbulent, rebellious people, inclined to disloyalty, but without mentioning the name of the people. The King was disturbed. Haman promised to bring 10,000 silver talents into the royal coffers for permission to exterminate this group. And without knowing the name of the people King Ahasuerus granted to Haman power to confiscate their property and to exterminate the Jews within his dominions.

At Mordecai's suggestion and at great personal risk, Esther came unbidden into the King's presence and invited him to dine with her on two successive evenings. The King agreed. Homan was overjoyed.

At the second feast Esther told the King of Haman's trickery and said it was her own people that Haman sought to destroy. The King became furious, and ordered Haman to be hanged on the gibbet that in anticipation, he had prepared for Mordecai. The decree of Ahasuerus permitting the extermination of the Jews could not, according to the laws of the Medes and Persians, be recalled. But the King issued a proclamation giving the Jews of Persia permission to organise for self-defense, and they fought and routed their attackers.

Late Husband of Beatrice Lillie is Named in Action

Woman Testifies She Lived For Several Years With Baronet

SUES FOR FUR COAT

London, March 13.—(AP)— Mrs. Doris Draper, tall and blonde, testified tearfully she lived with the late Sir Robert Peel, Bart., husband of the actress Beatrice Lillie, for five years before he died last April. Miss Lillie is a native of Toronto.

Taking the witness stand in an action to recover two ermine coats from the Bond Street dressmaking firm of Ella Wells, Ltd., Mrs. Draper said she lived with Sir Robert at Birmingham and at Westfield and Penhurst, Sussex.

"By what style were you known to the people visiting the house and the people in the village?" her attorney asked.

"As Lady Peel", she replied.

Mrs. Draper, who broke down and wept during the testimony, asked either return of the coats, which she valued at £300 (about $1,450) or damages, contending the coats were only turned over to the dressmaking form for safekeeping.

The defendant asserted the coats were deposited as security for £259 owing to it at the time Sir Robert died.

Mrs. Draper's attorney brought out she had purchased clothing valued at £2,000 (about $9,700) from the Wells' firm during the five years she said she lived with Sir Robert.

Asserting Peel had an income ranging from £3,000 to £4,000 annually, Mrs. Draper said:

"He always wanted me to be smartly dressed."

Near the end of the day's uncompleted hearing, Mrs. Draper burst into tears while the defendant's attorney was questioning her as to whether Sir Robert was divorced or she herself had divorce proceedings pending.

Peel, she said, "was being divorced" but she did not answer concerning herself when the lawyer did not persist with the question.

Mrs. Draper's counsel explained she was married in 1919, but soon separated from her husband.

Action Successful

London, March 14—(AP)— Mrs. Doris Draper, who testified in court she lived with Sir Robert Peel, husband of Beatrice Lillie, the actress for five years before his death, succeeded today in her effort to recover two ermine coats from a Bond Street dressmaking establishment.

The parties to the action which Mrs. Draper brought against the firm of Ella Wells, Ltd., announced they had reached an agreement for return of the garments. Judgment was entered in favor of the tall, blonde Englishwoman.

The company contended the coats were held as security on an account for £259 owed it at the time of Sir Robert's death.

Wedded 72 Years Ago

Prince Edward County couple, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Addison Mabee, probably the oldest married couple in Ontario will celebrate their seventy-second wedding anniversary on Friday, March 15th.

Prince Edward Couple Will Celebrate 72nd Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Mabee, of Bloomfield Were Married March 15, 1863

ARE STILL ACTIVE

Memories of Civil War days, when whole families trekked across the United States border to Canada, where more peaceful conditions reigned; memories of the first train to pass through this Belleville district on the old Grand Trunk Railway lines between Toronto and Montreal; when log cabins, instead of the newer frame houses dotted this section; and when the last word in ladies' attire were the cumbersome hoopskirts and pancake bonnets, all came flooding back — today in a warm glow of recollection to Prince Edward County's oldest couple, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Addison Mabee of Bloomfield, aged 92 and 90 respectively, who today celebrate the 72nd anniversary of their marriage.

Just seventy-two years ago tomorrow two of the oldest pioneer families of this section were united through the marriage of Miss Jane Huyck of South Marysburg Township, to Mr. Peter Addison Mabee of Cherry Valley. The ceremony, still distinct in recollection, was performed by the Rev. Mr. Miller, a Wesleyan circuit-rider of the lower end of the township who rode over the rutted roads on his horse to the home of the bride, where the ceremony was performed.

Many Happy Memories

Seated in a rocking chair by the window in their little frame home on the outskirts of Bloomfield yesterday afternoon as a pair of knitting needles clicked in her busy fingers, Mrs. Mabee reminisced with twinkling gaiety of that happy event so many years past. But her memory, unusually keen and retentive, recalled events and affairs through this section many years before that. Mr. Mabee, scarcely less young in appearance and actions nodded corroboration in happy fashion as the outstanding events were recalled.

A Daily Ontario Intelligencer reporter and a cameraman had called. They were bade cordial welcome to the little home. "Although," remarked Mrs. Mabee, "I don't see why people make such a fuss over a simple little thing like being married as long as we have been. It all seems so natural for us." Their handclasp was firm and warm as the formalities of introduction were made. "Sit down", bade Mr. Mabee,

'DE LAWD' ACTOR 'GREEN PASTURES' DIES IN NEW YORK

Richard B. Harrison Dressing For Matinee Suffers Stroke

1,652 PERFORMANCES

Never Missed a Show in Five Years Engagement

New York, March 14. — (AP) — Richard B. Harrison, who played "De Lawd" in "The Green Pastures", died today in the Fifth Avenue Hospital. He succumbed to a stroke suffered two weeks ago as he was preparing for a matinee performance of the show. He was seventy years old and was born in London, Ontario.

Harrison had appeared in 1,652 performances of the play when stricken, never missing one in its five years' engagement in New York and the road. Just a few days before his collapse the play had returned to New York to re-open on the fifth anniversary of its premiere performance, which took place Feb. 26, 1930.

Weary after 40,000 miles of travelling to 203 cities, and troubled by the illness of his wife and daughter in Chicago, Harrison had stipulated that the New York engagement be limited to three weeks.

Harrison, an itinerant Shakespearian reader and head of a negro dramatic school in the south, was placed in the role after a chance encounter with Marc Connelly, the author, in Harlem. He hesitated to accept the part at first, fearing it would be sacreligious to impersonate the Lord, but was induced to enter the role by religious friends.

During the five-year engagement Harrison was repeatedly honored for his tender and understanding performance by educational and religious groups.

Harrison is survived by his widow, a daughter, Marian, and son, Paul Dunbar Harrison, orchestra leader. His home was in Chicago.

Parents Runaway Slaves.

London, Ont., Mar. 14 (CP) — Richard B. Harrison, "de Lawd" of the celebrated play "Green Pastures", who died today in New York, was born in London, Ont. His parents arrived in London as runaway slaves from the United States. Known here as "Little Dic" Harrison in his youth, the famous Negro actor played baseball on "the island" in the Thames river and sold copies of the London Advertiser on the streets of the city which then had a population of about 15,000.

When the Harrisons left London forty years ago a gang of toughs burned down their house, a ramshackle old place on the corner of Wellington and Hill streets, the birth place of the famous actor. The house was situated right on the banks of the river.

There were eight in the family, "ole Mammy" Harrison, three boys and three girls, and the father.

"Ole Mammy Harrison" had been a slave in Missouri on the property of the distinguished Choteau family. The father had also been a slave of the Bullock family in Kentucky. Both escaped to Canada via "the underground railroad".

As a boy Dick Harrison used to catch the family fuel supply as it passed down the river. The device was simple. A horse shoe was tied to the end of a rope and Dick would toss the horseshoe far out into the river where it would snag over a floating log.

As an older boy he attended the old Waterloo street school. He often stated that his first great thrill was when he recited Shakespeare at a school function.

After a family migration to Windsor, Ont., Richard finally found himself seeking his fortune in Detroit, across the river, at the age of seventeen.

Humble jobs in hotels — the Russell House and Brunswick House — and in the Detroit Club brought young Harrison a scant living while he pursued his already developed art of recitation and dramatics.

In 1891 he made his first professional appearance as a dramatic reader. From then on he became a fixture on Chautauqua and Lyceum circuits in Canada, the south and even Mexico. His wide repertoire included most of the plays of Shakespeare and many other dramatic readings.

He was a close friend of the Negro poet, Paul Laurence Dunbar, interpreting many of his works, sharing a home with him in Chicago. Harrison's son, a musician, was named for the poet.

In his early baseball days he played second base and won a name for himself among the boys of London for his prowess on the diamond.

When "The Green Pastures" played the Grand Theatre, London, in October last year, the freedom of the city was bestowed on Richard Harrison. On receiving the freedom of the city, he said: "I have received honors in many centres, university decrees, gold keys, watches, messages from government and great political leaders, and press notices but there is no honor like this one, because it is from the city of London — from home."

His sole object in presenting the motion Mr. Barre said was to obtain publication of the information requested so that "the public would know what financial interests are backing newspapers and therefore be acquainted with the motives behind certain of their columns."

Automobelle, Road Sweetie Suggested for Speed Traps

London, March 14 (CP Cable) — A storm of criticism mixed with ridicule was let loose in morning newspapers today on the plan of Lord Trenchard, Commissioner of Metropolitan police, to establish speed traps for motorists.

The scheme called for cruising plainclothes policemen and policewomen, driving "plainclothes" cars, who would watch for unwary speeding motorists in suburban areas.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express suggested the policewomen employed thus should be called "Mobile Marys, Prowling Pollies, Automobelles, Watchful Winnies, Brake-or-You'll-be-Broke Girls, Speed Sweetles and Lynx-eyed Lizzies."

Other newspapers said the idea of plainclothes police as speed spies was un-English.

$12,000,000 COST TO CORRECT SLUM AREA IN TORONTO

Two Thousand Houses Called by E. J. Urwick as Not Habitable

BOARD IS FAVORED

Only Nominal Compensation to Owners of Houses Allowable

Ottawa, March 14 (CP)— E. J. Urwick director of social science at the University of Toronto, appeared today before the House of Commons Committee on housing to discuss the report on Toronto slum conditions made by a committee headed by Lieutenant Governor Herbert A. Bruce of Ontario.

He said the committee had made a survey of the housing situation in his city and had concluded at least 2,100 houses existed which were below the minimum standard of habitability.

The committee concluded the remedy could not be provided by private enterprise.

The committee found, he said, the remedy would involve expenditure of $12,000,000, part of which would have to be provided by governments.

Says Remedy Necessary

He said the committee advocated creation of a committee of independent members not in official positions which would survey the situation and recommend procedure to an executive housing board which would give it effect. He said it was urgent that steps to remedy the situation be taken as quickly as possible. Most of the houses should not be left standing another winter.

He said he had been informed similar conditions existed in Hamilton, Ont., but on a less severe scale.

The witness said destruction of condemned buildings in his view called for not more than nominal compensation to owners. He recalled under the British system no compensation was given.

"I would like to see a general Federal Commission under the Dominion government which would approve municipal housing schemes" said Prof. Urwick.

The plan should begin in the municipality but the pressure or encouragement should come from either Provincial or Dominion government. Such a commission should be unpaid and voluntary, he said.

LEISURE TIME SCHOOL CLOSES

Project Undertaken by John Street Guild is Success

Sponsored by the Young Women's Guild of John Street United Church, the School for Leisure Time, in progress since late in November, was brought to a conclusion last evening after a remarkably successful season. This project undertaken in the nature of an experiment by the members met with instant response and the various classes under skilled volunteer teachers have accomplished worthwhile results.

The classes included Current History which had almost perfect attendance, Show Card Writing, Blue Print Reading, Mathematics, Child-Training and Sewing. All of these courses with the exception of the Child Training were given in the Hall and Sunday School rooms of the Church. The Child Training classes were held at the homes of the students. A similar class is being undertaken by the King George Home and School Club.

The success of the Sewing Class was particularly noteworthy. Hundreds of garments were made or made-over under the careful instruction of Guild members and knitting lessons were given. Those attending the classes ranged in ages from eleven-year-olds to mothers of families and all were enthusiastic over the progress they had made during the season. There was a regular attendance of between thirty and fifty at each weekly class and its members are looking forward to the resuming of work next year. Through the kindness of the Red Cross Society many yards of flannelette were made up into warm garments, this work being a special feature of the class.

The Young Women's Guild is also sponsoring the Red Cross Nutrition Class which meets each Tuesday in the church.

Last evening the closing of the school was marked for those attending the class, coffee, sandwiches and cakes being served by Guild members. A group of members of the Church who were attending a Lenten prayer service last evening attended the closing, showing their interest and appreciation of the work undertaken by the Guild.

FOUR THOUSAND ROSES TO MARK FIRST BIRTHDAY

Many Ladies Attend at Bowra Store Anniversary

Brilliant sunshine, a bright, brisk March day, just cold enough to invigorate the air with a vip and zest and encourage brisk walking brought out a large crowd of lady citizens of Belleville Thursday morning in response to the invitation to attend the First Anniversary Commemoration of Bowra Electric and Hardware, a firm which in the twelve months it has been doing business in Belleville has by energetic and progressive methods established itself as a permanent fixture in the business life of the community.

A feature of the birthday commemoration was the presentation of a beautiful rose to every lady present. Two thousand roses had been ordered but by noon this amount did not appear to be any too many for Thursday alone, so it was necessary to order a second two thousand, an indication of the enthusiasm and the interest taken in the event.

Tea Served

Another pleasing feature for the feminine guests was the serving of tea, participated in by most of the guests. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Chas. Bowra, Mrs. S. Flintoff and Mrs. Ray Kilbank

The china department with its many beautiful examples of the best and most beautiful in this line was, of course, crowded all day by ladies who expressed their surprise and pleasure at the splendid display.

The hardware department with its unique manner of displaying goods for the convenience of the customer, came in for close inspection and admiration.

In the electric department the rapid progress of science and invention in the past few years is demonstrated in electric refrigerators, electric washers, ranges and radios, and in each of these departments a factory representative is present to answer all queries and give suggestions for better results in household economies.

A large display of stoves burning coal and wood is also made, all of the very latest designs.

Modernizing The Home

There is something of interest in every department for the head of the home, the birthday commemoration being virtually a demonstration of everything that is new in the realm of science which contributes to the convenience, comfort and economy of the home.

When the ladies have thoroughly inspected the Bowra store, secured their rose and been refreshed with tea and cake the elevator is taken to the next floor where the latest in house furnishings in rugs, curtains, etc., is shown by John W. Cook and staff. Mr. Cook has been in business in Belleville for many years and it well and widely known. Just a year ago he decided to specialize in house furnishings and has one of the finest displays in this line in the Dominion—and this being the first anniversary of the firm under the present policy the John W. Cook staff joins in the general birthday anniversary which begins on the ground floor with the Bowra Electric and Hardware.

"There's A Rose For You"

The slogan of the commemoration, referring to lady guests. "There's a Rose For You," will be carried out to the letter if there are roses enough in Ontario to supply the demand—but it is always wise to come early and avoid the rush.

The commemoration will continue all day Friday.

2 MASKED GUNMEN ROB INVALID MAN

Point Traverse Resident Forced to Give Two Dollars

Demanding his money or his life, two mased gunmen who forced their way into the home of Ed. Farrington, aged semi-invalid recluse of Point Traverse, Prince Edward County yesterday, forced the aged man to hand over two dollars, all the cash he had on his person. In their hurry to get away the masked and armed men overlooked more money in a cupboard drawer. The hold-up was one of the first ever staged in Point Traverse district.

POLICE COURT

John Geogaret, Lake St. Peter, who was convicted under the Excise Act on January 9th last in County Police Court and sentenced to serve three months in the common jail by Magistrate R. Casement at that time arrived in Belleville today and appeared at the R.C.M.P. office to start his term of sentence. At the time of his trial the accused man was given two months in which to straighten up his personal affairs before commencing his jail term.

Geogaret was arrested by the R. C. M. P. early last January and charged with having illicit liquor in his possession. Geogaret pleaded guilty to the charge, but at that time requested, that he be allowed ample time to arrange family matters, the request was granted.

Activities were rather serene in and about local police circles during the past 24 hours, no arrests being necessary in the city. No motor accidents of paramount importance were reported by Highway Traffic Officers or local police.

A coincidence was noted at the police station last night, when 13 transients appeared at the sergeant's desk in quest of a warm night's lodging on the 13th of the month. Nothing of a nature that superstitious persons acquaint the number thirteen with in the matter of bad luck, happened, however.

Garbage Collectors Early Birds, Read History in Garbage Pails

Housecleaning Time Brings Big Increase of Work

DUMP RECOVERY

Not even snow, sleet or rain, the sultry heat of summer or the chilling blasts of winter can stay these workmen from their appointed tasks.

Belleville's garbage collectors may never have adopted an official motto to be held before them as a shining light through their long and arduous day, but when it comes to smooth and efficient collecting and the tricky judging of household waste, then Mr. Gene Wheeler, chief of operations, and his capable staff, need no introduction to local households.

Are you a chronic burner of the breakfast toast? Was that little party the night before a success? Are you a 'fancy eater' or are you of the good old, plain bread-and-butter' variety?' Your garbage pail holds no secrets from the experienced collectors.

Collecters Early Birds

Long before residents of the city have turned over for their second early morning snooze, the collectors are up and about the job of making the rounds, collecting the city's refuse of the day before to be hauled away to the city dumps. And at four o'clock in the morning when street lights blink and glimmer frostily through the cold air, the job of wrestling with the heavy cans set neatly by the side of the road is no sinecure.

Garbage sl a thing that has given no poet the inspiration to compose a lilting sonnet, nor the writer no urge to pen a gem of prose. Popular song writers have passed it by, and only to the men of the house who dreads the task of carting it from the cellar of the residence, or the collector himself who carts it away is it taken seriously or thought of deeply.

But there is romance even in garbage. For believe it or not, the garbage can has its bright side, its fashions and its mysteries. Just as the seasons change, and even the fashions in clothing, so also does the household change is garbage.

When Winter Comes

When the first snowflakes commence to fall, when cold weather grips the city and furnace fires are stoked up by winter-bound residents, then the collection of garbage becomes a heavier matter. As the season advances, the percentage of material picked up may rise to about two hundred per cent over the summer collection of grass clippings from family lawns, and the berry boxes that have become no longer useful. Ashes then take their innings. Instead of one garbage can, some households at this time of the year set two and three neatly out to be emptied Soon, with the advent of warmer weather, this will drop off and the interesting part of collecting will commence.

Later on potato tops will appear, over-ripe tomatoes which have been left too long in the cellar and other vegetables that have failed to weather the frosts of winter will grace the tops of the cans. Later will come the dead shrubbery from lawns and gardens and the accumulated debris of winter.

House Cleaning Time

Next heaviest to the winter collection will be the period during house cleaning time when many a treasure will find its way from attic and spare room to the yawning receptacle. When wifey in her hectic rounds of the house finally rounds up that discarded clothing, those broken toys, cast off foot gear and even broken furniture, she will swell the contents of the can already bulging with waste newspapers, sections of wall paper and even lath and plaster from a redecorated room.

All falls under the eye of the collector. If you have had a party the night before, the broken tumblers and the empty bacardi and sherry bottles will give you away. If you burn the toast in the morning, if you live most of your life on canned foods, if you throw away the boy friends photo, if you acquire new furniture or make over the living room, or suddenly become affluent, your garbage man knows; he even knows that better times are already here, because collections are becoming better from the scavenger's point of view. Better and more expensive garbage is finding its way into local cans.

Recovery From Dump

Laden with the city's refuse of the day before, the purring trucks speed from the residential sections to the east and west side dumps where loads are quickly cleared, and then hasten back for more. Steadily the fandango of the ash can mounts and quickens in a tinny obligato throughout the day until the last load has been collected and another section of the city awaits.

And at the city dumps prowl the scavengers to whom the disposal of the refuse means a job of sorts from which the returns are meagre but fairly steady. For, resurrected from the loads of ashes and kitchen refuse often there comes a prize that well repays the finder for his morning's work. Bottles, newspapers, rags and other pickings can be salvaged and later turned into cash. Odd pieces of brass plumbing, car parts, and other junk will find their way to a metal dealer who will pay in proportion.

Car Owners Write, Engineers Compile Guide for Buyers

Oshawa, March 14The 1935 revised issue of the Automobile Buyer's Guide, published by Customer Research Department of General Motors Products of Canada Limited, is now off the press. Notwithstanding the slightly mail-order flavor of the title, this book is really an invaluable addition to the Canadian literary output of the year. It is at least unique in one respect; It is the joint product of approximately 100,000 Canadians. They really wrote it, in the same sense that the population of Canada "writes" the Dominion Census report, by supplying the information which it contains.

The book is based on three consecutive yearly surveys and contains the advice of Canadian motorists on the more recent developments in automotive construction and design. The questionnaire, "Your car as you would build it" asked the questions and the 1935 Buyer's Guide gives the answers. Results of these surveys—the biggest of their kind ever conducted in Canada—have, it is explained, been invaluable to engineers and production technicians of General Motors of Canada Limited. Everything desired by the Canadian motorist that was consistent with sound engineering principles has been incorporated in the company's products for 1935. Naturally the company having gathered together the experiences of thousands of motorists, is ideally situated to pass along the "Advice of other owners."

In the main the book supplies check sheets by which a prospective buyer may score the good points of the cars he is considering. A customer who has made full use of the hints supplied by the Buyer's Guide would not be an "easy mark" for the best car salesman in the country.

The Guide is also a valuable reference and would be extremely useful to students in these days when teachers keep asking for essays on modern industrial developments. There are concise chapters on the history of transportation, research and industry, new motor car developments, and highlights on factory processes.

The book is entertaining and easy to absorb. It is typographically attractive and dramatically illustrated. Copies may be obtained by writing Customer Research Department, General Motors Products of Canada Limited, Oshawa, Ontario

HOLSTEIN BUSINESS SHOWS GOOD GAINS

4,465 Animals Registered and 2,279, Transfers Negotiated

An increase in registrations, transfers, memberships and receipts for the first two months of the year is the cheerful report just released from the head offices of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada.

The number of animals registered was 4,465, and the number of transfers issued 2,279. Compared with the same period of 1934, this represents a gain of 20 per cent in registrations and 40 per cent in transfers.

A marked improvement in prices featured the shipment of thirty-three head of pure Holsteins just sent to F. L. Hellman and Son, Cleona, Pa., by A. B. Brubacher, sales agent of the Waterloo Holstein Breeders' Club. The shipment comprised drafts from the herds of well-known breeders in Waterloo, Oxford, Perth, Wellington and Halton Counties.

Two carloads of pure-bred Holstein cattle have recently been purchased from Ontario breeders, by Garelick Brothers, Unionville, Mass. Thirty-three head were taken from Prince Edward and Hastings Counties and thirty-five head from Oxford, Perth, and surrounding counties.

5,000 FACTS ABOUT CANADA

The public will agan welcome the annual issue of "5,000 Facts About Canada," now in its 32nd year, compiled by the well-known Canadia writer and lecturer, Frank Yeigh, and which has won a well deserved popularity for the conciseness and value of its information. It is truly a tabloid cyclopedia of the Dominion—Canada in a Nutshell—"or two," as Andy would say. Here within brief compass are all the salient features of the country for the current year, arranged under fifty chapter heads ranging from Agriculture to Yukon. This handy little volume, "as full of meat as a cocoanut"—is a revelation of the progressive story of the Dominion in a single year, and should prove a source of encouragement to all and a revelation as well of the favorable trends of recent months. It "sells Canada" most effectually, and its wide circulation is good national business. Copies at 35 cents each, or three for a dollar may be had from 588 Huron Street, Toronto or from leading newsdealers.

MEASLE EPIDEMIC CONTINUES

Toronto, March 14—(CP)—The measle epidemic continued and a new high mark since the disease took its hold here was recorded yesterday — 262 cases. "Early reports today show 154 new cases. Since the first of the month 1,618 cases have been reported with 5,577 since Jan. 1.

Windsor, March 14—(CP)—There are so many cases of measles in the border cities there is imminent danger of an epidemic, according to Dr. Fred Adams, Medical Officer of Health. In issuing a warning to parents to take every precaution at the first sign of the disease, Dr. Adams today declared measles come in cycles and an epidemic is "due".

The number of cases throughout the province had caused the government to issue a circular on the matter within the past few days, he said.

STIRLING FATHERS AND SONS ATTEND CLUB BANQUET

Mr. J. Shortt Delivers Address on Boys' Work

Stirling, March 14—The regular monthly meeting of Stirling Community Welfare Club was held in the form of a father and son banquet. The meeting, which was called on Tuesday, March 12th, was largely attended by both old and young. During the dinner and between courses, special community singing was led by Bob Patterson. In the contests the boys' singing seemed a bit superior to that of the more experienced members. After the toast to the King, Dr. Edmund Carleton introduced the visitors, among whom was that original entertainer, known as "Uncle Frank" who offered an all request program old time vocal numbers. He also sang a special number for the boys in the gathering, entitled "That Silver Haired Daddy of Mine." Providing his own accompaniment, with a guitar, Uncle Frank responded willingly to the applause of the crowd in one encore after another, making thirty minutes of real entertainment. Rev. E W. Rowland then introduced the speaker, Mr. J. Shortt of Belleville Y.M.C.A. "No finer choice could have been made for such an occasion," said Mr. Rowland. "Mr Shortt, an active worker in boys' welfare, was quite well known for his work among the boys in Belleville at the Y.M.C.A. and at Bridge Street Sunday School."

In his opening remarks the speaker emphasized the need of more father and son functions throughout the country to create the fellowship and trust on the part of the boy to his older and more experienced trainer. There must be a free and easy trust on the part of the boy before he is willing to accept the advice, which to him appears ridiculous at times, said the speaker. The big brother movement has done much to develop this trust, but it must be remembered that those in authority have proven that in the natural gang is found the greatest interest of the boy. He is more interested in this group of friends than in his home circle. Boys must be provided with something more than three meals a day, and school, or in an effort to find more for themselves they will seek out an unhealthy environment. The boy problem is a serious one and must be given serious thought. Clubs such as this one have it within their power to improve conditions for the coming men of the nation. A visit to juvenile court will reveal the plight of the neglected youth whose education is an education of crime because of their environment. The standards of these boys are raised, when through carefully planned probationary laws serve to lift them out of that setting.

Speaking directly to the boys present. Mr. Shortt predicted a great future for them "They had gained," he said, "a great knowledge of world conditions. Through the experience of their fathers, they had been taught the horrors of war, and would rally to oppose it, not lacking in patriotism or courage but rather giving a fine display of the real courage to do right. The boys must be better men than their fathers because of their increased advantages; otherwise they fail. The youth of our nation have access to all institutions of learning, regardless of creed or color. Whereas in such countries as Russia, youth must sacrifice religious belief in order to secure an education The national movement of Germany must occupy the first place in the youth of that nation; education being secondary. The youth of our land is coming to a brighter day, a finer world wherein the rewards will go to the capable. So increased knowledge is essential. The behaviour of the drifting youth of the nation is a worry, but will right itself as time goes on." In closing, the speaker stated that could be served byproviding a means whereby the vast amount of leisure, created by present day world conditions could be taken up. That period of spare time with gradually increase as time goes on We must admit it and face the facts. What will we do with our idle moments?

Mr. H. Thompson arose to move a vote of thanks to the speaker for his very fine address, which proved of educational value to fathers as well as sons. Mr. Harold Baker then spoke on behalf of the sons present, expressing their gratitude for the splendid evening. He felt sure that each boy would look forward to the day when they too could be members of the Welfare Club.

On Tuesday evening, Glen Ross champions of the Centre Hockey League scored another win, when in a sparkling display of fast hockey they defeated the Menie team, which are the leaders of their own group, by a score of 3 to 2. The score indicates the closeness of the contest. They were very evenly matched and provided many thrills Don Rodgers of the Evergreen team substituted for Roy Brooks on the Glen Ross line up, and turned in a fine game. Roy Brooks is still on the injured list. The rest of the Glen Ross team played up to the fine form which carried them through two strenuous series to the championship. The combination of Menie was slightly superior, and the good work of Hagerman was their hardest barrier. He turned away plenty, especially in the last period. Menie's front line of Oddie F. Whitton and Rainie was very clever in combination plays. The game was clean with but few penalties for minor offences.

The lineups:

Menie—Goal R. Oddie, defence, Little and Milne, wings, Whitton and Rainie, centre, Oddie Alternates, W. Whitton, C. Nelson, K. Milne and F. Little.

Glen Ross—Goal, Hagerman, defence, Armstrong and Brown, wings Rodgers and Brooks, centre, Friday Fraser. Alternates, Fraser, Scott and Pyear.

Referee—Harry Ingram.

LUMBER INDUSTRY APPROVES TRADE

Reciprocal Agreements Would Eliminate Excise Taxes

Washington, March 14 (CP)—Approval of the principles of reciprocal trade and tariff agreements by the lumber industry was contained in a brief fyled Wednesday with the Federal Tariff Commission by Dr. Wilson Compton for use in connection with the proposed trade agreement between Canada and the United States.

Such an agreement, said Dr. Compton, General Manager of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association and spokesman for the industry, "will substantially increase trade and improve trade relations between the United States and Canada."

In the proposals the lumbermen opposed elimination of present excise taxes of $3 per thousand feet except on items produced in the Dominion and not produced in the United States.

The industry proposed the Canadian duties on lumber not produced in United States be no greater than the United States duties on the Dominion product.

Pointing out Canada is the principal competitor of the United States in the world lumber markets, Dr. Compton said Dominion operators were distributing within the United States species which are in direct competition with home products.

GREEK MEETS GREEK

The old phrase "When Greek meets Greek" is lived out in the ten-day revolution which has flivvered out in general breakdown and collapse of the insurrection.

When Greek met Persian at Marathon and Thermopylea twenty-five hundred years ago it was a great story. Thermopylea was the greatest feat in history when a band of three hundred Spartans gave their lives to hold back thousands upon thousands of Orientals in the narrow pass and gave a name which will ring as long as the heart of man throbs to noble deeds in defence of country. The Athenians at Marathon and at Salamis also made two of the greatest [illegible]s in the history of heroism, names [illegible]ich are to be found in every tongue of [illegible] western world.

Through good fortune the revolution did not get near the city of Athens and the famed Acropolis with its standing ruins of Greek art which are in their own way the greatest in all the world, such as the Parthenon.

Shot and shell did their worst at the time when Lord Byron led the Greek war for freedom from the Turk. It was over a century ago when Byron sang those those immortal lines:

"The mountains look on Marathon
And Marathon looks on the sea,
And gazing there an hour alone,
I dreamed that Greece might still be free.
For standing on the Persians' grave,
I could not deem myself a slave."

Athens also has tender memories for Christians for there it was that St. Paul, the greatest of the Christian missionaries saw the altar to the unknown God and preached his great sermon to the philosophic and sceptical Athenians.

RADIO INTERFERENCE

Radio Trade-Builder makes a strong plea for federal legislation to help curb electrical interference to radio. "Noises of almost every description—buzzing, grating, rasping, crackling—interfere with radio reception in many districts, more especially in certain metropolitan areas. Moreover this condition seems to be growing worse instead of better. Motors, sign flashers, vacuum cleaners, oil burners and blowers, heating pads, electric power lines, control equipment, street cars, high frequency apparatus such as the violet ray, X-ray and similar machines when defective or not equipped with suppression devices, often spoil good programs and exasperate listeners," says a recent number.

The Trade-Builder states that these causes of interference can be totally eliminated in many cases, usually at slight expense, as devices for this purpose are on the market or can be easily constructed to order.

Electrical appliances are now reasonably free from conditions which cause interference. Power and railway companies have been willing to co-operate.

The main source of interference originates from old appliances and other apparatus that are either normally radiators if interference or else are defective. It is with this class that the present agitation concerns itself.

The trouble as the Radio Trade-Builder points out, is that it is the duty of the owner of offending apparatus to correct the condition but "at the present time no one can compel him to take this step." The unselfish owner does what he can to right conditions but the other class "bluntly refuse to do anything about it. The inspector has no power whatever to enforce action and the nearby listeners are compelled to put up with the noise, likely blaming the inspector all the while for not eliminating it."

"What we need in this country is federal legislation with teeth in it," says the magazine. "Legislation that would give the radio inspector power to compel the owner of interference-creating appliance or apparatus either to have it repaired or if necessary to have suppression devices installed. Failing that he should be required to cease operating it during certain hours, especially in the evening. If he does not heed an adequate warning, a stiff penalty should follow." It is pointed out that New Zealand has a penalty up to a $250 fine for a breach of regulations.

Over half the homes in Canada, to be exact about 1,200,000, are equipped with radios. Radio is part of the life of the people and broadcasts must be protected from the selfish interference of apparatus.

Owners of sets unless of the selfish class cannot but wish such a campaign success.

JUST COURTESY

Motorists can prove themselves courteous these days when pools of water linger on the edges of the roads or near the curbs. If they do not use ordinary precautions they may splash the waiting pedestrians on the corner or those walking by the side of the road. Reduction of speed when they come to a watery patch of roadway or pavement would eliminate much of the splashing.

Some time ago in Montreal damage was claimed after the splashing with water of a dress worn by a woman about to cross a street, and she won the court case. The other day in Toronto a splash of water caused, it is alleged, by furious driving, is said to have projected some mote into a man's eye with the resultant call to a doctor to render the man treatment at a hospital.

If a court rules that splashing is unnecessary it must mean what it says that splashing is not necessary. But there is no need of court action if the motorist will only try to save the pedestrian from the risk of splashing. In these days nobody wants to "go after" a motorist, as eveybody in these modern days is a driver or an owner or an occupant of a car at some time or expects to be. The motorist will think of the times when he himself is walking and will not want to be splashed with the water containing all the mud and ingredients which can possibly get into road water.

PENMANSHIP—A LOST ART?

A course of instruction in writing is to be undertaken in Woodstock Collegiate because a departmental inspector has has reported that the work of some first year students is "only fair"; and that samples of practical records in science are "poor".

"It seems to me," declared Chairman Flood, "that writing is deteriorating. Penmanship seems to have become a lost art."

Happily, however, with a supply of suitable paper, that art is in process of restoration. It cannot be impressed too strongly upon students that legibility in writing is a decided asset in business.—Border Cities Star.

McGEER IS OBDURATE

Mayor McGeer of Vancouver is determined to test the virtues of insolvency proceedings as a remedy for Vancouver's financial problems. The mayor declares the remedies suggested by Thomas Bradshaw, financial expert of Toronto, for the cure of the city's financial ills are impracticable and he is recommending to the city council that it arbitrarily reduce interest rate on the city's bonded indebtedness to three per cent. on and after March 31.

Mayor McGeer takes objection to Mr. Bradshaw's plan on the ground that it does not provide for the construction of a city hall and for various other capital undertakings calculated to provide employment. It would appear, however, that Vancouver proposes to eat its cake and have it also. The Bradshaw report calls attention to faulty methods of finance pursued by the city of Vancouver for many years when extravagant plans of expansion were carried out with no provision made for maturing indebtedness.

That is what is wrong with most municipalities, and even provinces, that today find themselves in financial trouble. It is simply a case that a spendthrift era has produced a showdown and all manner of subterfuges are being invoked so that the reckless spenders may get from under. Fortunately, however, low rates of interest are being achieved through a process of evolution and those municipalities that are inclined to deal honestly with their creditors will probably find that they will be able to accomplish by legitimate borowing deals what others are rashly trying to achieve by going into bankruptcy.

It will be a good thing for the entire country if the lesson of today is sufficiently taken to heart. In private affairs, in business and in government it is impossible to keep on spending recklessly without incurring the natural penalties of that folly.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

CHEERY NOTE HELPS

A military correspondent of the London Morning Post points out that instructions recently issued by the British War Council, include the teaching of singing by units as "it helps men to march well even when fatigued." The writer says that he recently saw some troops tramping in drenching rain and their spirits had fallen to zero when a song was started with the chorus.

"You never know you've got it till you get it,
If you get it don't kick up a row,
If anybody is ever going to get it,
We've got it now."

The effect is recorded as electrical and they stepped out with wonderful elasticity. To which the fact might be added that it is not only military units which respond to a cheery note in time of stress.—Brantford Expositor.

HITLER'S DISGRACE

Two German society women were beheaded for divulging military secrets of the Reich.

The revolting aspect of the situation is not that they were women who received such a sentence, nor that such a sentence should be imposed for treason in peace time. It is that they did not receive a fair trial.

Their fate was decided secretly by the sadly misnamed People's Court; they had no right of appeal, and as far as we can tell no facilities for defence.

MOON MESSAGE

Bright moon, sailing over me
On the wind just fresh from sea,
For an instant pause and hover,
Take a message to my lover;
Ah, my lover, where is he?

White moon, you can find my love.
Over every land you move;
Over silent deserts crossing,
Over teakwood forests, tossing,
Seek him ever as you rove!

Over plain and mountain crest,
North and south and east and west;
Tell him, timeless one, time cheats us
And its viewless tide defeats us;
Bright moon, white moon, take no rest!

GOLDEN STOOL OF ASHANTI. Bet you don't know where Ashanti is. Get your map of Africa and see if it is not on the West Coast. Ashanti brings before the mind's eye visions of fierce and savage chiefs of ebony hue, plentifully bedecked with paint and feathers and swinging vicious assagais—the warlike African tribe which has given Great Britain more or less trouble in the past. A despatch to the London Times describes an interesting ceremony recently performed at Kumasi in Ashantiland when the ancient office of Asantehene, or head of the Ashanti Confederacy, with its symbol "The Golden Stool", to the Ashanti people. Sir Arnold Hudson, Governor of the Gold Coast, on behalf of His Majesty the King, presided at the ceremony and formally presented the Golden Stool and designated Prempeh, nephew of Prempeh I, as the first Ashantehene under the British Government. At Kumasi 38 head chiefs and 350 sub-chiefs, under about 400 variegated umbrellas, assembled, and the total attendance was in excess of 50,000. A company of the Royal West African Force was present and a salute of 17 guns was fired as the Governor arrived. The proceedings as reported by the correspondent of The London Times is interestingly told as follows:

After inspecting the troops the Governor, accompanied by the Chief Commissioner and others, and followed by a large blue and gold umbrella, visited the Chiefs, drums meanwhile beating. The Chiefs returned the visit in procession before the Governor's stand which lasted an hour and twenty minutes.

After the Golden Stool, which is saddle shaped and of dull reddish gold, had been carried round, Prempeh read an address to which the Governor replied, announcing that the King had designated Prempeh the first Asantehene under the British Government.

Then Prempeh II, having taken the oath of allegiance, passed in procession before the Governor, the Queen-Mother chanting according to ancient custom. Next Prempeh II danced a war dance, and the ceremony ended with the whole of the open space filled with wildly enthusiastic dancers shouting war cries and beating drums.

At the end of the seventeenth century the Ashanti Confederacy was founded, with Kumasi as the capital. Ever since that time the Golden Stool has been accepted as the symbol of the soul of the Ashanti nation. Unfortunate incidents led to the invasion of Ashanti by a British force under Sir Garnet Wolseley in 1874, and to the second Ashanti Expedition of 1895. This was followed in 1900 by the Ashanti revolt, which led to the arrest and deportation of the Asantehene, Prempeh I and to the annexation of the country. In 1924 Prempeh was allowed to return from exile and to occupy the position of Kumasihene in the native administration. He died in 1931.

FRESH AIR IS NECESSARY TO GOOD HEALTH

Vitality is Bound to be Impaired by Foul Air

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Pychology

(Copyright 1935, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

When cold weather arrives, the tendency is to shut all the windows and to keep them shut, whether this be in the home, the factory or the office. Even in public schools one often finds that the windows are not opened often enough, despite the fact that from thirty to fifty children may be breathing the same air over and over again.

We must not, of course, confuse warm air with impure air, nor fresh air with cold air. In fact, what vitiates air is not necessarily an increase of carbon dioxide but rather an increase of the water vapor which is breathed out from the lungs and exuded from the skin surface.

Absolutely pure air consists of nitrogen, oxygen, carbon dioxide, not exceeding 4-100, and only a small quantity of water vapor. In fresh air, the nitrogen is about four times that of oxygen by volume.

In the air we breathe, there is about 70 per cent of nitrogen, 21 per cent. of oxygen and only four parts in ten thousand of carbon dioxide. In the air we exhale from the lungs, approximately 16 per cent. is oxygen, as much as 79 per cent. is nitrogen; there is from 3 to 4 per cent of carbon dioxide and about 1 1-2 per cent. of water vapor.

This means that in exhaled air the oxygen has been decreased about 1-4, carbon dioxide has been increased 100 times, while the water vapor plus organic matters and ammonia are also decidedly increased.

If a peron keeps on breathing air that is definitely contaminated by the exhalations of others in the same room, his vitality is bound to be impaired and, if it continues, his general health. In fact, many cases of nervousness, loss of weight and even digestive disturbances, may be traced to the continual breathing of vitiated air.

Children require two thousand cubic feet of air per hour, while the amount necessary for adults is from three thousand to four thousand cubic feet, when at rest, and as much as five thousand cubic feet of air when doing light work. Three thousand cubic feet of fresh air should be allowed for each individual who remains for an hour or more and in company with others.

The best way to keep air in motion—a fact which helps so much in maintaining our sense of well-being—is to open the windows several inches at top and bottom. The air, which is warmed by the presence of individuals breathing it, rises to the top of the room and is forced out over the top of the windows by the current of cold air rushing in at the bottom. In order to avoid a draft from the bottom of the window, glass or wooden partitions can readily be constructed, or bought for the purpose, which prevent air currents from rushing in at a horizontal level.

In houses and offices which are steam-heated, care should also be exercised not to allow the temperature to rise above 72 degrees Fahrenheit. If anything it is better to have the room a little too cool rather than too hot.

There was a large attendance at the market this morning. Following are the prices: Dairy butter 33c to 35c per pound; fresh eggs 22c to 23c per dozen; dressed chickens were scarce and sold at $1.50 to $2.00 per pair; potatoes 70c to 75c per bag.

Several Front Street merchants took advantage of yesterday's fine weather to clear the sidewalks before their stores of ice and dirt. They will soon be compelled to extend their work to the street proper if the city authorities do not get busy with their cleaner. Its present condition is absolutely filthy.

Seldom if ever has Griffin's Theatre been so thronged on the occasion of an amateur performance as it was last evening. It was impossible for many persons to obtain admission and the main cause of the congestion was the fact that the first amateur night of the season brought forth some of Belleville's leading amateurs all eager to receive one of the valuable cash prizes offered. The following were the winners: First prize, $5.00 in gold, Lord and Scriven in a musical act; second prize, $3.00, Miss Fanny Solomon; third prize, $2.00, Sam Turner, dialogue.

How West Looks at Problems, Is Indicated by Prof. McQueen

Debts, Railways, Exports Are Big Issues For Prairies

PROBE NOTHING NEW

"Don't be alarmed if you hear strange noises from the West," advised Prof. R. McQueen, professor of Economics in the University of Saskatchewan, speaking on Tuesday night at the last of eight lectures in the Greater Citizenship series sponsored by the Belleville Chamber of Commerce. Mr. McQueen is this year exchanging at Queen's University.

The admonition was appreciated as the professor pointed out how the Westerner does not pay any attention to railway deficits and that he looks Pacific-ward since the opening of the Panama Canal has made Vancouver the greatest grain port.

Contrasts

Prof. McQueen corrected some of the inverted ideas Eastern Canadians have of the West. He gave the quietus to the statement that the Western folk were extravagant, that they were possessed of a Hollywood complex. "I doubt if five per cent of the people on the prairies ever saw the Rocky Mountains and the people do not go to California," he remarked.

The farmers of the west just have not the means to live extravagantly. Farmers in Ontario who have water in their kitchens number one in nine, but in Saskatchewan the ratio is one to fifty-seven. As for bath rooms in houses the Ontario ratio is one farmer out of fifteen, while in the West, the ratio runs one in seventy-two. As a contrast the speaker declared that Alberta and Saskatchewan had the least defaulting in municipalities, not taking account of Prince Edward Island, while Ontario headed the list with defaulters.

"Superimposed upon the world depression which would have made trouble enough in the West was the drought problem, he said.

Prof. McQueen indicated that the stock of wheat in the world was growing in 1926 and that wheat had already begun to decline in price so that the problem of wheat did not suddenly begin in 1929. The demand was falling off and the supply increasing before 1929. "We need not look for any increase of consumption of wheat among the bread consuming populations of the world" was the remark of the professor.

Fall in Crop Value

He compared the value of the wheat crops to Saskatchewan: In 1928—$247 million; 1929—$166 millions; 1930—$100 million; 1931—$50 millions; 1932—$63 million. Wheat dropped as low as 28 cents to the farmer in 1932. Taking the average price of 39 cents a bushel from 1930 to 1933 and the debt of ten to twelve dollars an acre, and the average of 16½ bushels of wheat to the acre, it is calculated that it would have taken 55 cents a bushel for wheat to pay anything on the farm debt. To pay interest on the debt would have taken two thirds of the wheat crop in 1932 and one third of the crop to pay taxes and nothing would be left for the farmer to live on. Schools were closed for a portion of the time.

"Don't you think you here are not interested. If you have life insurance you are involved for companies have loans in the west," commented the professor.

Problem of Debts

Many farmers were hopelessly bankrupt and were given a cheap process of bankruptcy, and others who could salvage something if forced to it were given relief in the form of writing down of he debt for the farmers must be left on the farms as there were no others to take their place.

Prof. McQueen then commented, "There is going to be a lot of debt defaulting in this world. If you want inflation, you can get the debt paid off. Would you sooner have inflation with all its dangers or would you prefer writing down the debts? Ottawa preferred the later. Inflation is a terrible thing if it gets away from you."

The speaker attacked the MacMillan report for devoting only half a page to the agricultural debt problem in its survey of financial conditions in Canada.

"Frontiers are always in debt and always have monetary cranks" the professor affirmed.

Railway Problem Political

"The railway problem is essentially a political problem. Non one in the west would hold it as wholly an economic problem.

"Freight rates are the essence of the life of the West. The Crow's Nest Pass rates are said not to be remunerative but the West will never give them up.

"We must have a tariff or there would be a lot of lines running north and south in the West.

"I do not know any one who would object to a twenty per cent. tariff, but some people view the present tariff as a racket. That is why the people take no interest in the West in railway deficits.

"The West realizes that nothing can be done in regard to freight rates. It also realizes that in the East waterways and highways assure that there will be no holdup in rates in the East.

"Low rates will always be necessary probably to get wheat to the world markets. Where will the railways get earnings on high class freight moving West?

Appeal of Panama Canal

"The Panama Canal traffic appeals to the Westerner. Vancouver is supplanting Montreal as a port of grain export.

Referring to C.P.R. President Beatty's speech at Regina, Mr. McQueen said that Westerners realized that protected industry does not necessarily mean high profits, but thought the method is very uneconomic. The speech, he said, was particularly western. But why was it not given in 1930 instead of 1935? Take a look at the C.P.R. Board of Directors, the West said. Westerners are a funny people. I think they know more of interlocking directorates than most of the people in the East. They would not expect to hear them talking of lower tariffs. Did mortgage companies and elevator companies complain of the tariff in 1930?

Unification and Tariff

Regarding unification of railways Mr. McQueen said that he thought the west would listen to unification proposals if there was any assurance of tariff adjustments. In the West there is the feeling that the tariff has been used to bolster up prices in industry while agricultural prices were falling.

Prof. McQueen told how Australia was practically out of the depression by reason of everyone taking a drastic cut and by seeing that reductions were borne by all people.

"Confederation is being questioned today as never before," remarked Mr. McQueen. There is no head-counting in economic processes. You may outvote the West, but if the exports are sick, you are not well.

Nothing Unusual in Revelations

"The revelations of the Stevens Commission are not strange things" he also said. "Most of this sort of thing was uncovered in 1919."

Mr. Archie Cameron was in the chair and spoke of his acquaintance with the family of Prof. McQueen in the West. Rev. Bert Howard of Albert College voiced appreciation and expressed hope that outspoken views by both East and West would bring Canada East and West more close in understanding.

Speaking of the cultural value of these eight addresses of the series given by members of the staff of Queen's University, Mr. J. O. Herity, manager and secretary of the Chamber of Commerce asked for a show of hands in regard to another course next year and received an unanimous vote in favor of a series in 1936.

Prof. McQueen was in the war years a cadet in flying at Camp Mohawk. During the evening he met a number of Bellevillians and renewed acquaintance.

BERLIN PARLEY SET FOR MAR. 24

Sir John Simon and Anthony Eden Will Leave For Berlin

London, March 13 (CP-Havis) — Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon and Lord Privy Seal Anthony Eden will leave for their visit to the German government at Berlin March 24, it was announced today. A Thought for Today

"He that oppresseth the poor reproacheth his Maker: but he that honoureth him hath mercy on the poor."
—Proverbs 14:31

Dignity Necessary Aid to Good Posture

(The Beauty Box)

Glenda Farrell

Dignity, she knows, is an asset to beauty.

By HELEN FOLLETT

Long skirts are flattering to all figures. They slenderize the poor dears who are inclined to plumpness, but haven't the spirit to do anything about it. On the svelte, reedy shape they are adorable.

The floor length, form fitting robe must be carried beautifully. Women realize that well enough, note how all the flapper antics went the way of all nonsense when the skirt hem dropped. No sitting on tables now or cutting up high jinks at the merry party. Long draperies demand dignified behavior. Dignity, in itself, adds to beauty.

Madame Fashion has made good posture more necessary than ever.

Perspiring hands are the penalty paid for lack of nerve control.

Dissolve one ounce of powdered alum in a pint of hot water, allow it to cool, apply the solution with cotton at bedtime.

It is not easy to get the hair clean, even when its short. The delicate shafts bear a mixture of grease and atmospheric dust, a combination that calls for a rousing sudsing and much friction.

An important part of the shampoo is the thorough rinsing given before soap is applied. There should be at least three scalp soaping, the lather should be rich and crackling. The only way to get a thorough rinsing is to use a bath spray, use a strong current of fairly hot water.

Thoughtless habits contribute to eye defects. Reading in a poor light is one of them. Rubbing the eyes is another; it not only flattens the organ of vision and weakens its vitality, but it uproots eyelashes, tender little shoots that are easily dislodged.

To read on a moving train is cruelty to soul orbs. There's a constant change of vision, which is a strain.

Advice to the Lovelorn

LOVE MADE TOO CHEAP NEVER HIGHLY PRIZED

Copyright 1935

King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"Where he is concerned, I haven't a scrap of pride. Once he cared for me, but now he turns me down cruelly, brutally; cuts me short on the telephone. I could understand if I ever did anything mean to him but I've never given him anything but my deepest love."

The above is an extract written by a distracted girl who can't understand why the young man hangs up the phone when he recognizes her voice. She finds it hard to believe that he's utterly surfeited with her cloying devotion. She's hurt to the quick when someone tells her he has spoken of her as a "telephone hound."

She has never heard, poor child, the old adage that if a girl throws herself at a man's head, she's likely to find herself at his feet.

Men who are run after and written and telephoned to, when they are plainly bored by these attentions, have the feeling of hunted creatures, and a hunted thing fights desperately to escape.

"Deepest love," such as this girl says she has always given this young man, palls if you make a steady diet of it. The cheap, salted peanut never tastes so good as when you've worked your way through a large box of "somebody's best candy.

My correspondent has asked me not to give her letter in full, as she fears it will be recognized, but it will not be breaking faith to say that "petting" and hand-holding appear to have been the specialties of this affair, from first to last. Indeed, I'm afraid there was very little else. So the young man got tired of the too-easy kisses and now hangs up the telephone when he recognizes the girl's voice.

Strange to say, even that cruel insult does not seem to be able to cure her of her infatuation, and she writes me this ten-page letter to ask how she can win him back.

Alas, there is no magic formula for "winning them back". But there is a magic formula that may be invoked for keeping them, and that s—don't go cheap. Bargains in affections, like bargains on the marked-down counter, are open to suspicion' What is worth while is not to be had by cheap and easy methods.

I know that manners, customs, even morals, have changed in the last generation, but there is something innate in human nature that turns from what is cheap and easy to the thing that is more difficult to adquire.

Think this over, all you girls who let men break dates without explanation or apology; who ring up your boy friends on the telephone in and out of season, and then want to know how you can "win him back."

It just can't be done!

If you allow yourself to be picked up, taken for motor rides by strange young men, or crash an acquaintance without an introduction, don't be surprised if the young man drops you and gets tired of his "bargain counter" playmate. It's a case of "easy-come, easy-go", so there's no use crying about it.

Correct Manners

WEDDING EXPENSES

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. What is the expense of the best man and bridegroom at a wedding 2. Should the best man give any speeches at the dinner, and if so, what should he say? 3. With Tuxedo suits should the man wear patent leather shoes or will plain leather shoes do 4. Should they wear gloves? 5. Should the maid of honor wear gloves with a long sleeved dress?

Reader

1. The best man bears no expenses of the wedding. Of course he sends a wedding present to the bride — but that is all.

These are the expenses of the bridegroom: the engagement ring, a wedding present to the bride, the bride's bouquet, a bouquet to the bride's mother, and a bouquet to his mother, the marriage license, the fee to the clergyman, the gift to the best man, and to each of the ushers, besides their ties, gloves and boutonnieres.

He also provides the car in which he and his best man come to the ceremony, this car usually being used by the married couple when they leave the church for the reception and when they depart after the reception. He pays also the expenses of the wedding trip.

2. The best man may, if he wishes, propose a toast to the bride and groom. It isn't necessary for him to "make a speech".

3. Low patent leather shoes are worn with Tuxedo suits.

4. No. Gloves are not worn with dinner jackets at a wedding.

5. If the wedding is an informal one, the maid of honor would not wear gloves with her long-sleeved dress.

Announcing the Secret Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. This last summer we were married secretly, and now we would like to know if it would be good form to send informal notes to our relatives announcing our marriage 2. Would it be correct to give a reception, having a wedding cake and all?

Perplexed

1. It will be in excellent taste for you to write informal notes to your relatives and friends telling them of your marriage last summer. 2. It will be in excellent form too for you to have a reception. Since so long a time has elapsed since your marriage, I suggest that you omit the wedding cake.

WHEN THE GIRL PAYS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please let me know whether it is proper for a girl to pay for tickets when she invites a young man to any affair that they may attend, when he is invited by the girl?

B

When the girl invites a man to go with her as her guest to a party of any kind where there are tickets to be bought, it is the girl who buys the tickets. The tickets are a part of the hospitality that she is offering to her guest.

SHOWERS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to be married next month, and there are a few things I am not sure of. 1. Do you think it is proper to hold a personal and a miscellaneous shower at the same time 2. Do you think it proper if I wear a white dress with a little turban to match and wear either white or silver slippers? Also a nice corsage? I am not having a wedding — just a family gathering and a light lunch will be served.

J.

1. I am not sure what you mean by a "personal shower". Since there are no definite rules about the giving of showers, your taste and judgment would determine the propriety of the combination of two kinds of showers. 2. For an informal wedding this costume will be appropriate. And wearing a corsage with this costume will be correct.

Fashion Flashes

It should be forbidden for any but the youthful to wear off-the-face halo hats. Ideal for a beautiful young blonde is a hat with a backward contour and a wide halo that reveals the forehead and part of the hairline. It is in black straw which simulates Persian lamb.

A revival of lace is presaged by the many dark frocks with lace dyed to match. A charming frock of navy blue crepe has a squared deep neckline partly filled in by ruffles of fine lace dyed to match the frock. There are frilly cuffs of the dyed lace.

Keep cool at your favorite resort in the new shirtmaker frocks of fine lawn which will be promoted for Summer wear in town and country. A charming double-breasted model is in red, gray and white fine stripes with buttons detailed in red.

Just a look at the smart dinner dances will reveal printed satin as a new and favored medium for smart, softly tailored evening ensembles. A typical model is in black and white flower printed satin. Black satin revers trim the jacket and line the short bell sleeves.

You will see much beige and brown this season. A new ensemble is in beige hopsacking with brown composition buttons and is worn with a blouse in brown hand-drawn muslin worked in little squares.

The search is over for something new in the hand-bag world. A French designer has patented a clever idea and shows a bag in black antelope with a crystal and gold frame. The bottom of the bag is wide, and a tiny crystal tab on either side pulls out a tiny drawer containing makeup.

Pride of Adolescent May Puzzle Parents

By LISA GRENELLE

Laura didn't seem altogether pleased when her mother informed her that she was planning to visit the school one morning.

"You won't wear that awful gray coat, will you, mother "

"You expect me to wear my best coat—to school?" mother asked.

"Well—you see—the other mothers --the girls will think, oh, mother, can't you understand?"

"That you're ashamed of me," mother answered bitterly, "because I've put my children before my clothes and—." There followed a harangue, including past sacrifices by mother, the family poverty, the vanity and selfishness of some women, the ingratitude of children, and the thanks a mother gets for putting her family before herself—finally, tears.

She Can't Understand

It was very upsetting to Laura. She felt guilty and uncomfortable and ungrateful, and then a bit resentful at mother for "carrying on" so, and refusing to understand a perfectly natural point of view.

It is hard for a woman who has worked hard for her family to wake up one day and find that her children are ashamed of her.

But sympathize with mother though we must, we cannot regard Laura as a spoiled, unnatural brat. She, too, deserves sympathy and should be indulged.

Laura is an adolescent, with all the pride, fear, self-consciousness and superficiality which goes with that particular stage of development. And mother, if she had appeared in that "awful gray coat", would have placed Laura in a most uncomfortable position before her schoolmates.

But are not the marks of life, work and poverty something to be proud of And shouldn't Laura be made to feel that way?

Of course, if that were possible. But it isn't, not just now. Later when Laura comes into her own she will acquire a sound, sensible sense of values.

But you can never expect an adolescent to have a sense of values. All adolescences are lost, poor dears. They have suddenly been shoved out of child hood into a new life, confronted and torn by new strange emotions and moods, new fears, desires and creative instincts.

And so faced with strong fundamental forces, they fall back for support on superficialities. Confused and self-conscious, they grab at any foothold for their pride to stand upon. The family, the superiority of the family, the conventional prosperity and assurance of their own background. They want mother visiting the school in her best coat with a marcel and manicure as young, gay, carefree and pretty as possible.

When children show signs of nervousness . . loss of appetite . . constipation . . they need Vitamin "B" stored in Oatmeal

How this same precious element in Oatmeal brings out the growth value of milk!

IMAGINE all these benefits in a simple breakfast of Quaker Oats! Doctors discover that 1c worth of Quaker Oats contains as much of the precious nerve-nourishing vitamin as three cakes of fresh yeast! The food element that combats nervousness, poor appetite and constipation.

And now, Doctors say the growth value of Milk depends largely on its Vitamin "G" but this vitamin is only effective in the body along with Vitamin "B" which is found so abundantly in Quaker Oats. So it follows that milk and oatmeal are the perfect combination.

Order Quaker Oats at any store. Let the whole family benefit by this highly energizing food.

In nerve-nourishing Vitamin B
1c worth of delicious Quaker Oats equals 3 cakes of fresh yeast

To Develop Poise, Self-Reliance. Invite restful sleep, nerves must be nourished by the precious Vitamin B, so abundant in Quaker Oats.

Well-Toned Systems Don't Need Laxatives! Foremost authorities say lack of this precious vitamin results in poor intestinal tone and constipation.

Finicky, Backward Appetites result when diets don't have this precious element, supplied so abundantly in Quaker Oats. Child-feeding tests by world authorities prove it

STIRLING

BURNBRAE Y.P.S. GUESTS OF GUILD

Necessity of Moral Courage Stressed by Douglas Milne

Stirling—St. Andrew's Young People's Guild entertained the Burnbrae organization on Monday, Mar. 11th; and a splendid program put on by the visitors was enjoyed by all. Rev. J. A. Koffend opened the meeting with a hymn, and then led in prayer. This was followed by an address of welcome to those present. Mr. Koffend then called on Mr. Douglas Milne, President of the Burnbrae Young People's Society, who made a fitting response to the address of welcome. He then gave the meeting over to Miss M. Walker, Vice President, who was in charge of the remainder of the program. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. A. Koffend, followed by a vocal duet by Malcolm and Howard Hutchin, with guitar accompaniment. This number received such hearty applause that the boys found it necessary to give an encore. Mrs. F. M. Little gave a very fine reading, after which the speaker of the evening, Mr. Douglas Milne gave an instructive address on the subject, "Courage". This topic was a most appropriate one.

"Courage", said the speaker in his opening remarks, "is a quality of mind which enables one to encounter danger and difficulty without fear or depression. Courage being a quality of mind, we must consider the moral side rather than the physical. The latter is a great asset, but must be coupled with moral courage to be most valuable. Otherwise there is the possibility of developing the type of courage found in such men as the late John Dillinger, which is disastrous to any country and its people. Courage that is exhibited in uncomplaining effort, that dares to suffer for truth or duty, should be held in higher esteem, and be more sought after than the achievements of physical bravery.

Following this very fine topic, the gathering was favored with a vocal quartette, "Have courage my boy to say no." by Verna Cassan, Mrs. Taylor, Mrs. MacMillan and Malcom Hutchin. Mrs. MacMillan and Mrs. Taylor then sang a pleasing duet, accompanied at the piano by Mr. Charles Allen. The singing of "Blest be the tie that binds," brought this part of the program to a close. The ladies of St. Andrews then served lunch. The remander of the evening was spent in playing games, in which the entire gathering joined with a great deal of enthusiasm. The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" and the National Anthem brought this enjoyable evening to a close.

Mr. Stanley Roblin, and Mr. Carmen Roblin of Toronto, motored to Stirling on Monday and spent the evening with Mr. and Mrs. George Belshaw. Mrs. Stanley Roblin and daughter Lillian returned to the city with them.

Mr. Barton Haggerty of Toronto renewed acquaintances in Stirling on Tuesday.

POWER CONTRACT CHANGE FORECAST

Premier Hepburn Says 'Everything Going Along Nicely'

Toronto, Mar. 14 (CP)—Possible revision of power purchase contracts negotiated by former Ontario governments with Quebec power companies was forecast today by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn.

"Everything is coming along nicely," the premier said, "and you can rest assured when we end up the people of Ontario won't be paying for millions of dollars of unused power."

"Does that mean there will be revision?" the premier was asked.

"Your guess is as good as mine," Mr. Hepburn replied.

"If we have to take delivery for all contracted power it means Ontario industry cannot compete with outside provinces," Mr. Hepburn said. "Industrial and Domestic consumers of hydro should be interested in the negotiations."

"The very industrial life of Ontario is threatened by reason of these contracts and we have not yet reached the peak of the purchased power," the premier continued. "We are only on the fringe of what will be a critical situation."

Mr. Hepburn said today Ontario is selling back the power at $3.50 a horsepower and in order to take delivery of it all the province would have to spend $20,000,000 on transmission lines—"for power we can't sell".

SWEEPING REFORMS PROMISED IN GREECE

Abolition of Senate Proposed As Result of Revolution

Athens, March 14 (CP)—Sweeping constitutional reforms are in the offing for Greece today.

As the country settled into the groove of normalcy after 11 revolt-ridden days, the government announced it plans to immediately dissolve political organizations regarded as subversive, "purify" the civic service and probably hold new elections for a national assembly to carry out broad revision of the constitution.

Abolition of the Senate, with consent of the people, and "reinforcement" of the chief executive's powers are also envisaged by the cabinet of Premier Panagiotis Tsaldaris.

GOVERNMENT INTERVENES

London, March 14 (CP Cable)—The Government today confirmed that it had intervened to balk the "fall clause" in the 1935 contract between Timber Distributors Limited and Russian exporters, a clause that was annulled in last year's contract after Canadian protest.

George and Clarence bosom pals

THE closest friend in the early life of Prince George was his brother, Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence, heir to the throne.

The two young men, greatly different in temperament, nevertheless were true companions.

Vigorous, active, always alert and quick-witted, Prince George's impetuosity was balanced and held in check by the calm sobriety of his elder brother, seventeen months his senior. Prince George worshipped his brother and had great respect for his judgment.

Both lads started school together and both went into the navy at the same time. As midshipmen they joined the H.M.S. Bacchante for a three-year cruise that took them more than 50,000 miles. They visited Canada, still holding the rank of midshipmen, in 1883.

To-day's picture is one of the few taken of the two brothers together. It shows Prince George (RIGHT) as a naval lieutenant, the Duke of Clarence in army uniform. The picture was taken in 1887, just five years before the untimely death of Prince Albert Victor, in January, 1892. His death perhaps played a part in changing history; certainly it changed suddenly the course of life for Prince George.

Seldom had anyon eallowed himself to think of George as King It was always Albert Victor. Now George was the rightful heir to the throne; in a few years must he be taught all that his brother had learned throughout the 27 years of his life.

Meanwhile life was very enjoyable to the two bosom brothers.

'BUCK' HULIN STARRED WHEN MADOC TIED

Third Game Necessary in Central League Finals

HENDERSON ABSENT

Quinn Leading Scorer For The Tweed Squad

Tweed, March 14 (Special) —A third game is necessary in the Central League play-offs by virtue of a 3-3 tie game played between Madoc and Tweed at the latter's arena on Monday night. The visitors were decidedly lucky to get off with a tie and it was the veteran Buck Hulin in the nets to whom should go a lion's share of the credit for the outcome. Hulin gave a masterly exhibition of how a goal-keeper should perform, having a momentary lapse when Alex Geraldi lifted a long drifter from centre ice which the goalie did not see until it struck the ice at his feet and bounced over his stick for a counter. He stopped plenty, that were labelled goals, when the puck carrier was on top of him by coming out to block shots. His clearing to his forwards at the blue line gave them a decided advantage on which they failed to capitalize as all their goals were scored by Embury, playing on the defence. The visitors were without the services of Henderson who is one of their stars. The other players were quite outclassed though Alexander showed to good advantage. For the locals Meraw worked hard and was all over the ice. Quinn was the leading marksman with two counters, while A. Geraldi secured the final goal in the third frame to tie the score, which remained unbroken.

Quinn's first goal was a masterpiece. He secured the puck following a face off at Madoc blue line, stick-handled his way through five Madoc players, drew Hulin to one side and slipped the puck into the net. It was a beautiful exhibition of stick-handling and drew well-merited applause.

Ice Heavy

The sticky ice made combination play impossible. Intercepted passes and overskating the puck were frequent. Eight penalties were handed out by Referees Watson and Rollins, Madoc drawing five.

From the drop of the puck in the first frame Meraw, Maguire and Quinn went right in to beat Hulin who emerged from successive scrambles with flying colors. West who rushed frequently failed to get close in. Embury secured the first marker when Thompson was slow in clearing, getting his own rebound to bat the puck into the goal. Quinn missed Meraw's pass but followed the next face-off with his beautiful goal. Lafountaine drew the first penalty for upsetting Armstrong. Embury secured his second goal when he lifted a high shot at Thompson. It looked as if it would go well over the goalies head and as he ducked the shot it dropped suddenly and lodged in the goal behind him. Akey carried a chip on his shoulder and was mixing things with all and sundry but did not draw the displeasure of the referees.

Turn on Pressure

Embury made the count three to one for the visitors, when he scored their final goal half way through the second period. Tweed turned on the pressure, when West was sent to the penalty box for upsetting Quinn and Hulin was forced to call on all his reserves to keep the locals from piling up an imposing score. To open the final frame Quinn scored on a pass from Meraw to make the count three to two. Clark who showed improved form over his performances last year with the locals, and Bell were sent off for mixing things. The former drew his second penalty shortly after his return to be followed by Akey. The locals got only one counter during their advantage in man-power in A. Geraldi's long shot which eluded Hulin. The former drew a penalty for a trip but no damage was done during his absence. Shanque and Bell were effective for the locals. Maguire failed to show the form of which he is capable as he appeared entirely indifferent to the outcome of the struggle. Referees: J. Watson, Madoc; B. Rollins, Tweed.

Madoc: Goal Hulin; defence West and Embury; centre, Keller; wings Akey and Alexander. Subs. Clark, Ross and Armstrong.

Tweed: Goal Thompson; defence A. Geraldi and Lafountaine; centre Maguire; wings Quinn and Meraw; Subs. G. Geraldi, Bell Shanque and Rupert.

At the Training Grounds

(By Alan Gould, Associated Press Sports Editor)

Bradenton, Fla., March 14 (AP)—St. Louis Cardinals have a reputation for being one of the hardest-boiled clubs in baseball but they act more like a squad of happy, well-paid athletes this spring than the rough and rugged band that swarmed to the top of the heap last fall.

They have turned up a sensational new centre-fielder in Terry Moore. The second line of defence probably will be stronger with Carley Gelbert making an infield comeback.

All of which has developed a tendency toward over-confidence Manager Frankie Frisch is doing his utmost to combat Frisch is working his team harder than any outfit this observer has seen in Florida.. There are two workouts daily.

"This team must realize it cannot win this year on its reputation," says Frisch. "As a matter of fact we were lucky last season. It will be a battle all the way for us again."

Frisch thinks his club will be stronger, perhaps steadier but candidly fears the Giants. He rates Bill Terry's club at least a full notch about any other.

Dizzy Dean is more confident the Cardinals will repeat than he is of his own ability to touch 30 victories again, He admits he will be lucky to collect 25 and figures the aggregate output for the famous brother act as "40 or more."

The Deans, unless they suffer a severe reaction, should combine with Bill Walker, Bill Hallahan and Pat Malone, newly acquired from the Cubs, to give the club all the first class pitching it needs.

NOT PAYABLE TILL OCT. 31

Windsor, Ont., March 14—(CP)—Monies accruing to the municipalities in Ontario from profits derived by the Government from the sale of beer and wine will not be payable until the end of the fiscal year, Oct. 31, acting Mayor Oscar Fleming was advised today by E. G. Odette, Liquor Commissioner for the province.

Mr. Fleming had brought the matter up before the city council as he had been of the opinion the city would receive its share of the money monthly.

Allan Cup Playdowns

After 140 minutes of winless hockey in an effort to decide the Ontario Hockey Association "A" group champion, Toronto Stars went on a scoring spree last night and blanked Hamilton Tigers 5-0. It was a great win for the Stars but stretched out the series to four games, the next of which will be played in Hamilton Friday. Previous scores between the two teams were 0-0 and 1-1.

Barrie in Junior Finals

Barrie Colts won their way into the O.H.A. Junior "B" final by taking a two-game series from Peterboro 9-7. Peterborough made it close, defeating the Colts 5-2 last night after dropping the first decision 7-2.

Ottawa Canadiens advanced to meet the Intermediate champions

(By The Canadian Press)

The thinning-out process in the ranks of Canada's senior and junior hockey stalwarts went forward today but it was still hard to pick favorites for the advance down the playdown trail.

One Provincial titleholder emerged from last night's engagements, when North Battleford took the Senior Saskatchewan Championship with a 6-1 victory over Weyburn.

North Battleford won the first game 3-1 and now meet Kimberley Dynamiters, Pacific Coast champions, or Edmonton Superiors Senior Alberta Champions.

Dynamiters defeated the Superiors 3-1 in their first Alberta-Coast encounters and play the second of their two-out-of-three series tonight.

Saskatoon Wesleys, who defeated Edmonton Canadiens 3-2 in the first of the Alberta-Saskatchewan junior playdown series, will move into Edmonton Friday for the second set-to. The Wesleys eliminated Vancouof the Ottawa and District League winning from Chesterville Maple Leafs 6-1. They lost the first game 7-4 but took the senior title on the round.

The junior series in the Ottawa and District loop went to Ottawa Rideaus who played a 4-4 tie with Brockville after winning the first game 6-3. Rideaus now meet the Maritime champions in the Eastern Canada junior semi-finals.

In the Maritimes, Moncton Reds took a long lead over Truro Bearcats for the seaside provinces title by winning 15-1. It was the first of a two game, total goals series, with the next game on Friday.

Verdun Maple Leafs defeated Chicoutimi 8-2 in a sudden death Quebec Junior Hockey Association semi-final and now meet Cranes, junior kings of Montreal for Quebec province title.

Belleville Baseball Association The Result of Amalgamation Of Two Organizations in City

Tribunal to be Appointed Will Control All Ball in City

A WISE MOVE

Assures Belleville of a Classy Senior Team in C.O.B.L.

An announcement of paramount importance to all sport fans and more especially baseball enthusiasts in Belleville and the surrounding district was made last night, when President Raymond Carr of the Belleville Nationals and President Arthur Young of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Athletic Club announced publicly, that those two organizations had amalgamated into one body that is to be known as the Belleville Baseball Association, an organization to sponsor and guide the destinies of all baseball activities in the city of Belleville. At a subsequent date a committee of interested citizens will be named whose duties it will be to head this new body and foster not only senior, intermediate and junior O. B. A. A. baseball in Belleville, but also materially assist sandlot baseball and the diamond game in general in the community.

Once the proposed group of citizens to guide local baseball activities, is named and have accepted office, all walks of life in the city will be requested to unite in assisting the elevation of baseball in Belleville. Citizens, business men, merchants, service clubs, industries and other organizations in the city will be publicly invited to attend all important executive meetings as the new association is a civic enterprise and requests the support of every Bellevillian.

At present the resources of senior, intermediate and junior baseball in the city have all been pooled and will be turned over by Mr. Young and Mr. Carr to the incoming tribunal, yet to be named. One of the paramount needs in Belleville is an organization, that would materially assist the minor baseball series and the younger and aspiring baseball players in the city was the idea, that prompted the backers of this important amalgamation.

Subsequent announcements relating to the personnel of the proposed group of men in the city to head the association will be made public tomorrow. In the meantime tentative plans towards the success of future baseball in all series is being carried out by three interested. The new executive to be named will later announce who all O. B. A. A. clubs in the city are to be sponsored by. This announcement was naturally received throughout the city with enthusiasm as it assures Belleville of better baseball in 1935 and subsequent years.

R.M.C. CADETS EASTERN CHAMPS OF BASKETBALL

Defeat Belleville "Y" in Sudden Death Game at Napanee 29-20

Royal Military College basketeers captured the E.O.B.A. intermediate cage title, when they downed the Belleville "Y" quintette 29 to 20 in a sudden death game played at Napanee last night. The winners qualified for the next round in the provincial basketball playdowns and will represent Eastern Ontario in the O.B.A. sectional play-offs. The game was quite rough throughout, both teams playing spirited ball and many personal contacts were observed.

Belleville opened the scoring and had a two-point lead as the first half ended 9-7 and there was little to choose between the two teams. Play opened up considerably after the ten-minute rest and R.M.C. tied the game up on McDonald's shot after four minutes. The winners out-played Belleville on defensive tactics, Sissons being particularly prominent.

Both teams checked closely in the first half and it was not until seven minutes of play that Cather started the scoring for Belleville on a nice field goal from the R.M.C. forward line and in two minutes Smith added another point on a free shot. Faulkner, Belleville centre, could not get the range and was held to one field goal.

Sterne, McDonald and Sisson were the best used by the Cadets while Scott and Wickerson turned in smart efforts for the "Y" aggregation from Belleville. Smith, Cather and Burley were seen at an advantage for the losers as was White. The R.M.C. squad notched seven points by virtue of foul shots, while the Belleville crew only added four scoring points to their credit through this medium. Burley was banished from the game by Referee Edwards for alleged charging, when in reality he fell over one of his own teammate's feet, while Ernie Smith had four technical fouls called on him to eliminate his services from the game early in the second half, both of these penalties proved costly to the local cause and assisted materially in their defeat. The work of Referee Johnnie Edwards of Queens was severely criticized by the Belleville team throughout.

The box score:

Belleville "Y"	G.	F.	Pts.
Smith, f.	2	1	5
Cather, g.	0	0	0
Faulkner, c.	1	0	2
White, g.	1	1	3

DAY BY DAY

In all probability the curtain on local hockey activities will be lowered permanently tonight at the Arena following the twin bill of Belleville and District hockey that is being played for the Burrows trophy. The draw made by the committee in charge brings Trenton and Grills' Garage together in the curtain raiser with the winner of this game clashing with Picton in the final game of the series after a 15 minute rest period. Trenton, owing to the fact that they won the Belleville City League, challenged Grills' Garage, holders of the district title, as did Picton. This set-up demanded, that two games must be played and owing to the uncertain weather conditions, those sponsoring the series decided to end the affair tonight. Doubtlessly tonight's dual hockey bill will terminate hockey activities in Belleville for the present season so naturally a goodly crowd will avail themselves of the opportunity of ushering out the winter pastime season.

Coach Les Shiels had his B.C.I. pucksters out for a workout at the Arena yesterday morning. The entire squad was on hand and laboured through an hour's stiff practice. Final arrangements were made yesterday and the draw announced for the playing of the Ontario division of Canadian Secondary Schools Hockey Association play-downs to open at Kingston tomorrow. On Friday night Ottawa High School of Commerce representing Eastern Ontario, will play Westdale Collegiate, representing Hamilton and Toronto District, while Chatham Vocational School representing C. O. S. S. A. will battle it out with Belleville Collegiate Institute, representing the C.O.S.S.A. The two ultimate winners of these two game series will meet Saturday night at Kingston for the provincial collegiate championship, with the two losers of Friday clashing in a consolation series.

When Coach Shiels' pucksters won from Tweed High School and then Owen Sound Collegiate defaulted to the local tri-colored squad it gave them the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association's hockey title for 1935 for the first time since 1931. As champions of C.O.S.S.A. the local squad were eligible to compete in the provincial interscholastic finals, as they did in 1930 and' 31. Incidently in both '30 and '31 the local "collegians" went right through to the finals, only to be eliminated in 1931 by the strong and packed Windsor C. I. outfit. Once again Coach Shiels believes, that he has a strong team of puck chasers and will leave for Kingston tomorrow morning high in spirits, and firmly believing that 1935 will see better results than the two previous years in the provincial interscholastic finals.

The announcement that the Belleville Nationals and the Stewart-Warner-Alemite A.C. had amalgamated or pooled resources in conjunction with all other baseball interests in Belleville to form what is to be known as the Belleville Baseball Association, was undoubtedly the most welcomed news heard by local lovers of the diamond game in many a moon. Especially, it might be pointed out, that the information of such a proposed organization is not only a boom to amateur baseball in Belleville, but undoubtedly the salvation of the game in relationship to the lower or minor series. With the repeated announcements of strengthened senior clubs throughout the province the setup in Belleville now assures the local fans of seeing their home team on a par with other and also materially assists the elevation of the summer pastime. With the announcement of the amalgamation and the formation an association to govern all baseball in Belleville a number of so-called imports who took it upon themselves to migrate to town and grace the streets, beat a hasty retreat homewards last night. Although the governing body or baseball commission has not been named as yet, it is understood that senior, intermediate and junior O. B. A. A. teams will positively be fostered and sponsored under the new arrangement. (Maybe, that old fellow with the chew of tobacco, who proposed a set-up similar to what is now in vogue, knew what he was talking about last week.)

Promoter Clem Allen assured us today, that the Silver Gloves boxing tournament for Central Ontario would be staged in Belleville sometime during the first week in April with boxers from Peterboro, Port Hope, Cobourg, Airport, Napanee and Belleville all being invited to compete. It is estimated that the tournament will take the better part of two successive nights. While on the subject of boxing Promoter Allen is taking a string of S. W. A. A. mittsters to the Airport tonight to appear on an all-star card being presented at that point. Then again we understand, that the wrestling fans can look for the return of the heavyweight "grapplers" into Belleville before long.

Birthday greetings are in order to Jack Marshall, a hockey great of another day, born 58 years ago today at Point St. Charles, now part of Montreal. He played on seven Stanley Cup championship teams, starring with the famous "little men of iron" of the Montreal Wanderers, first Canadian team to declare itself out and out professional, and the Toronto Arenas. In his early days he also played basketball, soccer and rugby.

Thanks to the good work(?) of Referee Johnnie Edwards of Queen's the Belleville "Y" intermediates were actually rubbed out of E.O.B.A. competition when the R.M.C. "Cadets" assisted materially by Mr. Edwards' smelly decisions, trimmed the locals 29 to 20. Despite the fact that the score on paper may seem rather decisive there were many peculiar circumstances, that entered into the pastime. First and foremost Referee Edwards made sure, that Ernie Smith, star local marksman was eliminated from the game, when he banished the local star early in the second half. But, the laugh of the pastime was when Mrs. Edwards' little boy, Johnnie, kicked Burley out of the game for falling over Farley Faulkner's feet in an attempt to check Stern late in the last stanza. The local squad played stellar basketball throughout, but when they saw it was a clear case of beating a Kingston team and a Kingston referee naturally they became discouraged and the result speaks for itself. The locals returned to town high in praises insofar as the "Cadets" were concerned as they played a marvellous game defensively, but the score sheet shows, that the locals were far superior to the "Cadets" until after Smith and Burley were "kicked" out of the game.

The R.M.C. victory gives the "Cadets" the intermediate basketball championship of Eastern Ontario, they having a mighty smart and strong team of hoopsters and no credit of the victory can be dislodged from their individual door, but maybe the fact, that the Queen's and Kingston "Y" teams were 'rubbed out' of the picture prompted Referee Edwards to turn in his worst game of the year. Incidently the efforts of Referee Edwards will not assist his refereeing efforts in future years, especially in Belleville and then in Napanee, where the final game was played. Congratulations are due the R.M.C. "Cadets" upon their winning of the E.O.B.A. title and may they go far and win a provincial championship, is the desired wish of the local eliminated "Y" squad, who went down battling to the last ditch and were in no way disgraced.

Did you know that Italy is preparing to attack Sir Malcolm Campbell's automobile speed record with a 24-cylinder aero-engineer racer to attain a speed of 3?0 miles an hour, it was reported. Count Trossi, millionaire racing motorist, is to drive it.

Piles Go Quick

Under Dr. Leonhardt's Internal Method

Large numbers of sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have learned that quick and lasting relief can be accomplished with an internal medicine, when salves do not help and wish is to escape operation.

Bad circulation of the blood in the lower bowel causes piles. The veins are flabby, the bowel walls weak—the parts lifeless. To end Piles an internal medicine should be used to stimulate the circulation and help to heal the affected parts.

Dr. Leonhardt was one of the first to discover a real internal Pile remedy. He called his prescription HEM-ROID and prescribed it for large numbers of patients with a fine record of success and then decided every Pile sufferer should be able to get HEMROID tablets from their own druggist, with money-back if not joyfuly satisfied with the help one bottle gives.

So isn't it wise when other ways fail to go to J. S. McKeown, who says, "No matter what kind of Piles you have, one bottle of HEM-ROID tablets must show you the safe, clean way to get rid of your Pile misery or money-back.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL
"Man of Aran"
Prize Winning Feature Directed by Robert Flaherty

Once in a while a picture is filmed that is "in a class by itself" and such is Robert Flaherty's "Man of Aran" and currently playing at the Capitol Theatre.

It has none of the opulence of setting of the average motion picture. Its locale is one of the Aran Islands — a barren waste of rock off the west coast of Ireland. The sky, the sea and far horizon constitute the boundaries of Mr. Flaherty's three-dimensional studio. The characters are natives, none of whom has ever before faced a camera. There are occasional snatches of dialogue in rich Irish brogue and there is native Irish music. But the real accompaniment to the film is the wall of the wind and the symphonic surge of the sea.

However, though the theme of "Man of Aran" is the interminable struggle of the natives to wrest a livelihood from the sea; I do not want you to think it a gloomy picture. To quote from one of the New York critics: "Man of Aran" is a portrayal of a happy people, of smiling Irishmen, who scramble a gaunt livelihood from rocks and the sea and find great joy in their independence." As such it perhaps has a touch of inspiration for all of us. "Man of Aran" is an unusual film.

Feature number two "The Camels are Coming" is Jack Hulbert's funniest comedy, and in saying this we have in mind the many outstanding successes achieved in films by this famous comedian. "The Camels are Coming" breaks fresh ground by the fact of its locale being in Egypt, thereby giving the star the opportunity of creating entirely new situations and material, so that the film presents a Jack Hulbert characterization in which everybody is certain to revel.

In the film Jack is successively an airman, a dragoman and a sheik. It can be imagined what fun Jack, disguised as a dragoman provides, whilst conducting a party on a hectic tour of Egypt's ancient monuments, the while trying to locate the persons he suspects of being engaged in smuggling, a practice he as an airman is engaged to combat.

But Jack as a sheik is even funnier. He sets out for the headquarters of the smugglers at the head of a caravan consisting of twenty camels. He is disguised as a sheik, and his sweetheart is with him in the role of one of his wives. The remainder of the camels are manned by straw dummies, giving the caravan the appearance of being a formidable party—at a distance, of course. Then they encounter the real shiek and his band, and have to take refuge in a shattered fortress. Many incredible happenings ensue which all make for hearty laughter, whilst the climax is side-splitting to the extreme.

One of the most laughable incidents of the film is Jack's desert encounter with a camel. This beast should be the envy of every camel from Cairo to Badhdad and beyond, for he is a most accomplished film comedian, gaining a lot of laughs on his extremely ungainly appearance and his "conversation".

AT THE BELLE
"One More Spring"
Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter Triumph in New Romance

A notable screen event came to town yesterday with the arrival of the long awaited "One More Spring", at the Belle Theatre where it will be the feature attraction till Friday night, matinee daily.

The audience sat entranced as this gripping story of two brave young people, a penniless girl and a never-say-die adventurer, unfolded. Poighant and yet ironic, the misfortunes of the principles portrayed with a light deft touch that is admirable, "One More Spring" is heartily recommended to all picturegoers who seek the extraordinary in screen entertainment.

Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter, the stars who belong together, give unforgettable performances in this modern story. So fine-spun and delicate is the romance, so tense the drama, and so convincing their performances, that there can be no doubt of this picture lingering in the memory as a memorable experience.

It is the story of two brave souls who, when their last ray of hope has left them, meet at a park, and strike up a friendship. Winter has denuded the trees, and the grim inhospitality of the city encompass them. They decide to see it through platonically, and together with a penniless musician find shelter, a place to call home, in a toolhouse.

The group forms a fascinating little cosmos, self-sufficient yet related to the nearby world, to which they are destined to return with spring. The unfolding of the problems of the odd assortment of human jetsam, and the adventures that befall them, make "One More Spring" a picture to delight every heart.

This picture registers a new triumph for the two stars of "Paddy" and "Daddy Long Legs". High adventures bloom out of drabness. The courage of youth in the quest of romance is unforgettably portrayed.

Certainly justice has been done in the Fox Film picture to the charming and brilliant best-seller by Robert Nathan from which it was adapted. The Gossamer romance, the emotional complications, unfold with moving sincerity. This romance has its roots in the earth and its branches in the clouds. It glorifies the limitless joy of living.

Ably supporting the principals are Walter King, as the musician who dreams of genius, Jane Darwell as a motherly scrub-woman, Grant Mitchell, as the humbled banker, Roger Imhof, Rosemary Ames, John Qualen and Nick Foran. And last but not least in this array of talent is Stepin Fetchit whose slow-motion lazy bones antics relieve with comedy this engrossing romance.

The enjoyment of the feature offering is enhanced with the exhibition of a clever comedy creation in color entitled "Hey, Hey, Fever", all new picture of the Dionne quintuplets, unquestionably one of the cutest and most interesting pictures seen on a local screen in some time and "Hollywood Movie Parade".

Sport Writers Give All-Star Machinery Overhauling, Pick '35 National Hockey Loop Team

Closest Contest is For Position of Goal on First Team

LINE INTACT

Boucher, Conacher And Jackson Make it Easily

(By Elmer Dulmage)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 14.—(CP) —New "Big" names and just a scattering of the old favorites, rugged fighters who won't be pushed out, decorated 1935's National Hockey League All-Star teams today after sports writers had finished indulging themselves by toppling idols of long standing and smashing what almost amounted to traditions.

Here and there the newspaper critics, voting in the fifth annual Canadian Press Poll found themselves in agreement. They were agreed, for instance, that several old-timers, giants who have dominated the hockey scene for a decade or more, had to abdicate. The trouble was picking their successors.

The consensus of 33 ballots lined up the All-Stars this way:

Not All Young Stars

Not by any means is it a layout of young stars, although the selection marks the All-Star debut of Lanky Lorne Chabot, Poker-face Black Hawk custodian and Earl Seibert, the best young defenceman to reach the National League in the last five or six years.

Nor is it a representative gathering of veterans—not with King Clancy, Ching Johnson and Bill Cook missing for the first time since the All-Star poll was inaugurated in 1931. Just twelve months ago Clancy and Lionel Conacher were swept by commanding majorities into first-team defence posts. They didn't figure this year.

The writers gave the All-Star machinery an almost complete overhauling, even if they did it with a minimum of agreement. Leaving Toronto's great wingmen, Charlie Conacher and Harvey Jackson, on either side of Frankie Boucher of New York Rangers for the second straight year, they got down to business on the Alternate line-up.

Marvin (Cyclone) Wentworth of Montreal Maroons, Art Coulter of Chicago, Ralph (Cooney) Weiland of Detroit Red Wings and Dit Clapper of Boston Bruins had never been given all-star rating before.

Only Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, Bruin goaltender and Aurel Joliat, wiry little Montreal Canadien left winger, were returned—and it was close for both of them.

Close For Goal

But by far the closest contest was for goal. Last spring Charlie Gardiner, Chicago's curly-headed netman, was not only the toast of the town, that was on the point of winning the Stanley Cup for the first time, but was the greatest goaltender of his day. The Sport Writers were nearly unanimous in naming him for the All-Star team.

With Gardiner taken by death soon after his greatest triumph, the National League was left without a dominant figure in the nets. Thompson, Chabot, Roy Worters of New York Americans, Alex Connell of Montreal Maroons, George Hainsworth of Toronto—all were topnotchers without being supermen.

So the race for goal developed into a close struggle. Chabot won by a narrow margin over Thompson, with Worters and Connell a step behind. Chicago, decided the Writers, is still getting high-class last-guard protection from the Veteran Chabot, who started his major league career with New York Rangers after quitting Port Arthur Senior, Allan Cup Champions, in 1927.

Out of a possible 33 first-team votes Chabot and Thompson each received eight. Worters got seven, Connell five, Hainsworth three and Wilf Cude of Canadiens and Dave Kerr of Rangers one each. Chabot won his place by having a majority of second-team ballots—seven to Thompson's five.

Show a Comeback

The comeback of Boston's Eddie Shore and the first All-Star appearance of Seibert were only two of three features of the defence balloting. The other was the circuit-wide support for the youth Coulter, who played third-fiddle on the Black Hawks a year ago to Lionel Conacher and Roger Jenkins.

The husky Winnipeg boy had enough votes to win him either of the second-team defence posts, and almost enough to keep Seibert off the first team. Wentworth won the other second defence job with King Clancy of Toronto and Scotty Bowman of Detroit his closest challengers.

Shore, whose long suspension arising out of the Ace Bailey incident kept him off the first team in 1934 after three straight successes, captured the right defence berth with ease, obtaining 18 ballots. Five others called the blonde Edmonton wheat-farmer for left defence.

On the other hand Seibert secured only 10 first-team votes for left defence against seven for Coulter. Ebbie Goodfellow of Detroit got four and Happy Day of Toronto, three. Both Seibert and Coulter were given four votes for right defence.

Forward Line Intact

The selectors had no difficulty returning the Conacher-Boucher-Jackson forward line intact for the second straight year and electing Lester Patrick of Rangers as coach of the All-Star team for the fifth consecutive time. Patrick was the first coach honored by the Writers in this pool, Dick Irvin, Toronto coach, has always been named to lead the second team and the grey-headed former Reginan also was sent back.

Jackson was a unanimous choice—all 33 ballots called him for left wing on the First Team. Only one ballot neglected Conacher for right wing, placing him on the Second Team. Boucher, King of Centre men for the third straight year, received 22 First Team votes to clearly establish a lead over Weiland.

Weiland's Second Team margin also was decisive. The Red Wing forward-li e general obtained six First Team votes and nine for the Second Team.

Hundreds are reported to have been killed by Cuban forces as Mendietta instituted iron-hand measures under martial law to break a revolutionary general strike. Scenes reminiscent of the 1933 outbreak are being re-enacted. Photo at TOP shows the flag of revolt raised from an improvised "blockhouse" in the Punta at Havana. Operas of Gilbert and Sullivan Gain In Popularity Even After 60 Years

By Central Press Canadian

Chicago, March 14— The famous D'Oyly Carte Opera Company of the Savoy Theatre, London celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of "The Mikado," or "The Town of Titipu," in Chicago on March 14, in a brilliant setting and before a crowded and enthusiastic audience. This Japanese opera was first produced by the Savoyards, of that period, under the direction of Richard D'Oyly Carte and under the personal supervision of W. S. Gilbert and Arthur Sullivan, at the Savoy Theatre, London, on the evening of March 14, 188.5 and fifty years later with the present Savoyards it is celebrating a notable birthday under auspicious circumstances here.

Mr. Richard Collet, personal representative of Mr. Rupert D'Oyly Carte, the surviving son of Richard came from London with a party of distinguished persons to attend the fiftieth anniversary jubilee performance at the Erlanger.

Since its first performance, "The Mikado"—most popular of all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas— has been played in every country in the world and in every conceivable tongue.

The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, which for over half a century has been presenting the works of Sir. W. S. Gilbert and Sir Arthur Sullivan, is the most unique amusement institution in theatrical history. "The Savoyards" is a term applied to artists who have been associated with this organization at the Savoy Theatre, London.

Here at this theatre, built in 1881 expressly as the home of Gilbert & Sullivan operas, the works of these collaborators have been performed exactly in accordance with the original stage directions of the creators.

Sir William Schwenk Gilbert and Sir Arthur Seymour Sullivan met first in 1871. No less a songsmith than Frederick Clay, composer of "I'll Sing Thee Songs of Araby," brought them together. But it's a fact that nothing came of their meeting until Richard D'Oyly Carte reintroduced them four years later. In the case of all three, there had been a goodly period of preparation.

It came about this way; O'Oyly Carte was manager of Selma Lolaro, a delicious diva who was currently to be seen and heard in Offenbach's "La Perichole" at London Royalty Theatre.

Wanting a curtain raiser—want-day—almost sixty years later.

ing it in the worst possible way—Gilbert was asked to supply the libretto, basing it on a short sketch he had contributed—nine or ten years before to a weekly funny paper, known as "Fun." "Trial by Jury" was the result.

Now an Institution

French and funny, "Trial by Jury" took London by storm on a March night in 1875 at the Royalty Theatre. Tremendous success that it was, nobody saw the possibility of more work of the same kind so unerringly as Richard D'Oyly Carte, who straightway formed an opera company to concentrate on the combined work of Gilbert and Sullivan and no others. The first production was "The Sorcerer," disclosed at the Opera Comique in November, 1887.

Yet, optimistic and far-sighted as he was not even Richard D'Oyly Carte foresaw that the combination would last until all but a dozen operas had been produced during the nineteen years to follow — the years beginning with 1877, ending with 1896.

Nor did any of the three—Gilbert, Sullivan and D'Oyly Carte, who were equal partners—imagine that the Gilbert and Sullivan operas would be a living force as it is today—

Grand Opera Sung In Jail Cell Block

Chatham, Ont, March 13—(CP)—Burly policemen, busy clerks and serious-faced court officials paused in their work today when silvery tenor tones interpreting some of the most famous operas came from one of the cell blocks in the police station.

The programme was varied with the crooning of a few popular songs.

The singer was Ernest Cook, 28, no fixed address who was arrested and remanded on a charge of vagrancy—apparently a modern wandering minstrel. He is a native of Wales and he was picked up for begging. Those who heard him vocalize in his cell had loud praise for his voice.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

"Some bad, some good?" Faith suggested, glimmering beside him in the velvety shadows. "Do you remember that day on your penthouse terrace when you told me your philosophy of life?" She twisted her yellow scarf into a golden rope and flicked it at the moon. "I'm beginning to think you were right," she said with deliberate cynicism. "Nothing is real. Nothing lasts. Fairy tales never come true. And if they don't—what's the use?"

Hunter took her suddenly by the shoulders, his hands like steel clamping in. "So that's what I've done to you," he said in a low, bitter voice. "Taught you my own rotten philosophy."

Faith looked up at him, her grey eyes wide and clear in the moonlight. "So you admit it's rotten? I hoped you would, Hunter." She laughed with a catch to her breath. "Well, I've got a brand new one for both of us. I'll tell you about it—tomorrow."

He let go of her, and turned away. "I'm too old to learn anything new," he said moodily.

"Don't be a silly." Faith felt positively gay and lighthearted as she walked along, three steps to one of his strides. He was sick of the old life, bored with Gertrude. He would listen to her.

Her glance strayed across the terrace to where a couple stood half dipped in shadows. There was something intense, almost furtive in their pose. As they parted, they moved under the pale beam of a street lamp. Faith's heart skipped a beat. She told herself she must be mistaken, but she could almost have sworn the woman was Gertrude Stevens, and the man Roger Welsh!

In any case, Gertrude wasn't where they had left her, in the Grand Salle. "She's furious, my dear," Beatrice Dawtrey confided to Faith. "She thought she had Hunter tied to the mast before you turned up. And I'm so glad you're spoiling her game, darling."

Faith dismissed unpleasant thoughts from her mind. The next morning sun poured on the square below her windows. An orchestra played on the terrace of the Cafe de Paris, across the way, where, in light frocks and flannels, charming people lounged, sipping cocktails. Everything was gay, and Faith looking at the turquoise blue of the sky, felt that nothing could go wrong in such a beautiful world.

Later in the morning, she and Hunter bent over the drawings of Paul's airplane motor. Paul had said: "You can't take the model, but Mr. Barclay can get a clear idea from these."

And Hunter had grasped the whole idea right away. Faith spread the drawings on the table of the private salon the Dawtreys had engaged for their guests. At that hour, there seemed no danger of interruption.

"I want your opinion on this thing," Faith had said very simply. "It's a new airplane motor a friend of mine in New York has invented." And she added—"Mr. Rider saw them, and thinks them very interesting." That was her only reference to Dan Rider. Hunter let it pass.

It apparently pleased Hunter to be consulted. There was a sparkle, a keenness to his blue eyes that Faith had never seen. It was a revelation to her to follow the swift play of his mind and imagination when he had something to work on.

"By Jove, this is good!" he exclaimed, his long finger tracing the lines of the cylinders. "Clever—that. Look here, Faith if he could get his motor out for—let's say——" He began figuring on a scrap of paper. Faith leaned over his shoulder, the pale tendrils of her hair brushing his smooth dark head.

"What are you two so absorbed in?" Gertrude's drawl sounded from the doorway.

Faith glanced around in dismay. What rotten luck that Gertrude should come in now!

Hunter rose, a shadow fretting across his brows. "Faith's showing me the invention of a friend of hers— rather a good thing, I should say." His tone was suddenly careless as if he didn't want to share his enthusiasm with anyone.

"Oh, do let me see." Gertrude pushed forward. She didn't look her best in the morning. That tropical brilliance of hers was a bit dulled by her day makeup.

Faith fell silent while Gertrude pretended to examine the drawings There was malice to her lazy smile when finally she turned around. "What a wonderful friend you are, Faith! Lucky inventor," she said playfuly. "Imagine lugging these things all the way over here to show Hunter. They'll need financing, won't they?"

Faith felt the blood drain from her cheeks. Hunter was looking at her with a sharpening of his features. "Well, that's one on me then." His laugh was mirthless. "If it's a question of financing the fellow, go as far as you like, Faith."

Faith's hands trembled as she rolled up the drawings. "It's more than that, Hunter." She tried to keep her voice steady. "But we'll talk about it some other time." And she went past them, out of the room.

For a moment, she thought Hunter was coming after her, but Gertrude's low voice caught him back.

If only it weren't for Gertrude! The woman's poison had got into his veins, Faith thought with despair. Gertrude worked on his weakness, his easy going nature. She brought out the very worst in him. She managed it so that Faith had no chance to get near him until the next day—the day before New Year's. And tangled in Faith's worry was a vague sense of impending evil, and a growing certainty that Roger was lurking somewhere in Monte Carlo, and in touch with Gertrude.

Faith stood poised on the steps of the Hotel de Paris that morning when Hunter joined her. Sunlight bathed them in its brilliance, shining on the white of Faith's sport suit, on the white of Hunter's flannels.

"It doesn't seem much like the 31st of December, does it?" Faith smiled up at him.

"Will you steal off or dinner with me tonight?" he asked abruptly.

"Why—yes, I will, Hunter." She didn't try to hide her pleased surprise. And then Beatrice Dawtrey and Gertrude came out on their way to the casino.

Gertrude was suspiciously gracious. She kept it up through a luncheon to which the Dawtrey's had invited a few friends from Cannes. They were all making gay plans for the evening. People with villas were giving parties.

"I've reserved a table at the Cafe de Paris," Beatrice Dawtrey informed them. "We can meet there before midnight if any of you want to go places first."

Gertrude turned to Faith. "I've been invited to quite a few parties. Want to come along?"

That was one way of keeping track of her, Faith thought and glanced at Hunter. He sat back in his chair looking bored and out of sorts. "Thanks," she said sweetly, "but I'm dining with Hunter." And it was a satisfaction to see the smile stiffen on Gertrude's scarlet lips.

There was storm now in the purple shadows of Gertrude's eyes as she rose with one of her slow sumptuous movements. "It sounds almost like an elopment," she drawled. "I hope you don't mind if Hunter drives me over to Nice first?"

Hunter poured himself another Scotch and soda. "Sorry, Gertrude," he said. "Don't believe I can make it this afternoon."

Several people at the table offered their cars. Faith sat on, her grey eyes brighter. Would Hunter have the spirit to stand out?

But before them all, Gertrude insisted. She reminded Hunter that he had promised some man in Nice to try out a speed boat. She grew so sharply insistent, that to avoid a scene, Hunter had to give in. Everyone there, felt there was some issue at stake.

On his way out, his paused back of Faith's chair, bending over her. "I'll be back between eight and nine," he said in a low voice that carried on apology and an appeal.

But Faith was annoyed. He had advertised himself again as Gertrude's property. Well, they would have it out tonight once and for all. She would ask him to sail back with her, and if he didn't——!

She sat dressed and waiting in her room at eight. She wore black tulle that misted and floated about her white skin. Snatches of music drifted in through her windows. One felt the ripple and stir of a gala night where everyone was going somewhere to celebrate.

At half past eight, the telephone bell rang. Faith jumped to answer it. But it wasn't Hunter. A voice that sounded like a servant's, informed her that Monsieur Barclay was waiting for her at the Villa Rose, and added directions that Faith jotted down mechanically. Monsieur Barclay hope that Madame would join him there for cocktails.

Faith's heart was heavy with disappointment. This was Gertrude's doing again. She had involved Hunter in some party. But it wasn't like him to be so inconsiderate. Expecting her to take a taxi at this hour and on such an evening.

Faith leaned back in the taxi and closed her eyes. The flowery air had no enchantment for her. She was proving her own weakness by meeting him, and obeying his cavalier summons.

The Villa Rose stood at the end of a winding driveway, among flowering vines and palms. There was a strange quiet about it in the starlight, a phantom look to its white facade. Faith glanced around for Hunter's car. Lights shone dimly through curtains of the lower windows.

She hesitated. The cars might be in the back or in a garage. Then the door opened, and when she saw a man in livery outlined against a brilliantly lit hall, she felt a little reassured.

"My husband told me to meet him here," she said. "Monsieur Barclay."

"Oui, Madame." The man stood back.

Sounds from a gramaphone drifted from a room beyond. Slowly, Faith followed the man. He flung open the door of a large front room decorated in oriental stuffs and ebony furniture. There was a cloying odor of incense in the air.

As the door closed on her, Faith turned with a bewildered expression.

Then she saw him, standing and smiling at her—Roger Welsh in a dinner jacket with a frosted cocktail shaker in his hand.

"I'm afraid this isn't the kind of party you thought it was," he said.

Everything went black before Faith.

THE ESCAPE

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

"I haven't any smelling salts," Roger mocked. "Will a cocktail do?" And he tinkled the shaker.

Faith had rallied from her faintness, but she was deathly pale. For a moment, she couldn't speak. Her beautiful grey eyes stared with horror at this man she feared and despised. "You must be crazy," she said at last. "You can't do this sort of thing. My husband——" But at thought of Hunter who had failed her this night, her voice died away.

Roger laughed, and it wasn't a pleasant laugh. "I shouldn't worry about him if I were you."

Faith shook her head to clear it of the nightmare, and started for the door. Roger stepped in front of her as daintily as if he were dancing a tango. "You're not going— so soon, Mrs. Barclay." His voice was sly with glee, and his bold dark eyes slid approvingly from the pale gold of her hair to her short ermine coat, the billowing ruffles of her black tulle skirt.

She couldn't get out that door, Faith thought with growing panic. If she tried to force her way past him, he might take hold of her. The touch of the creature would be worse than his eyes.

"What do you want?" she asked in a strained voice.

"Your company, Beautiful. That's all, I promise you." Roger smiled hatefully.

"Then what—?" Faith bit her lip, glancing around the room. If there were any other doors, they were masked behind oriental hangings.

Roger turned the key in the door. His narrow shiny feet moved straightly on the thick carpet as he went back to the cocktail tray. "A little precaution," he said, slipping the key in his pocket. "You're quite safe from me." With exaggerated elegance, he poured himself a drink. "I'm off you society dames," he sneered, "except in matters of business."

"Business?" Faith echoed dully. Her mind flew back to Therese de Luze with a sense almost of relief. He was up to his old game of blackmail. She fumbled in her bag. "I've only got about a thousand francs"

A dull red crept into Roger's sallow face. "You owe me more than that," he said coming toward her. "You ran out on me once in New York." His eyes were shiny slits throught which he peered with all the pent-up venom of his hate. "You lost me 50,000 francs and nearly got me arrested in Paris."

Faith backed away with loathing. "I wish they'd horsewhipped you."

"No it isn't money," Roger went on softly as if he hadn't heard her. "I'd have done this tonight for no money at all. I told you once I never forgot old scores."

"Done what?" Faith cried sharply, and dim ugly things at the back of her mind took shape. How had he known when and where to get her? Why had he used Hunter's name to bring her here? Gertrude was at the bottom of this. "Why are you keeping me here?" she demanded.

TARZAN THE UNTAMED

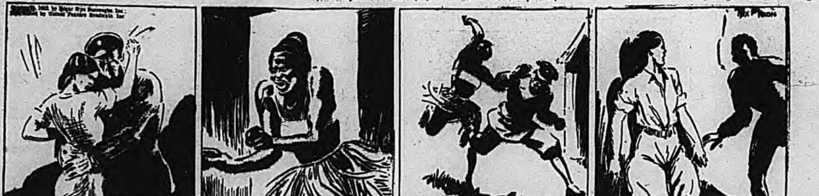
By Edgar Rice Burroughs



With clenched fists Olga tried to protect herself and drive Usanga away. And as the huge native struggled to capture the girl, the warrior he had kicked out of the hut made his staggering way to the hut occupied by Naratu.

Just as Usanga roughly seized Olga again, there burst into the hut a raging demon of jealousy: Naratu had come. Kicking, scratching, biting and striking, she routed the terrified Usanga in short order. She was bent on vengeance.

Naratu wanted only to inflict punishment upon her unfaithful lord and master. She quite forgot the object of his infatuation. Olga heard her screaming down the village street, hot on Usanga's heels. But she knew that tomorrow would be different.

Naratu would come back and take out on Olga the full measure of her jealous hatred. They had gone but a few minutes when the warrior guard returned. "Call out now for Usanga," he sneered. "Only he can halt me and he will not return—

Little Benny's Note Book

I was around at the firehouse tawking to Mr. Riley the hooken ladder driver, and I said, Wich do you mind the werst, Mr. Riley, snow or rain when you have to fite a fire?

They both get in your eeys, but snow is the werst when it comes down like it did the time of the Big Blizzerd, Mr. Riley said. The drifts was 20 feet high and every fire plug in town was berried so deep it took a whole day to locate them and dig them out, and of course that had to be the very day of the big fire in the match werks, he said, and I said, G, that must of been a good one.

If you mean a bad one, it was, Mr. Riley said. When a match werks goes up it goes up quick and there's no time to dig out fire plugs if you want to put it out before it goes out by itself from sheer overwerk, he said, and I said, Well gosh, what did you do?

I had an ideer, and if I do say so myself, it was a brilliant one for that kind of weather when your very thawts freeze before you get them half thawt, Mr. Riley said. The time of day happened to be just 5 in the afternoon when every boy in town was listening in on the radio to the Daredevil Dercum serial. So what I did was to call up the broadcasting station and have them slip in an announcement that a big free snowball fite was taking place in the scene of the fire and that the mayor had ordered all the cops not to interfeer. Well sir, in less than a quarter of an hour there was 5000 boys and about a thousand tomboys on the scene, and we divided them up in 2 even armies on opposite sides of the fire and told them to shoot away at each other, but we placed them so cleverly that all those millions of snowballs fell plump into the fire and put it out before a Chinaman could say Jack Robinsion in Russian, Mr. Riley said.

Gosh, good nite, and Mr. Riley said, Good nite to you, your supper must be about ready.

Meening the end of the subjeck.

PRINCE EDWARD COUPLE CELEBRATE

heartily, as chairs were produced.

"Let me see—seventy-two years ago—well the day was pretty much as it is today. There was little snow on the ground and it was fairly warm. It doesn't seem so very long ago either," Mrs. Mabee recalled, as the question was put.

Brisk, is the word most descriptive of Mrs. Mabee. Still able to thread a fine needle with ease, and do most of the family sewing as a matter of course, her eyesight is good and she wears only the common-lensed spectacles. Hearty, is the word most descriptive of her 93-year-old husband. Both have the mental alertness and activity of a pair a score of years their junior.

U. E. Loyalists

Mrs. Mabee was born, the daughter of Mr. Isaac Huyck and Jane Miller, near Point Petre, Prince Edward County. She was one of twelve children. "One of the in-between ones", she told her interviewers. Her claim to being one of the oldest families in this section is amply borne out by the fact that her grandfather and grandmother lie buried in the little churchyard of the White Chapel, Picton. They had been one of the original United Empire Loyalists who had entered this section and cleared the land. While she was quite young the present Mrs. Mabee moved with her family to Shannonville. It was here that she attended public school, taught, she remembers, by a Mr. Russell.

Mr. Mabee is also of old pioneer stock. Born two miles below Cherry Valley, he was a son of Henry Mabee, who was also born in the same house as his son. Mr. Mabee's grandfather and grandmother were original German pioneers who had settled first in the United States near the border but later following the outbreak of the Revolutionary War came to Canada where they settled in the lower Bay of Quinte region and were among the first to clear that section. One sister, Mrs. Mary Cummings the only remaining member of the family resides at present at Halloway.

Lived in New York

Soon after their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Mabee journeyed to New York where they resided for a few years, but at the outbreak of the Civil War in that Country, returned to Canada and located at Woodrow's Corners, near Cherry Valley. Two years later they moved to Odessa, near Kingston, and continued residence there for a period of fifty-two years. Forty years of this was spent in a general store, which Mr. Mabee opened and nursed to success. The store was one of the early landmarks of that district. Mr. Mabee and Mrs. Mabee contributed largely to neighbourhood life of that section. For eighteen years he held the office of township clerk of Odessa. He became superintendent of the Odessa Sunday School and conducted these classes for many years. He joined the Odessa Freemasonry Lodge over fifty years ago and believes he is now the only surviving member. Mrs. Mabee loaned of her time to various neighborhood and village causes. Although his family for years before him had been known as strong Conservatives, Mr. Mabee confessed that he might be called "a staunch Liberal".

"Politics, however, years ago were pretty much like taxes, no one seemed to bother much about them. Perhaps we were too busy making a living to think much about either," pointed out Mr. Mabee. "Taxes, in particular, didn't bother us much then. It's a lot different now."

Recalls First Train

One of the events distinctly recalled by Mrs. Mabee was the passage of the first train over the Grand Trunk through this district to Montreal. It was bound from Toronto and was a record run of its day.

"I just don't recall the exact date but I know there was a great fuss all along the line when the train went through. It was hauled by an old wood-burner, and was one of the grandest sights. I was going to school in Shannonville then and the teacher gave us all the afternoon off to see it. I guess there was a crowd at every station waiting for it to go through."

Mr. Mabee nodded corroboration. "I saw the first train go west over that track. It was just a ballast train and they were using it to build some of the stretch of track west of Belleville. It was certainly an event."

The reason the happy couple went to New York soon after their marriage was because Mr. Mabee had been there before and knew the city.

"He went there when he joined the circus here", explained Mrs. Mabee.

"I guess that's right," agreed her husband with a chuckle. "I was only a kid then, but I ran away and joined the circus when it came through here. That circus had the only and the first hippopotamus were seen in Canada. People used to pay ten cents just to stand there and gape at it. I guess lots of them thought it couldn't be alive, or that it was a fake. Anyway, I saw plenty of it because I got a job with the outfit—it was VanAndberg's Circus—and I went all over the country with it. We finally landed in New York. I worked there for quite a while.

Bought Car in 1910

Up to about eight years ago Mr. Mabee, one of the oldest motorists in the section then, was a consistent automobile user. His experience also had dated long before the time many a present day chauffeur had learned to grip a wheel. The first car, a Ford, purchased by him was in 1910. At that time he performed a feat that would leave many a modern day mechanically inclined man gasping. The first car he ever entered he drove from the factory at Windsor, Ontario, to Odessa, even though he had never touched a steering wheel before.

"I just went up to Windsor that day with the idea in mind of getting a car. I'd had a few rides in one or two, but I never had a chance to get behind the wheel", he continued with another dry chuckle.

"After I bought the car I told the salesman I didn't know how to drive it, but to back it out and I'd try. He didn't want to give me the car even though I had paid for it. He said I should at least take a few lessons before I started out when he found where I was going."

"Just show me what those levers and things are and I'll get home all right, I told him. Well, after he'd hitched and squirmed a little over the fact that he might lose a sale if he didn't, he consented. I got in. He went over the gears and levers once with me, then started it up. I had a little trouble at first, but after a mile or so I was going along good. That was one of your old 1910 Fords, and the roads then weren't like they are now." Since then Mr. Mabee has maintained his reputation of being a good driver although he has not driven a car for ten years. He has never had a serious accident with a car.

Prince Edward County and the country around back when he was a boy wasn't like it is now. There was wood in plenty, and it became necessary for the farmer to burn it on his land to get rid of it! Good fishing was found in the streams and good hunting in the woods. People rather enjoyed the rougher mode of living more than the present day modern comforts.

Cookstove a Novelty

Cookstoves when her father got his were a novelty in the southern part of the county, related Mrs. Mabee. Before that people used ovens and fire places. But when cookstoves came in, much of the work of cooking was simplified. The purchase of one of the first stoves in the neighborhood was a signal for several more sales after the neighbors had examined the first one. "We had good meals in those days, and I haven't forgotten how to cook yet", added Mrs. Mabee in sprightly fashion.

Advanced age has had little effect on the spirits or the habits of either of the grand old couple. Still taking keen delight in the work, Mrs. Mabee assists in the every day household tasks and is fond of sewing and knitting. Much of the time is spent outdoors by Mr. Mabee at little chores when the weather is favorable. When not otherwise occupied both find much pleasure in being able to sit together in the front room and pass the hours in pleasant and light conversation.

Son Coming Home

Today in Bloomfield where they reside in the white frame farm home with Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Peters and four happy and smiling little children of the latter, preparations are being made for the observance of the seventy-second anniversary of their marriage. One son of the happy couple, an only child, Mr. Stanley Mabee of Williamsport, Pennsylvania, is expected to arrive from the United States today to take part in the annual observance. From throughout the district neighbours and old friends will arrive and gather to pay their respects to the well known couple and to wish them many more happy returns of the day—a day which gives plenty of promise of being repeated for many more years to come.

CPR. FREIGHT FAILS TO CLEAR LINE

At a distance of about 1,000 yards, engineer Malcolm D. McTaggart of London, saw the freight headlight glaring through the falling snow. He applied his brakes but the passenger train, with only three cars on it, skidded into a terrific crash with the freight locomotive.

Engineer McTaggart, in his jump from the locomotive cab after he saw a crash could not be averted, incurred back injuries, and cuts to his hands. He was the most seriously injured of the 11.

Most of the other 10 injured were passengers in the third car of the train. They suffered shock and minor injuries from the impact.

They were:

R. A. Sloan, Winnipeg, nose injured.

Mrs. C. P. Seuhls, Guelph, Ont., fractured left leg.

Mrs. S. J. Smith, Detroit, right shoulder injured.

H. C. Seeley, Winnipeg, fractured knee cap.

E. K. Smith, North Bay, Ont., shock.

Arthur Trumble, Laurel, Ont., nose injured; cut and bruised.

S. W. Crarbe, London, Superintendent London Division C. P. R. thigh injuries.

Fireman Jumped

Fireman S. Comb also jumped from the engine of the passenger train at the same time as Engineer McTaggart. Comb rolled down a bank and was unhurt.

The freight, No. 47, was in charge of Engineer G. Blanchard and Conductor W. Allison.

Six of the injured were taken to a hospital at London. They were: McTaggart, R. A. Sloan, Mrs. Simmons, E. K. Smith, Mrs. Seuhls, and Richard Barrow.

Dr. W. H. Wood of Mount Brydges, District C.P.R. physician, was at the scene of the crash early and administered first aid to the injured. A train dispatched from London immediately after the collision brought additional physicians.

Railroad men today said the prompt brake work of Engineer McTaggart upon spotting the headlight of the freight prevented a disaster of major proportions.

None of the cars in No. 37, westbound local passenger train, or in the freight was overturned, but several were derailed. The collision was still under investigation today.

The two locomotives, as they came together, raised up and the pony trucks were driven back under the drive wheels. Both engines remained upright and moved little from the point of impact, tightly locked together with clouds of steam shrouding the front of the two trains.

So little did the trains move as they bumped, that the rear end brakeman at the end of his 75 freight car train did not know, that there had been an accident.

By midnight the auxiliary was making progress in the replacement of the engines and officials expressed the belief, that there would be little difficulty in having the road open this morning.

POST FLYING THRU STRATOSPHERE TO NEW YORK

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Washington, Pa., March 15 — (CP)—Washington & Jefferson College students are going to have an opportunity to learn the "quadrille"—dance of a bygone day—with the compliments of Henry Ford.

The motor maker's famous old-timers' orchestra will come to Washington from Dearborn, Mich. April 13, to furnish the music. A special instructor will come with the orchestra to teach the intricate steps of the dance and to preside over a formal quadrille, that night in the ballroom of a local hotel.

Millersburg, O. March 15 (CP) —If you watch the street gutters, you may find quite a bit of money. Ben Johnson does.

Last year Johnson found $96.83 and so far this year he's picked up another $7 during early morning tours along the town's principal streets.

Boston, March 15 (CP)—Here's a man who braved smoke and flame for a plate of beans.

He was eating in a lunchroom, when smoke came billowing up from the basement. An alarm was sounded and everyone evacuated the place save him. This elderly man kept munching at the heap of savory brown beans.

Firemen, battling the flames in the basement, periodically went to him and asked him, please, to leave. Finally he did, for the beans were gone.

Chicago, March 15 — (CP) — Motorists charged with speeding will be loaded in patrol wagons tomorrow and taken to the Cook County morgue. There they will view the bodies of the city's latest automobile accident victims. Judge Gutknecht of Traffic Court devised the grim inspection tour as a lesson in safety. All motorists charged with travelling more than 50 miles an hour have been ordered to attend.

. . . .

New York, March 15 (CP) — Raymond B. King, 34, was charged with having too many wives on a quintuplet basis.

"This fellow," said the District Attorney when King was arraigned in Kings County Court, "has six wives, a child by each of them, and as far as we can learn a divorce from only one of them."

The formal charge was bigamy, the plea was not guilty, and he was held in $5,000 bail.

LINDBERGH TRIAL COSTS ITEMIZED

Sheriff Asks For $10,400 To Cover Jurors Expenses

New York, March 15. — Some of reasons why the search for the Lindbergh kidnapper and the conviction of Bruno Richard Hauptmann for the crime cost the Federal Government, New Jersey, and New York City more than $1,200,000 all together, were shown yesterday here and in Trenton.

The bill for the trial, although not yet complete, was $130,106. It was the costliest criminal trial in the history of New Jersey, and far overshadowed the Halls-Hills trial, in which the final accounting was less than $50,000.

The eight handwriting experts who testified turned in demands totalling $46,861.15. The highest of these was that of Albert S. Osborn of Monclair. It was $12,000.

Next was that of his son, Albert D., who billed for $9,655. The others were Herbert J. Walter, Chicago, $4,856; Elbridge W. Stein, Montclair, $4,800; Harry E. Cassidy, Richmond, Va., $3,536; John F. Tyrrell, Milwaukee, $3,507 and Dr. Wilmer Souder, $69.15. Dr. Souder in the employ of the government, billed New Jersey for his expenses.

Stenographer Asked $21,000

John Van Blaroom of Newark, the official court stenographer, billed the State for $21,000. He had a large staff working in relays taking the record, run off by mimeograph and sold copies to press associations and newspapers.

Sheriff John H. Curtiss of Hunterdon County, turned in a bill for $10,418.71 as the costs of feeding and housing the jurors in the Union Hotel, of providing a special guard for the jury, for Hauptmann and for special bailiffs in the courtroom. Hunterdon County also asked $2,000 for damages to the court house, but it was disallowed. The food and hotel costs in the Sheriff's bill

MINIMUM WAGES BILL INTRODUCED BY HON.H. GUTHRIE

Record Volume of Business Put Through House in Session

ESTIMATES PASSED

Trade Treaty With France is Given Second Reading

Ottawa, March 15—(CP)—Minimum wages is the chief subject billed for consideration in the House of Commons today as another phase of the Government's Reform Programme advances towards law. Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, will pilot the Minimum Wage Bill through and preliminary to its introduction will ask the House to adopt a resolution in general terms.

Eight-Hour Day Bill Passed

The Post Office vote of $30,000,000 passed. The Minister, never known for loquaciousness, angered Mr. Veniot two or three times with his replies but harmony reigned most of the time. Once, Mr. Veniot reminded Conservatives that when he was Post-Master-General, his estimates were held up 21 days and he felt at times like retaliating.

The House went into high gear and established the session's record for rushing legislation when, in 22 minutes, the bill stipulating one day's rest in seven was given two readings, passed through committee stage and was on its way to the Senate for ratification.

$50,000 NARCOTIC SEIZED IN RAIDS

Nationwide Drive is Begun by Narcotic Squads in United States

New York, March 15.— (AP) — Striking simultaneously, Federal narcotic agents in New York City, Upper New York State and New Jersey staged several raids within 48 hours which resulted in 36 arrests and seizure of narcotics and equipment valued at $50,000.

All but seven of the prisoners, including one physician and several women, were seized in New York City.

Washington, March 15.—(AP) — Inaugurating another nation-wide roundup of narcotic law violators, Federal Agents today made the largest seizure in the history of the United States capital and arrested 12 persons.

The Treasury Department said its agents had seized 50 ounces of heroin, valued at $20,000, in the movement, heralded as the breaking up of a huge narcotic peddling ring.

Officials said the Washington seizures were part of a similar movement throughout the country but declined to give details until the campaign was actively under way.

The Washington seizure included several automobiles that had been confiscated. Eight of the twelve arrested here were said to be narcotic wholesalers.

Chicago, March 15.—(AP)—With thirty-five men and women already in custody, police and federal agents today were conducting one of the most extensive and carefully planned narcotics drives ever made in the city. The prisoners were known narcotic users or peddlers, the officers said.

TOMB OF PIGEONS

London, March 15.—(CP)—A curious little story has come to light relating to the decoration of the Nelson monument in Trafalgar Square for the Trafalgar centenary celebrations. The whole of the platform at the top of the column and just beneath the actual statue of Nelson, was covered with skeletons of pigeons. They evidently went up there to die. Eight tons of pigeon guano were removed in baskets, and nine hundredweight was found in top of Nelson's hat.

Reformatory Sentence Given

St. Catharines, Ont., March 15—(CP)—Harold C. Smith, convicted of manslaughter yesterday, was sentenced to two years less one day by Mr. Justice Henderson this afternoon. In passing sentence, Justice Henderson said he was unable to find any circumstances connected with the crime, that alleviate it in any degree.

"I do not think you stand in any better light if you were not drunk on that occasion," he added.

POTSHERDS DATE TO PROPHET'S DAY

Deciphering of Fragments Found in Palestine is Begun

Jerusalem, March 15—(CP-Palcor Agency)—Prof. Harry Torczyner, expert on semitic languages of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, said today 12 inscribed potsherds found several days ago at Tel Adduweir, ancient Lachish, by J. L. Starkey, head of the Wellcome Archaeological Research Expedition, date back definitely to the time of Jeremiah, 2,500 years ago.

Professor Torczyner said a remarkable aspect of the script was it appears to be written in ordinary ink, such as might be used today and the discovery is "the most valuable find ever made in the period of the first temple."

Dr. Starkey has entrusted the task of deciphering the important fragments to Professor Torczyner.

The latter stated the discovery of

Tried to Convert Gandhi Missionary Tells of Visits

Rev. J. F. Brabazon, Conducting Convention in Belleville Talks of Indian Rope Trick Which He Cannot Explain, He Tells Reporter

"Somehow I had the idea back in my mind when I called on this bespectacled and loin-clothed idol of millions that I might be able to make him see Christ a little as I saw Him myself. But I failed".

Thus confessed the Rev. J. F. Brabazon, back in Canada for a brief stay after almost sixteen years' continuous residence in India and the home town of Mahatma Gandhi. Rev. Mr. Brabazon is now acting superintendent of the Christian Missionary and Alliance of the central and eastern district, and is guest in Belleville for the next few day at the home of the Rev. Wm. McArthur, 193 West Moira street, pastor of the local Christian Alliance and Missionay Church.

Other missionaries to India had attempted to reach his heart and convert India's man of mystery to the Christian faith, but it remained for the Rev. Mr. Brabazon, whose acquaintance with Gandhi was a personal and close one to make a really serious attempt. But to all of them the Mahatma had what he believed to be an unanswerable statement.

Missionary Described

Sitting at ease in the study of the Rev. Mr. MacArthur, West Moira Street, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Brazazon, neatly dressed and with the appearance of a youthful, high-powered business executive of the modern business world, rather than that of a missionary to India, and deeply tanned by the wind and the sun of sixteen winters and summers of that torrid and snake-ridden country, told in a quiet and friendly little chat with a represen-

PRINCESS INGRID ENGAGED TO WED

Husband Will Be Prince Frederick of Denmark

Stockholm, Sweden, March 15 (AP)—The "love match" engagement of Princess Ingrid, second daughter of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf of Sweden and Crown Prince Frederik, of Denmark and Iceland, was officially announced today. The date for the wedding was not immediately announced.

Prince Frederik arrived from Copenhagen yesterday. Although rumors were widespread his engagement was imminent, court circles refused to confirm the reports "until the proper moment," even requesting Swedish newspapers not to drop any hint of the romantic tidings.

Outstanding in her charm and beauty in a family noted for many beautiful princesses, the golden-haired Ingrid is 24 years old. She inherits from her grandfather, King Gustav, a keen love of sports. Brought up with four brothers, she always has been fond of tennis, motoring, dancing and riding.

Frederick, at 36, is tall and handsome. He is a great-nephew of the late Queen Alexandra and a second cousin of the Prince of Wales.

The Crown Prince had been engaged in 1922 to Princess Olga of Greece, a sister of the Duchess of Kent, but the match was broken off after six months.

Hon.D.A.Croll Main Guardian Dionne Babes

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—Five little girls squirmed and tossed in the cots of their hospital-home at Callander today completely unaware they were about to become "special wards of His Majesty the King."

Action of Ontario's Legislators in this capital city far south of the log hospital in the northland was to place the babies, quintuplet daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne, under special guardianship of Minister of Welfare David A. Croll.

Third reading of the Government bill, designed to establish the guardianship was scheduled for today and after royal assent has been received the wardship will be a reality.

For two hours yesterday the Legislature discussed in committee the provisions of "The Dionne Quintuplet Guardianship Act of 1935" and despite opposition from the Conservative minority, the Liberal Government of Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn jammed the bill through without amendment.

VOTE NO MONEY FOR CHORLEY PARK AFTER OCTOBER 31

Announcement Made by Premier Hepburn in House

DEBATE CONTINUES

Public and Private Bills Down For Discussion Friday

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—The Throne Speech debate in the Provincial Legislature, a feature since late in February, will go into next week and today the Legislature turned to discussion of public and private bills.

Col. Kidd attacked the Government for making no reference in the Throne Speech of loyalty to the Cown or to the King's Silver Jubilee.

"I think this Province has made up its mind there was a motive in leaving out those remarks from the Throne Speech," he declared.

The Premier denied "the inference that I'm not as loyal to the King as the honorable gentleman who makes so much noise."

"Nobody pays any attention to that," he said after Speaker N. O. Hipel asked if there was any particular reference in the Kingston member's speech to which he objected.

"Some of your Orange Lodges might," he added, turning to Col. Kidd.

Aged 101 Years Splits Oak Logs

Toronto, March 15 (CP)—Splitting white oak logs for 12 hours a day was given by Louis Dionne, 101-year-old man passing through Toronto today on his way from Hayter, Alta., as the reason for his longevity.

"You try splitting wood that hard—six hours in the morning and six hours in the afternoon—with a broad axe and you may live to be as old as I am," Mr. Dionne said. "People today don't know what hard work is."

He said he would be 102 years old in June and denied he was related to the quintuplet family of Callander, Ont. Carrying only a shoe-box, a towel, a pair of cotton gloves and a red polka-dot bandana hankerchief, the aged man said he felt pretty spry although he travelled the 2,000-mile journey on the hard benches of a colonist car.

He is going to Sarnia to visit his "baby" daughter. He went to that city first in 1848 from "lower Canada" to take up a farm.

Mr. Dionne was born in Kamouraska County of a French father and an Irish mother.

Determined to Get Cut Back

New Toronto, Ont., March 15—(CP)—Determined to stay in the Provincial Relief building here until a 10 percent cut in relief allowances was restored, an array of unemployed sat around the offices today awaiting a representative from the government to hear their complaints.

Although the "passive resistance" seige was 20 hours old at noon and all business was disrupted in the relief office, no word of action by relief authorities was received.

Fresh volunteers arrived this morning to take the place of about 30, who kept an all-night vigil.

PRINCE OF WALES BUYS NEW PLANE

First Distance Flight By Way of Stratosphere At Height of Seven Miles

2,447 Mile Non-Stop Begun at Los Angeles Early Friday

350 MILES AN HOUR

Voyage Used as Test of Practicability of Regular Flights

Los Angeles, March 15 (CP) — Wiley Post, noted 'round the world flier, took off from Union Air Terminal at Burbank today on his scond c second attempt to span the continent in eight hours or less in a 2447 mile flight through the stratosphere to New York City.

The Oklahoma pilot waved "so long" to a group of sleepy-eyed well wishers at the field and roared away in his globe girdling plane, the "Winnie Mae."

Post's first cross country stratosphere dash several weeks ago ended abruptly, when he set his motor troubled ship down on the Mojave Desert less than an hour away from Los Angeles.

He expected today to travel through the less restricted regions of the upper air at a speed of around 350 miles an hour "or more" —something like six miles a minute.

Landing Gear Dropped

Post dropped the "Winnie Mae's" retractable landing gear as the ship left the ground, and will land on the plane's belly when he reaches Floyd Bennett Field in New York City.

The flier headed due east, pointing the blue nose of his ship abruptly upward to gain as quickly as possible the altitude he expects to keep throughout his trip. He will fly between 32,500 feet and 40,000 feet.

Post declared his flight is not primarily a speed dash. Rather he said, it was planned to demonstrate the feasibility of passenger air travel at faster speed through the upper regions of the sky.

3 SHOT IN PLOT TO KILL IBN SAUD

Arab Monarch Saved by Son Who Grapples With Leader

Mecca, Kingdom of Saudi-Arabia, March 15 (AP)—Three men said to be from Yemen, were shot and killed today while attempting authorities said, to assassinate King Ibn Saud. Police said the men, armed with daggers, attempted to stab the King but his bodyguards shot them down before they could reach the monarch.

The King, accompanied by his son, Emir Saud, was making his way around the Sacred Black Stone of Kaaba Inel Naram Mosque when the assassins approached.

Emir Saud himself grappled with the leader of the men and prevented him from reaching the King. The guards shot and killed the attacker and then turned their gunfire on his two companions as they tried to stab the Emir who was protecting his royal father.

Ib Saud, warlike ruler of Saudi Arabia, has incurred many enemies in the course of his turbulent career of consolidation of the warring factions in Arabia. He was a close associate of "Lawrence of Arabia" in the Great War which resulted in the formation of the Kingdom of the Hedjaz, re-named Saudi Arabia two years ago.

73 Below All-Time Low Accepted as Ontario Record

Toronto, March 15.—(CP) —Dr. John Patterson, chief of the Dominion Meteorological Service, announced today, the 73 degrees below temperature at Iroquois Falls, January 23, has been officially accepted as the all-time low mark for Ontario.

The figure has been in dispute officials hesitating to take the reading of Leon F. Kent, Government Recorder at Iroquois Falls, due to contrasting temperatures at nearby points.

Previous low mark in Ontario history was 72-below zero, recorded some years ago at Hornepayne in Northern Ontario.

"There probably was a pocket of intense cold air at Iroquois Falls, caused by very strong radiation," said Dr. Patterson. "From the observation of the Hydro lineman, this pocket was not lower than 20 feet in depth and a light wind could sweep out the cold air and give a temperature common to the surrounding district."

EX-SERVICE MEN NOT AFTER MONEY

All Expenditures to be Made Scientifically And Useful

Ottawa, March 15 (CP)—The present enquiry into the unemployment situation among ex-service men was not "another veterans ramp of racket," Brigadier General Alex. Ross, Dominion President of the Canadian Legion, told the Hyndman Commission today. It was merely an effort on the part of the organized veterans to secure a scientific study of conditions as they exist and to contribute to that study the experience and wisdom of the veteran body of Canada.

HON. J. D. MCGREGOR DIES IN WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Mar. 15 (CP)—Hon. J. D. McGregor, former Lieutenant-Governor of Manitoba, died here at noon today following two months illness. He had suffered an attack of pneumonia which complicated by severe heart trouble brought about his death.

Mr. McGregor was in his 75th year. He relinquished the office of Lieutenant-Governor last December.

From a small farm, near Portage La Prairie he introduced to this country what was to be the nucleus of one of the greatest herds of Aberdeen-Angus cattle on the North American continent. His holdings spread from a small farm to a ranch of 200,000 acres with a herd of 15,000 head of cattle.

He was unusually qualified for the part he was to play in the agricultural life of the west, possessing a keen mind and sound business experience. In 1912 and 1913 stock from his farms captured the grand championship at the Chicago International livestock show.

He was the first to introduce the growing of alfalfa on a large scale in the west.

CITY FREE FROM CONTAGIOUS DISEASE

Although numerous citizens are still suffering from minor complications following a recent mild contagion of influenza, the city today was given a clean bill of health by Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H.

Not a single case of contagious disease is officially reported. Although measle cases have reached a record level in Toronto, Belleville is completely free from the disease, stated Dr. Cronk.

BELIEVE RECORD IS SET BY EWE

A record for ewes is believed to be set by one owned by John S. McGuire, Crookston. Aged twelve years, the veteran ewe has given birth to thirty-two living lambs. She is now rearing her thirty-first and second lambs. One of her daughters gave birth to four lambs this spring. Many other daughters gave given birth to triplets.

TAPPING TREES NOT YET STARTED

Although sap is reported flowing in sugar bush groves throughout the section, so far there has been little actual tapping. The yield of sap this year will be just fair, it was stated today by one well known bush owner, although the quality is expected to be good. Given favorable weather syrup making operations will commence within the next week or so.

"SAP SNOW" FALLS OVER THIS DISTRICT

An old fashioned "sap snow" fell over the city and district early Friday morning covering the fields in the country and the roads and walks in the city with almost an inch of pure white covering. But the fall will be short lived. At ten o'clock this morning, due to rising temperature, the city streets were turned into a wet and slushy obstacle for goloshed pedestrians. Warmer weather is indicated by the weather man.

FLOCK OF DUCKS NEAR BAY BRIDGE

MAYOR G. O. TICE BACK ON THE JOB

Mayor Geo. O. Tice, confined to his home for the past twelve days through complications following an attack of influenza, took his first airing yesterday afternoon by walking to his office in the city hall. He was securely clothed and muffled against further chill en route. He arrived at the office in time to find his aldermanic assistant, Thos. Y. Wills, chairman of Finance and acting Mayor during his absence, hard at work on a sheaf of official correspondence.

"Well," greeted Alderman Wills as Mayor Tice strode in, "glad to see you around again."

"How do you like your job, Tommy?" questioned the Mayor.

"Well, at least it's a steady one", replied Alderman Wills.

Memoirs of Gen. Wm. Booth Mark Cadets' Holiness Service

Dialogue-Sermonette is Dramatically Presented

Memories of William Booth, the Army's founder, brought a deep influence over the congregation at the citadel last night when Cadet W. Shaver announced the founder's favorite holiness-song "Lord through the blood of the lamb who was slain, cleansing for me", just before prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Jas. Semple, president of the Belleville Ministerial Association who was present, and also spoke.

The service was announced as a holiness meeting to define the old-time Methodist and Army doctrine on Scriptural grounds of Christian Holiness. The quartette party song "Take Time to Be Holy" and the Citadel band, conducted by deputy-bandmaster Jack Green, played the selection, "The Saviour At the Door".

The chief feature of the meeting was a dialogue-sermonette dealing with questions on holiness. Cadet D. Church, incognito, arose in the audience and challenged the speaker to clear up some misgivings on the subject. He was brought to the platform and requested to make his enquiries which were as follows:

(1) What is Holiness?

(2) What is the relationship to sin, of three classes of people, (a) the unconverted; (b) the regenerated; (c) the fully sanctified.

(3) Why do many people disbelieve in holiness?

(4) Does the attainment of holiness necessitate effort on the part of man, and is it a gradual process?

(5) How can it be obtained?

An additional question was prompted from the congregation, "What is the difference between a faultless and a blameless life?"

These questions were fully answered by Captain Payne, Cadets Stewart, Randall, Jones, Kaill and Britten.

Nine seekers came forward to the altar for the attainment of this deeper superior state of spiritual life.

Christians of all communions have been invited to a great Bible witness service tonight, with the endorsement of the Belleville Ministerial Association.

The cadet students, accompanied by Adjutant A. W. Martin, paid a friendly visit to the Belleville Collegiate Institute this morning, and furnished musical numbers and an address by Captain E. S. Payne, during the first period, by kind permission of Principal P. C. MacLaurin.

Did you notice the window display of Army activities in Walker Hardware store today?

ONLY FOUR ON PUBLIC WORKS

With a total force of only four men working on the department of public works of the city today, the department set a new low level for men employed. Various routine jobs are engaging the attention of the men. Owing to the fact, that the roads and city have come through the winter in excellent shape due to the slow and gradual thaw of the ice and snow, little work has been necessary by the department.

Samuel Whittle, Bonar Law farm employee, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery, when arraigned before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. today. Owing to a suggested mental condition, Whittle was remanded in custody for one week, medical examination being ordered by His Worship. Whittle was removed to the County gaol.

The case arose following an unsuccessful attempt on the part of Whittle to alleged endeavour passing a worthless cheque for $62.50, he having forged his employer's name. Whittle admitted the offence in open court today. "This man is nearly illiterate and should be examined, I suggest," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., after examining the cheques, which had been forged by Whittle.

Two Prince Edward County youths pleaded guilty to charges of intoxication and were given until the 29th of the months to raise the necessary "ten and costs". The youths drove into town early last evening to attend the Picton-Belleville hockey game and in some mysterious manner became "slightly tipsy". When arrested by the local police they were trying, in vain, to start their motor car, police reports stated.

Five minor cases of various infractions of the Highwa yTraffic laws found the offenders pleading guilty and paying minimum fines under the act. Failure to produce individual operator's licences, not displaying the proper rear red light reflectors at night, reckless driving and other infractions of this law constituted the traffic docket. All fines were paid after the pleas of guilty had been accepted. A theft charge was enlarged until Monday's court.

THE DRAMA

The Young Thespians Present Their Regional Drama Entry at Collegiate

Last evening the Young Thespians the drama group which has entered plays in the Regional Drama Festival in Kingston for the past two years, presented "Lucrezia's Little Party," the one act play which will be their offering in the competition this season. This colorful play a clever travesty on the dinner parties for which this historical character was famous, was splendidly staged and acted and should compare favorably with the competing vehicles.

With the members of the cast, well chosen for the various roles and carefully training in dramatics for several years the result was a well balanced performance. Voice and stage presence show improvement and the study of stage mechanics has been responsible for much progress since the first undertakings of the group.

The costumes of the feminine players were designed by Miss MacPherson from period paintings and were made by the girls of the Vocational Department. The rich beauty of the growns and the authentic costumes of the men made a lovely picture of the scene.

The play as the name indicates concerns one of the Borgia entertainments for which the guests would like to send regrets, but dare not, and can only hope for the best as each succeeding course is presented. One guest brings her pet dog and if he refuses a morsel she excuses herself from partaking of the particular dish. Each in turn adroitly outwits the revenge of the hostess and her brother and the banquet ends in an unexpected way as the love potion compounded by Leonardo di Vinci is added, in error, to the wine by the serving man.

Miss Rose Lazier as Lucresia had the poise and bearing of the famed Duchess of Ferrara. The part of the gracious Isabelle d'Este was admirably taken by Barbara Parker while the charming Fiametta Strozi was portrayed by Nellie Maraskas. Miss Mary Forster as Tessa was a vivid figure.

The young men in the cast were equally well chosen and gave splendid performances. Douglas Frink was Cesare Borgia, the predominant figure in Italian life at that time and the ruthless character of Borgia was well brought out by the actor. Leonardo di Vinci was well portrayed by Harold Carruthers. He was the most important guest at the banquet and his fate was hanging in the balance on several occasions. Ridolpho Ridolpho (Douglas Newby) and Nicolo Machiavelli (Jim Moon) completed the dinner guests, and the performance of these young actors was in keeping with the high standard of the Young Thespians. Baldassare, the servant, was admirably done by Bill Logie. Rex Logie, who played the part of the dog, was a favourite with the audience. Under the direction of Miss Merry, the Young Thespians have achieved a standard of production which should take them far in the drama.

Two other one-act plays were staged. The first was "Half an Hour" by Barrie in which a runaway wife has her plans sharply changed by the death of the man with whom she planned to leave, and who returns to assume her duties of the evening without her arrangements being suspected. Miss Sylvia Tett was admirable as the wife around whom the action revolved and the other members of the cast gave fine performances. They were Joe Crichton as Lady Lillian's husband, Bert Frink as Hugh, Bill Nightingale as Dr. Brodie, Dave Bradford as Mr. Redding, Marguerite Aselstine as Mrs. Redding, Margaret Forster as Susie and Eugene Grills as Withers, the butler. Miss Billings very capably directed this play.

The second offering was "On Dartmoor" and this amusing satire shows the trick played on two young "modern" women who have ideas about the cruelty of prison life and who hide a supposed convict only to have him rob them. Miss Wellbanks and Miss Hudgins were directors and those taking part in the cast were: Lenore Ashley, Phyllis Wright, Muriel Armstrong, Dorothy Croft, Bill Syme, Dick Logie, Albert Mead, Ross Schryver, Fred Lee, Gerald Atyeo.

These plays revealed talented actors and actresses who should take their places in a few years in the major productions of the Collegiate.

During the evening the Collegiate Orchestra directed by George Forster and Ted Hall and Mr. Ross Hunter gave enjoyable selections.

Police News

Minor infractions of the law kept local police on their toes during the past 24 hours although nothing of a serious nature was actually reported by the department today. Local streets were free from motor accidents as were adjacent highways, all traffic officers claimed this morning. Eighteen transients slumbered peacefully in warm sleeping quarters in the cell block at the police station last night. The advent of spring-like weather finds transients in increased numbers once again taking to the open road, after a severe winter.

Frank Scott, 302 Dufferin Ave., reported to the police the loss of his bicycle late last night. Mr. Scott left his "bike" on the Market Square early in the evening, but upon returning for his mode of conveyance at 11.00 p.m. last night, the bicycle was nowhere to be seen. No signs or reports of the missing bike were reported at noon today.

The sale of local dog tags is slowly increasing in Belleville, there having been 132 dog taxes already paid to the police department. Last year over 600 dog tags were issued in the city, however. A few minor motor infractions were checked up by local and highway police during the past few days, summons to appear in the police court being issued in many instances.

VIMY PILGRIMAGE IN 1936 OUTLINED BY CAPT. C. NASH

Large Gathering of Veterans Held in Memorial Hall

PENSIONS DISCUSSED

Must Have Evidence of Service Before Going to Board

War veterans, who have been harboring ideas that the flat rate of $160 would see them through the Vimy Pilgrimage back to the battlefields of France and Belgium in 1936 are in for a sad disappointment, stated Captain Chas. Nash, Toronto, secretary of the Provincial Command of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, speaking to one of the largest gatherings of returned men of the city and district at Memorial Hall last evening.

"If you're a married man, don't contemplate the trip unless you have about four hundred dollars to spare," warned Captain Nash. "Even some single men will need that much to get through, alone," he intimated.

The occasion last evening was open night by the local branch of the Army and Navy veterans to all other units of the city and district. Every local unit was present, with a detachment of the Tweed branch also on hand. Guest speakers of the evening were Captain Nash and Captain K. V. Stratton, Toronto, past president of the Provincial Command.

Introduced by President James Walden of the local branch, who acted as chairman of the evening, Captain Nash in a witty and humorous address, mixed with hard commonsense, dealt with not only the Vimy Pilgrimage being sponsored and arranged by the Army and Navy Veterans, but also with pensions.

Must Present Evidence

"You can still get your pension; they're being adjusted every day. But you must have real evidence to present to the Pensions Committee of your war service and disabilities before anything can be done for you." he told his interested audience.

"It's been a long time since 1918 and a great many of you are failing in health. Perhaps this is due to war or old age. If you comrades think it is due to the service you gave at the front, then it behooves you to get busy and collect the evidence of this. You must link your disability with war service before you can get anywhere with your pensions. And this evidence must be complete, when you go in front of the Pensions Committee. If you have a clear cut case, then you will get your pension."

Captain Nash called attention to the fact that men who had not even tried before this are and have been getting their pensions lately. Most of those, who have failed in their attempt have failed in the very beginning that they did not collect sufficient evidence to present to the Board. At present in the office of the Provincial Command there are some 160 applications that have been pigeon-holed because the applicants have refused to bother about getting this." The men were sent away to get this evidence, but they never came back."

One other kind of pension, the War Veterans' Allowance was outlined.

"To get this you must show, that you are either over 60 years of age, or are permanently disabled, physically or mentally incapacitated for work, and permanently unemployable". pointed out Captain Nash. The pension was billed by the speaker as being a relief measure for returned men.

In turning to the Vimy Pilgrimage Captain Nash warned against any returned man believing he could go to England, France and Belgium and return on the tentatively set price of $160 for the trip. Clearly he pointed out, that if a man were married he must make provision for his being gone away from the family for the four weeks occupied by the trip.

"He must see, that they are fed, when he is gone. He must lose four weeks' work, unless he holds a civil service position or some other kind of a salaried one and is able to get off. He must have sufficient to spend on the boat and train en route. And he must have enough to see him through his meals and incidentals while overseas."

Cost Depends on Man

"The cost depends largely upon the man himself. Some men can have a good time on half what it costs the other one, but I would say that to do the job decently, one should have at least $350 or $400 and $500 wouldn't be too much as you may see."

One other consideration must be dealt with by the committee arranging the Pilgrimage, and that is the widows and mothers of those who have been left behind in the foreign graves. Captain Nash said, and drew sustained applause from the crowded hall. "We should see that they are able to cross there and view those graves, but the cost would be far more than if only the men went. Altogether different accommodations must be made."

Captain Nash at the conclusion of his address was heartily applauded for his clear and brief explanation of the two important questions.

In opening the meeting, President James Walden in a few brief remarks, welcomed those present and paid a sincere compliment for the large turnout.

Captain K. V. Stratton, Toronto, and past president of the Provincial Command, brought fraternal greetings from the home unit following his introduction by the local president. Belleville's large meeting last evening, was but one sign, that veterans all over Canada were sticking together more than ever before, and were having larger meetings everywhere. He had not been at a similar function in this city for eight years and the large turnout was one, which stood out in contrast, he added.

"We are on the right road; let us keep there. Follow the advice of your president. Let us demonstrate that we earn the loyal support and confidence of the outside public so freely given," urged Captain Stratton.

Entertainment Enjoyed

Hours of professional and impromptu entertainment followed the address of the principal speakers. Joining in as entertainers were the beret clad returned men themselves. Among those who contributed to the program were James Bankier, the city's well known tenor; Clare Patterson; Bruce Sills, who played both accordion and musical saw; Mr. Jack Greene, Salvation Army cornetist and Gold Medallist; Comrades Sidney Hector; "Billy" Edwards; Thomas Pritchard; Mr. Geo. Cornish and others. During the evening Prof. Morgan accompanied the entertainers and songsters on the piano. Also contributing were Comrade Fred Rawson, Comrade Lazenby acted as master of ceremonies.

Representing the various local units were:—Wm. Jacks, past president of the 2nd Battalion Club; Garn Dobbs, president of the 21st Club; Fred Wiggins, president of the Gunners' Club; President Jack Shepherd, president of the Imperials Club; Dave Bradford, president of the Canadian Legion; Sam Johnson, president of the Sergeants' Mess A.L.I. Also represented was the Tweed branch of the A.N.V.A. seven strong, headed by G. P. Bowty, president and J. F. Stokes, secretary.

TWEED LIBRARY 28 YEARS OLD

Total Number of Volumes Grows From 176 to 3,856

Tweed—Tweed Public Library has almost completed the twenty-eighth year of its existence, having been established on April 25th, 1906 as the result of a movement sponsored by the Women's Institute which was headed by Mrs. C. W. Huyck, the President. This organization appointed a committee which canvassed the community and obtained subscriptions totalling three hundred dollars which made it possible to begin a library on a small scale.

President—Rev. Jas. Binnie
Secretary—C. W. Huyck.
Treasurer—Frank Knight.

Board—Rev. Fr. Quinn, Rev. R. Burns, Rev. French, Mrs. A. McNair, Mrs. T. E. Wilson, Mrs. C. W. Huyck J. G. Frost, J. A. Armstrong, D. B. Taylor.

Of this Board, J. G. Frost is the only member who still resides in Tweed, although he is not a member of the present Board.

The Library, when opened to the public on July 20th, 1906, had a total of 176 volumes, which was increased to 391 volumes by the end of the year. During this period a total of 2561 books were read by subscribers. For three years the Library was in the corner store of Messrs O. C. Frost and Sons. In 1909 it was removed to a building owned by Mr. David Beatty (now owned by Mr. Fred Arber) where it has remained up to the present time. The number of volumes in the Library was rapidly increased by purchases and donations until in 1910 there were 1180 books in the Library. According to the annual report of 1934 the number of volumes had reached a total of 3856 books. The circulation of 1934 was 7858, a marked decrease from the "peak" year of 1928 when 10,065 books and magazines were borrowed.

In the year 1914 an attempt was made to establish the Library on the basis of a Free Library, but it was found impossible to bring this about and it has remained an Association Library supported and maintained by members' fees, donations, grants and proceeds from various projects undertaken by the Board. Owing to the difficulty of obtaining adequate funds, expenditures for new books has been necessarily curtailed during the past few years. During the year 1934 receipts from all sources totalled only $335.33. Of this amount, after paying expenses incident to the running of the Library, only $63 was available for the purchase of new books. In 1930, the receipts from all sources totalled $636.14, making it possible to add 163 new books as against 25 added in 1934.

Since its inception Tweed Public Library has had the following Presidents:

Rev. Jas. Binnie—1906-1912
P. P. Black—1913-1914
J. E. Johnston—1915-1918
C. S. Bootes—1919-1921
A. Cochrane—1922
Mrs. C. W. Huyck—1923-1924
T. E. Moffatt, B.A.—1925

The following Librarians have held office since 1906:

Mrs. T. E. Wilson—1906-1908
Mrs. J. G. Frost—1909-1910
Miss Edna Sherwin—1910
Mrs. J. G. Frost—1910-1914
Mrs. R. S. Patterson—1915-1918
Mrs. John Sager—1919—1922
Mrs. W. W. Garrett—1923-1926
Mrs. C. M. Kindred—1926
Mrs. R. S. Patterson—1926-1934
D. H. Morrison—1934

Only two secretaries have held office since the library was organized in 1906. They are C. W. Huyck who was elected continuously from 1906 till 1918; and the present secretary S. H. Connor, who has held the office without a break since the year 1919.

A library fills a very useful place in every community and merits the most loyal support given to any public institution. The most up to date fiction books of travel, history, natural science, religion, philosophy, to mention but a few of the classes, are to be found upon the shelves. As Tweed Public Library depends to a great extent upon members' fees, it is only by an increased reading public that it can be maintained at a high standard. The membership fee is only $1.50 annually, less than the price of one book, and it entitles the subscriber to nine books a week throughout the year.

The following constitutes the Board for 1935:

President—T. E. Moffat, B.A.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. P. T. Bowlby
Treasurer—W. E. Spackman
Secretary—S. H. Connor.
Board—Mrs. A. C. Locke, Mrs. T. E. Moffat, B.A. Mrs. J. J. McTague, Messrs A. W. McGuire, B.A., I.P.S., W. S. Gordon, S. R. Curry, H. W. Crosbie, I. D. Corcoran.

Librarian—D. H. Morrison.

Joe Rashotte's sawmill is working at its full capacity these days with custom sawing and sawing lumber for the local factory. Teams have been busy for weeks hauling in logs from the various wood lots which lie on all sides of Tweed, and the mill yard is well filled with fine sticks of timber—elm, maple, basswood, pine, poplar, beech, oak, hemlock and logs from other common trees.

Mrs. John Sager of Peterboro who has been visiting friends in town since Saturday returned home on Tuesday. Miss Dorothy Sager spent the week end in Ottawa where she sang at the services of two of the leading churches on Sunday and at a Rotary Club dinner on Monday.

Mr. Edward Rath who has been quite ill is rapidly improving.

Tweed High School hockey team will be minus a number of its best players when another season rolls aronud, as several of the boys will be graduating before that time, including Evan 'Tip' Tummon, Graham Mouck, Harold Elsbury, Jack Arber and Norman Bowers.

The March meeting of Group VII of the W.M.S. of the United Church was held on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Harold Emerson. The programme, Irish in character, as befits the season, was arranged by Mrs. M. G. Dales and Miss H. Grindell, B.A. The meeting opened with Mrs. M. Ardenne presiding. Miss F. Blaney read the minutes of the last meeting. Mrs. E. Way gave an interesting reading connected with the Fairies of Ireland concluding with a favorite Irish poem. Miss Isabelle Campbell gave an account of the legend of St. Patrick.

The second part of the programme was missionary in character. The scripture lesson was read by Miss M. Logan. Miss M. Hueston read the devotional leaflet. A splendid paper on the Life of David Livingstone missionary to the Dark Continent was given by Miss Hazel Grindell, B.A. of the High School Staff. A beautiful sacred trio "Saviour Breathe an Evening Blessing" was sung by Mesdames Dales, Connor and Grier. After the closing prayer by Mrs. Ardenne, lunch was served. The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. S. H. Connor.

TIP-TOP TAILORS

In a magnificent white stone structure on Toronto's modern Lake Shore Boulevard, plans are rapidly coming to fruition for the celebration of a silver jubilee.

The plant—the sun-lighted Tip Top Tailors' workrooms—is a monument to the industry and foresight of a group of men headed by David Dunkelman, the company's president. Plans for the silver anniversary are, in a sense, the company's way of expressing their appreciation to the hundreds of thousands of Canadian men who made the continued progress of this great Canadian industry a possibility.

For it was just twenty-five years ago—the year that George V ascended the throne of the British Empire that David Dunkelman conceived the idea on which the present tailoring industry is founded.

"At first the venture appeared to be somewhat of a sickly infant," Mr. Dunkelman recalled today as he sat in his office from which he supervises, activity, the operations of Tip Top Tailors Limited. "I approached it in fear and trembling. My capital was not large, but it did represent my life savings. However I did want my own business and after much deliberation and consideration, I selected a humble site on a side street in the City of Toronto and started out"

At that time Mr. Dunkelman had no idea that the business which he was founding would reach the proportions and the importance in the tailoring industry which it occupies today. As a matter of fact he had little but enthusiasm and an idea as a foundation stone. His capital, which he describes as not large, was actually $1,500.

It was then that Mr. Dunkelman conceived the idea of opening his own retail outlet and selling to the customer direct. So the first Tip Top Tailor store was founded at 245 Yonge Street, Toronto. How that store has grown is now clothing history. Today a total of 2500 Tip Top Tailors stores and agents stretch from coast to coast in Canada. Annually thousands of men buy Tip Top Tailors' suits and overcoats.

"How do you account for your phenomenal growth in this twenty-five year period?" Mr. Dunkelman was asked.

"In the first place the idea of buying tailored-to-measure clothes at one price direct from the manufacturer was economically sound," Mr Dunkelman said. "It appealed to men who were interested in good clothes, tailored-to-measure at a price they could afford to pay. The result was that our store on Yonge Street met with instant success."

"I had entered the men's business on the basis of a pioneer and I had certain objects and ideals to which I was determined to live up. I believe that I have succeeded in living up to them. It has been my policy to see how much I can give the purchaser rather than how much can I get."

"Then I have been fortunate in my associates. As our business grew, we were able to attract men with years of experience in the tailoring business—men who were regarded as master craftsmen. The result is that today, in addition to being an organization of craftsmen, we have twenty-five years' experience in the tailoring industry behind us.

"This experience is not gained overnight. Only time can give it, and now, entering on our second twenty-five years, with our golden anniversary our next great milestone, we face the future with confidence."

In concluding, Mr. Dunkelman expressed faith in the business outlook. "Every indication" he said, "pointed towards better times and people everywhere were looking to the future more hopefully than at any time in the past five years."

War Waged on Sleeping Sickness, Says Sudanese Missionary

Rev. G. N. Bell is in City After Long Service in Africa

ANXIOUS TO GO BACK

Back in Canada on brief furlough from one of the unhealthiest sections of country on earth, the Rev. G. N. Bell, wind and sun-tanned to a healthy bronze after nine years spent in the interior of the French Soudan in French West Africa where he was in charge of his mission at San, a small station 500 miles south of fabled Timbuctoo, is at present in Belleville spending the next few days the guest of the Rev. Wm. McArthur, pastor of the local Christian Missionary and Alliance Church.

But the peacefulness and quietness of Canada and Ontario even in spring pall. Although his vacation so far has been a brief one, the jungle is calling again. "I'd like to get back just as soon as I can," remarked this travelled missionary-adventurer to a Daily Ontario Intelligencer reporter yesterday. "Your country is nice and all that, but one misses things. And there's still a lot of work to be done down there."

'Down There'

"Down there," is a spot of Africa just above the roaring Gold Coast where danger lurks in every corner for the unwary. A spot where blackwater fever, malaria and allied diseases are taken for granted and combatted by liberal doses of quinine, and where the dreaded sleeping sickness is the most malignant on earth.

In appearance and dress more like an up-to-date and modern business man rather than might be looked for in a man who has been carrying His word into the far interior of Africa's roughest section, the Rev. G. N. Bell belies his soft-spoken manner and slow enunciation by his vigor of action and thought. He dismisses with a shrug, and refuses to comment upon the dangers that he has faced while stationed, alone except for one other white family at his remote mission.

Of the strides that are being made by the French Government in that country in bringing more safety and security to its residents, however, he speaks freely. Sleeping sickness for example. "The French are making great progress in their study of this disease. Although they have not and perhaps will never eliminate the tsetse fly, tiny carrier of the germ, they have been developing a serum which may in time become a marvellous countribution toward immunizing or curing anyone afflicted."

"But there are dangers other than disease?" questioned the Ontario Intelligencer. "Wild animals, lions and other things?"

Hear Lion's Roar

"Lions, of course. We hear them at night. In the morning we are able to see their spoor all around the camp, but the general run of lions are not as dangreous as people think. Generally they'll leave you alone, if you leave them alone. The worst part about them is their constant stampeding of the natives' stock. The lion is a smart and intelligent hunter. He knows just how to go about the job. Three or four of them hunting in a pack will creep up on a thorn walled boma in which the herd of cattle are kept, and then when all is ready one of them will let out a thundering roar. The herd stampedes and the lions get their supper. A lion's roar at night is something to hear."

Rev. Mr. Bell is a Philadelphian by birth. Early in his life he took up his life's work, that of being missionary to the remote corners of the world. He has travelled far in his work and has visited many lands, but his heart at present is in his little mission in the Soudan.

Mrs. Bell is Canadian

Mr. Bell is assisted in his work at the mission by Mrs. Bell whom he met in Africa and married. A daughter of the Rev. Mr. Roffe, Gravenhurst, Ontario. Mrs. Bell was and is also an ardent missionary. Three of Mrs. Bell's brothers are also carrying on the same work. One is at present in French West Africa, one in Laos, North-west Indo China, and one other in Peru.

The mission consists of two white families, assisted by three colored helpers. Sermons are carried on in the Bambara language, official language of the French Colonial troops.

During his stay in Belleville for the next few days, Mr. Bell is assisting the Rev. Mr. McArthur in conducting the annual mission of the local church which is being held until Sunday evening.

tative of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer of one of his attempts to convert the super-patriot, who afterward became his friend. This was in Gugaratia, Gandhi's home city, where Mr. Brabazon's mission was located.

"When I first went to India, back in 1916, I had heard that Gandhi was or had leanings toward Christianity. Now Gandhi is not a common Hindu come out of the wilderness to lead the world to a new faith; he was a brilliant student; a more brilliant lawyer at the bar in England; he was also a graduate of one of the best universities of the world, Oxford. He is also a descendant of a long line of distinguished forbears. But he renounced all this to become a zealot and work unceasingly for what I believe he thinks is right.

Talk With Gandhi

"After I had arranged the visit I called on Gandhi with my wife. We were ushered into a typical little house with the usual white washed rooms, and observed Gandhi sitting on a mat on the floor. He had on only the usual loin cloth. He motioned us toward a narrow bench on one side of the room. My wife left after a few moments and we were alone. He sat, cross-legged and immovable. My attempts to start a conversation at first failed. I got tired sitting there on the bench and dropped on the mat beside him. I told him I usually started a friendly little chat like that with a word of prayer and then bowed. Like a flash it came to me just as I finished that if I could only convert this man to the Christian faith, our battle in India would be won. I talked to him of our Christ. I told him of the trials and suffering He too, had gone through for mankind. He listened, at times breaking in with his cultured Oxonian voice, but for the most he said little. Finally I finished. Gandhi turned to me. He said: 'When I see some of my own countrymen doing as great, or greater deeds than Christ did, how can I call Him divine'!"

"That was probably the same answer he had given dozens before me. What was the answer?" asked Mr. Brabazon.

Gandhi Almost a Deity

"As I have said, Gandhi is not an ordinary man in India; he is a deity. He is saluted and kow-towed to on every side. To get an idea of the extent of this you must understand India. You must learn that there are over twenty-four hundred castes and sub-divisions of castes in the Hindu caste. Gandhi controls this. Wherever he goes he collects thousands. He speaks their languages and knows his people. He is a thorn in the side of the British Government. He is in jail and out of jail constantly. He is a mixed evil. Yet his idea is wrong, psychologically wrong. He is non-violent and yet he incites through his smooth and liquid speeches to violence every so often. Then when trouble does occur he fasts until it is all over, hoping to break it up. His exact speech reiterated so often is that "the British Government is of the devil". He has drilled this into his people. Outsiders perhaps comment upon the treatment this supposedly simple loin-cloth garbed man is given by the British Government, yet remove Gandhi from India and chaos would rule."

Other Visits to Mahatma

The Rev. Mr. Brabazon's first interview with India's most publicized man led to further visits during his eight year's acquaintance and close personal contact and friendliness. Often the following visits would be spent merely in social chat. Gandhi was remarkably intelligent. He spoke with a soft, voice, almost fluid in quality. Each word was carefully framed by his thick lips before being uttered in the purest of English. His eyes smouldered unforgettably under his thick lensed, heavy rimmed glasses. At times he appeared very near to the fringe of Christianity. Again a dull fire would appear in his eyes and he would become once again the zealot, leading his country out of the evil that had befallen it, gathering his thousands as he marched through the country speaking in the glare of the many camp fires in the desert at night; exhorting them to make their own salt, defy the salt tax; spin their own cotton, boycott England; speaking slowly and impressively and softly, yet with the psychology that would put any professor to shame. Slowly the fires would smoulder until at last a quick blaze would flare up. Then war was declared, British soldiers would appear in punitive units and many would die. Gandhi would go to jail and take up his celebrated fast. For some time things would be quiet. Always their leader was passively resistant, and thus he urged his countrymen on. His very name Maha—great and tma—spirit, gave him that air of authority to sway millions.

"If I Only Could"

"One day," continued Mr. Brabazon in referring to the salutes that were given him and the title of deity that was bestowed on Gandhi, "I asked him if he was just a plain leader of his people and not a deity, why did he accept these salutes. 'Ah my friend, if only I could see my way clear to end it'," he replied.

"But Gandhi, I believe, secretly liked this ostentation and the publicity he attracted. He loved to have white people visit him and he would spend a lot of his time in this fashion if he could. He would discuss any topic they chose to bring up, and it would be discussed in remarkably intelligent fashion."

One little known phase of his recent arrest when he started out in 1930 to break the salt tax law was told by Mr. Brabazon. This time the authorities decided that leader or not he was getting too troublesome. So this time when they clapped him in jail they arraigned him on a breach of a law which had been passed in the 19th Century. This was a law which if the man arrested was found guilty meant that he might be sentenced to prison for an indefinite and indeterminate period. It provided a penalty against anyone who might be "obnoxious" to the Government. Mr. Brabazon admitted, dryly enough, when questioned, that he didn't know if Gandhi was in jail at the present time or not.

Snakes and Snake-Worship

But there are other things in India besides Gandhi. There are snakes and snake-worshippers, who in spite of the fact that they are included among the other millions who annually die by snake bite, refuse to kill or have anything to do with anyone who does kill any kind of a snake.

"They call these chaps Vanjaras, of the Vanjara tribe. They're really snake worshippers. I had a gang of them on at the brickyard one day, couldn't get any one else. Well, they worked away for an hour or so that day and they all decided to quit. They came to me, wanted their money. I told them to go back to work. No money for them, they were on contract. They wouldn't. They refused even to give me a reason why they were quitting Finally I got it out of them. There was a snake in the brick pile. I got the shotgun and finally routed the snake—it was a big one too—out and took a shot at it. I blew it almost half in two and left it there. Still they refused to go to work. Finally I had to take that carcass and hang it up in the branches of a tree outside the yard before they'd go to work. Queer chaps. India's queer, though. That's the country where the little shavers just big enough to go to school whittle out their own pipes from a reed and then sit there in the evening and call the cobras and other snakes out of the woods and kill them. And by the way, speaking of cobras, when you see one, he's generally going away from you, not toward you unless he's an odd sort of a one. Give him a chance and he'll leave you alone."

"But watch out for the krait. He's small and tiny, maybe a foot and a half long and about the size of your ring finger. But he's the fightingest deadliest little piece there is. You're just twenty minutes from death when this chap strikes. And he needs to do it only once. Provide yourself with a cane; don't go out on the path unless you have a good light ahead of you."

Land of Mystery

India, land of mystery, is just that to even those who have lived there thirty years or more. Weird, swern-to-the truth tales of Yogis holding themselves in a state of suspended animation or catalepsy for a period of one hundred years or more in their carefully guarded caves in the back country float down from the hills on the fringe of Tibet. "I had one chap swear to me that he saw one man that had been 'dead' that way for four hundred years, and then come back to life," said Mr. Brabazon. "I have seen with my own eyes the famous rope trick and must say that I am ashamed to tell I was absolutely taken in. The magician threw the rope into the air. It stiffened into a rigid piece. Then up that rope clambered a small boy. We saw that with our own eyes. But whether we were mesmerized, I won't attempt to tell, nor will any one else that has seen it. I have walked away from there tricks convinced that I have been fooled, but no one has yet been able to give a logical answer to them."

Learning the Languages

Under tutelage an intelligent scholar can learn one of India's languages in two years. But that means hard study if one is a newcomer to the country. A language which has Sanskrit as its root was learned by Mr. Brabazon fluently in that period. Then if one wishes to progress further in his language study there are some two hundred and nineteen other languages and dialects of the country to practise on.

While in Belleville Mr. Brabazon who intends to remain until Sunday is assisting Rev. Mr. McArthur, pastor of the local Christian Alliance and Missionary Church on West Moira Street in conducting a mission during the week. Also assisting is the Rev. Mr. G. N. Bell of French West Africa who is on brief furlough to Canada.

Are there rooms in your home that are hard to heat properly in winter. Cold, drafty and uncomfortable, no matter how much you drive your furnace? Do you feel you are paying more than you should for fuel?

In summer do you find the upper floors of your home unbearably hot, hotter even than the outdoor air? Are your bedrooms so uncomfortable on hot nights that you cannot sleep in comfort?

Many of us have accepted these household discomforts as among those inevitable things that cannot be avoided, except at great expense. But this is no longer the case, if you Insulate your home with INSUL-MOSS—the best insulation and the lowest priced insulation on the market.

PRICE RISE FORECAST

The stage is set for the greatest rise in prices the United States has ever seen, stated Prof. Hudson B. Hastings of Yale University to the New Haven Rotary Club, basing this view on the U. S. gold clause decision and the devaluation of the dollar. There are many powerful forces tending to initiate a rapid rise, he said, among them—

"1. The continued unbalanced governmental budget of major proportions which is financed by the purchase of governmental securities by the Federal Reserve and member banks.

"2. A powerful inflationary block in Congress.

"3. The decline in the English pound.

"4. The normal rise in prices accompanying recovery.

"5. The abnormally low bank discount rates and the rates of interest on long term loans.

"Against these forces which are strongly tending toward inflation, there are a few automatic checks in sight. If we had the free movement of gold which prevailed in the past, a loss of gold to Europe would prevent a rise in our price level of anything like three times the present.

"But under the present monetary policies of both this and other countries, it is wholly likely that restrictions on the shipment of gold, the imposition of higher tariffs and import quotas would permit the continued rise in prices to the limits permitted by our exisiting gold supply.

"Another check to inflation which might come into action would be the possible claims for damages against the United States Government by holders of the gold clause government bonds, which the recent decision of the Supreme Court indicates would be sustained if the price level rises above the approximate level of 1918.

"All monetary history proves that there is little reason to expect that we can avoid a drastic rise in prices sometime within the next few years unless positive and more or less irrevocable steps are taken in advance.

"I suggest, therefore, that Congress immediately take the following steps to prevent a drastic rise in prices before it is too late:

"1. Amend the Federal Reserve Act to State that the stabilization of the general price level aganst regular changes, and the reasonable stabilization against cyclical fluctuations, are among the major objectives of the Federal Reserve System.

"2. Direct the Federal Reserve Board to use all of its present powers to prevent a rise in the general price level which will develop speculation, and, in any event, to check a rise in the general price level above that existing in 1929.

"3. Amend the Federal Reserve Act, giving the Federal Reserve Board the power to raise the legal reserve ratios of the Federal Reserve Banks and member banks to any point they deem advisable.

"4. Direct the Federal Reserve Board to report as soon as possible its recommendations for additional needed powers or steps to be taken by other governmental agencies in order to assist in attaining the above objectives.

"5. Defeat the Banking Act of 1935 which places the Federal Reserve System under direct political control.

"6. Amend the Federal Reserve Act to eliminate class representation on the Federal Reserve Board, making the sole qualification that of understanding and ablity to manage a central banking system in the interests of the country as a whole.

"7. Amend the Federal Reserve Act to eliminate the Secretary of the Treasurp as a membed of the Federal Reserve Board.

"8. Defeat all bills for cashing the veterans' deferred compensation certificates, and the sale of securities to investors rather than the Federal Reserve and Commercial Banks.

"9. Repeal the Silver Purchase Act.

"10. Initiate an informal international conference to prepare the way for a formal conference having as its objective the stabilization of foreign exchange rates and, if possible, the world price level.

"11. Restrict governmental appropriations to a point where the deficit in the government budget for the next fiscal year will not be in excess of two billion dollars.

"Without mandatory, centralized and effective control, we are practically certain of a disastrous rise in prices in the not-far distant future."

A WARNING

A man in Montreal was sentenced to a year in prison at hard labor and to post a bond of $500 to keep the peace for another twelvemonth or serve an additional year on pleading guilty to negligence in connection with a fatal motor accident. He said that the time his car was involved he was so drunk he did not know what he was doing. This, it is pointed out, is a most unusual plea as the average man under such circumstances might be expected to deny such a charge, as if it is shown he has taken a drink he always claims to know what he is doing.

Such an incident ought to be an example to the driving public. The dangers of crowded driving and of speeding and recklessness are regrettably large, but the addition of intoxication is something which cannot be permitted. The drunken driver ought to be removed forever from the use of the highways as a driver.

VALUE OF TOURIST

Three hundred million dollars is the total expected tourist trade in Canada during the summer of 1935, which is a predicted increase of one hundred millions.

This prediction is based on the desire for travel of Americans and the unsettled state of Europe.

What this will mean to Canada is no doubt not generally appreciated. Speaking in Montreal, D. L. Dolan of the Canadian Travel Bureau at Ottawa, said that the tourist dollar is "the healthiest money" that the Dominion can hope to receive this year, and ever-increasingly in the years to come, since it increases general employment and makes possible greater distribution and sale of products of farm and stream.

Mr. Dolan remarked that the tourist of today is the prospective investor of tomorrow and that the tourist is an agent of peace and harmonious international relations.

Indications of the importance of tourist travel were given by Mr. Dolan. He showed that from 170 to 175 millions of dollars were brought into Canada from tourist business. This amount compares with $131,000,000 from the export of wheat; $82,000,000 from newsprint; $29,000,000 from nickel; $20,000,000 from liquor. What the tourist industry really means to sections of the country can be gauged from the totals received in states "across the line" last year, when California took in 275 millions of dollars; Maine, $115,000,000, and the south, $200,000,000.

Belleville district is one which welcomes tourists, dangling before them the brightest attractions of fishing and recreation areas. A huge tourist traffic would mean more prosperity.

THE PUBLIC AND THE MOVIES

We are greatly encouraged by the public attitude towards motion pictures. In past years, when there have been protests against sex dramas and questionable films appearing on the silver screen, the answer of the producing companies has been that they must cater to the box office, that public demand fixes the type of fils to be produced.

Taking the producers' own statement as a standard of what kind of pictures should be made, we are encouraged by the changed public attitude towards motion pictures. The films which have, in recent months, proven the greatest success at the box office, have been films in which there have been no suggestiveness, no sex appeal, no triangle problems, but have been clean and wholesome, suitable for the whole family to see and enjoy. We need only refer to the striking success of such films as "David Copperfield", "The Little Minister", "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer", "The House of Rothschild", "The Iron Duke", "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and the many other films of this type. The success of these pictures has proven conclusively that the public likes that type of entertainment, and that the day of the questionable sex drama has passed.

Motion picture producers should sense this new public taste for film entertainment, and should arrange their production schedules accordingly. If they do this, they will not only make greater profits for themselves, but will win greater public favor by eliminating films which are of such a character that children can not be taken to see them.—Oshawa Times.

NEGOTIATING WITH CANADA

It was with a curious air of satisfaction and even triumph, that the state department announced the other day a diplomatic agreement with Canada. It was of the most preliminary kind. Both countries agreed to start negotiations for a reciprocal trade treaty. Since such a diplomatic parley has been the strong desire of our state department for more than a year, it might see as if the business were advancing pretty slowly, if we have only got so far as to say that it might now be discussed. In one respect it may prove that no great amount of time has really been lost, inasmuch as there has been opportunity to study the trade transactoins going on between the United States and Canada under existing tariffs. If we are going to modify them, it is just as well to see why their operation makes a change seem more than ever desirable.—New York Times.

SENTIMENTS

Oh, it's just the little homely things,
The unobtrusive friendly things,
The "won't-you-let-me-help-you" things,
That make our pathway light.
And it's just the jolly, joking things,
The "laugh-with-me-it's-funny" things,
That make the world seem bright.
For all the countless famous things,
The wondrous record-making things,
Those "never-can-be-equalled" things,
That all the papers cite.....
Are not like human things,
The "every-day-encountered" things,
The "just-because-I-like-you" things,
That make us happy—quite.
So here's to all the little things,
The "done-and-then-forgotten" things,
Those "oh-it's-simply-nothing" things,
That make life worth the fight.

EX-PREMIER VENIZELOS, of Greece, is now in exile, a political refugee in Italy. Once termed the strong man of Greece, he obtained much prominence by his strong pro-ally sentiments from the beginning of the Great War, sentiments not enthusiastically shared by other high dignitaries in Greece. Local Greeks say that Venizelos was never popular among the masses of Greek citizens, that he was the centre of a clique which held all the best government offices, and was considerable of a despot in dealing with those whose opinions clashed with his. That he should have identified himself with the late fiasco of rebellion seems to lower his reputation for acumen among previous admirers of his in foreign countries.

SOME DAY Belleville will have an esplanade and be proud of it, wondering why it was not constructed long before, and not one loyal citizen, tinged at all with the community spirit, would take a million dollars for it. And with an esplanade park on both sides of the river there will be storage dams up the river to control the spring floods and conserve water for the midsummer days when the Moira is but a trickle passing Belleville—changing the trickle into a sizable stream pleasant to look at and fragrant to the olfactory nerves. Strange that it takes so long to accomplish really worth while municipal improvements.

AS THE RIVER MOIRA FLOWS again, on its journey to the sea, we can look back on a winter, milder than the previous one, but still a winter with all the Canadian earmarks. The best part of the winter nowadays is its disappearance, but old timers will recall with pleasurable regret the winters of long ago, and the sports which accompanied it. The ice races for fast stepping equines, the snow-shoe hikes, tobogganing, sugaringoff in the maple woods. Sleigh rides in the country with the old box sleigh, bottom covered with straw, warm buffalo robe to tuck in about feminine forms bubbling with good spirits, hands held surreptitiously under the robes, sleigh bells ringing out a haunting symphony against the clear frosty brilliance of the night. Skating, hockey and all the other amusements of the winters of not so long ago, including hooking rides on the wood sleighs, loaded and empty, over the heaving ocean of pitch holes.

SATISFACTION CAUSES LOSS OF AMBITION

Efforts Should be Made Constantly to Better Position

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology
(Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

We are all familiar with the axiom declaring that man is master of his own destiny. It discounts fatalism, to be sure, but it puts the power of one's future right into one's own hands — where it belongs. And every person has sufficient power and ability within his inherent make-up to do what he wishes with his life.

On which level or plane of life, should an individual wish to live? For there are such psychological levels. And every man or woman, should set out deliberately to choose which plane that should be.

To live with no ambition, no plan of work, no thought of the future, no coherence of idea or action, with no mind for the morrow — that, in effect, is the life of an idler. Some people seem deliberately to select such an annual existence, but, luckily, they are few.

Some may choose to live the life of the average. To be average is to be smug, complacent and content. Average people are glad they are alive. They are thankful for what they have. But to be an average also means giving little thought to whatever such a lot may be improved; whether, for instance, such a man could do even better than he has already done for himself and his family.

Then there is the superior life. Such an existence is inspiring and uplifting. That is the life that always seeks the higher planes. And you can force yourself purposely into the company of the few and exceptional, if you want to. You can be one of the noble beings who have vision, who are seers, who are dissatisfied with things as they are and who are forever planning and working to make them better for all mankind.

Sometimes people regret being born with ability. They believe it accounts for restlessness and discontent. Yet, although this may be true, such persons must not forget that no life is smooth, no matter on which plane it is lived.

All life has its hazards. You're bound to fall or lie down at times, no matter which level you may live on. Then why not live on the highest level possible? Why not make life a little thrilling adventure? Why not crowd life with variety and richness?

Life at the top is rare and fascinating. There you have a sweeping view of those on lower planes. You have distinct advantages when you're on top!

And it's not so difficult to step up from one level to another as might be imagined. Only you must not expect to do it in one leap. To climb to higher places is like trying to scale a difficult mountain. It must be taken step by step. There may be halts on the way up. The climber may even slide back. But he sticks to it. He never loses courage or hope. He just keeps on trying.

Frankly, it is not a good thing to be satisfied with what you are doing and with the way you are living. Complete satisfaction too easily runs the mind to seed.

On the other hand, trying to live always on a still higher plane gives zest to life and makes it worth living.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 Years Ago

MARCH 15th., 1915.

The members of the 39th. Battalion who are stationed here attended service at Bridge Street Methodist Church Sunday morning. The pastor, the Rev. H. S. Osborne, delivered an appropriate and patriotic sermon. During the service Mr. Dan Cameron sang "The Golden Gates Are Open", the music being written by Mr. E. R. Hinchey and the words by Mr. Samuel Turner.

The members of the Feleciter Club recently entertained their friends at the tea hour at the home of their convener, Mrs. Mitchell, Cedar Street. The pleasant function was in aid of the Red Cross sock fund and the returns were exceedingly gratifying. Much credit is due to the young ladies for the successful manner in which the tea was carried out.

Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Amans, Murney Street, are spending a few days in Toronto.

Lincoln Beachey, world-famous aviator, was killed yesterday afternoon when he dropped through the air 2,500 feet before thousands of spectators at the Panama- Pacific International Exposition. Beachey will be remembered as making a very successful flight at the Belleville Agricultural grounds last summer, performing feats in the air that were spectacular in the extreme. During his stay in the city he made many friends who will regret to hear of his death.

The Hotel Quinte has been sold, the sale was completed yesterday. The purchaser is Mr. Jas. V. Jenkins, the present lessee, and the purchase price is said to be between forty and forty-five thousand dollars. Under the management of Mr. Jenkins the Quinte has become celebrated as probably the best hotel between Toronto and Montreal, and so he will continue in the management, there is every reason to believe that the present high standard will be maintained if not excelled. Negotiations for the purchase of the hotel have been carried on for some time with the local company owning it.

Mr. W. Mikel of this city will be Crown Prosecutor at the Whitby and Lindsay assizes.

The names of Ald. Doyle, Ald. Harte, Mr. Jas. Knox, Mr. Huyck and Mr. D. E. K. Stewart, Jr. were accidentally omitted from the list of those present at the banquet tendered to the Premier of Canada, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, at Hotel Quinte on Tuesday evening

Mr. W. B. Haines, manager of Haines and Lockett's store at Napanee, was in the city today.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

In infant feeding, barley water is important. The way to prepare this is as follows. One tablespoon of barley flour mixed thoroughly with a little cold water. Stir this thoroughly into ten ounces of boiling water and add a pinch of salt. Cook for half an hour in a double boiler. Lastly, strain the mixture and add enough warm water to make a pint. Keep in a cool place.

RAMBLING DEBATE ON 8-HOUR DAY BILL IN HOUSE

Miss Macphail Says Farmers Left Holding Bag

OTTAWA, March 14.— (CP) — Shorter hours of work for Canada's industrial workers leave the hard-working Canadian farmer cold, according to his spokesmen in the House of Commons. The farmer whose working day extends from sunrise to sunset will just be left holding the bag under the government's reform program, Miss Agnes Macphail, Progressive member for South East Grey, told the house yesterday as the eight hour day law was discussed.

Miss Macphail found herself in sharp disagreement with two of her desk mates in the Farmer-Labour section of the House, J. S. Woodsworth (Labor Winnipeg North Centre) and E. J. Garland ([illegible] A. Bow River). Mr. Woodsworth could see no reason why farm work could not be run in shifts with farmers working six or eight hours a day and Mr. Garland wanted a six-hour day in industry.

The Eight-Hour Day Bill made steady progress in a rambling debate after an announcement charges against the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in New Baurswick would be probed by a Royal Commission.

Welcomes Investigation

Announcement was made by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, and Hon. Peter Veniot, Liberal member for Gloucester, who made the charges welcomed the investigation and promised to conduct the case himself without a lawyer and prove the charges if the inquiry was brought on at a time, when it would not conflict with his parliamentary duties.

Mr. Veniot said he made no accusation against the police force generally, but maintained the actions of some of its officers in New Brunswick were bringing the organization into disrepute. He charged third degree methods, alleged a ship loaded with alcohol had been wrongly seized, when it entered port in distress and when the ship was destroyed its stores had been burned without legal authority.

Investigations following charges made by Mr. Veniot had shown no foundation for the allegations, said Mr. Guthrie. Mr. Veniot had said 150 people had watched the burning ship when only fifteen were present. The stores included food which was unfit for consumption and in all were valued at only $44.

If he could not prove his charges to a substantial degree he would resign his seat, declared Mr. Veniot. He thought the judge chosen to make the investigation, Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, chief justice of New Brunswick, would be satisfactory but feared an unpleasant impression might develop as in former years he and Mr. Baxter had been bitter political opponents. Mr. Veniot is a former Liberal Premier of New Brunswick and Mr. Baxter, a former Conservative Premier.

"TOOK ALL KINDS OF PILLS, THEN CEREAL BROUGHT RELIEF"

Constipation, Due to Insufficient "Bulk," Relieved by Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

A fine letter from Mrs. Snyder: "I have had trouble* with my bowels for years, taking all kinds of pills and drugs, with no relief.

"One year ago, I saw Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and bought a package. I have good movements every day. I am 73 years old. I am telling my friends what bran has done for me." —Mrs. Sallie Snyder. Address upon request.

Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.*

Research shows that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" to exercise the intestines. ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B, as well as iron, an element of the blood.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient to correct common constipation. With each meal, in serious cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN resists digestion better than the "bulk" in leafy vegetables. How much better to use this food in place of patent medicines.

At all grocers in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

An early study of Princess May

"EVERY inch a Queen" will, in all probability, be history's verdict of Victoria Mary Windsor, consort of King George.

As Princess and Queen, she was one of the most beautiful women ever to grace the royal household. Above is a picture of Princess May of Teck, taken three years before her marriage to Prince George. A true Saxon beauty she was, with pink and white complexion and luxurious fair hair. No wonder both Prince Albert Victor and his younger brother Prince George were in love with her!

From early childhood, the Princess seemed destined one day to be a Queen. Born in surroundings, it is said, of comparative poverty at White Lodge, Richmond, on May 26, 1867, she was the only daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, two of the minor German royalties who came to England during the long reign of Queen Victoria.

Just as Prince Albert Victor (Duke of Clarence) was being groomed for the throne, so Princess May was carefully attended to reign, it was hoped, as his consort. She was taught and showed great apititude for literature and art, although her training as a housewife was never neglected.

Known to her intimates as May, and to the Empire as Princess May, she grew up a handsome young woman competent in almost everything and perfectly sure of herself

At 23 years of age she was engaged to marry Prince Albert Victor heir to the throne as eldest son of Edward VIII. But death intervened in 1892, and the Duke of Clarence died. It is a legend that when the young heir to the throne on his deathbed said to his best friend, his brother George: "Take care of May for me."

A few months later, Princess May was engaged to Prince George, but still wore the engagement ring given to her by Prince Albert Victor.

Parents' Meeting is Sponsored By Picton Home-School Club

Picton, — On Tuesday evening March 12th., the Home and School Club held a most interesting parents' meeting in the Legion Club Rooms at eight o'clock. Dr. D. W. Gullett presided, and as a member of the P.P.S. Board stressed the fine work the Club was doing, not only in providing milk and other necessities for children who needed them, but also in bringing about a greater understanding between parents and teachers, and ironing out many problems that the board at one time was called upon to adjust.

Miss Thompson's Room then gave a splendid number by the "Rhythm Band" ably conducted by little Marion Young, with phonograph accompaniment.

The treasurer's report was next given by Mrs. Ern. Ward and showed:—

Amount raised by picture at theatre	$ 81.82
Amount raised by bridge and tea at Mrs. Nourse's	22.20
Total	$104.02
Since January 7th., milk has cost	$31.97
Straws	7.30
Picture and Literature for Founder's Day	3.03
Total	$42.30
Leaving a balance on hand of	$61.72

The attendance of parents at this meeting was checked by Mr. J. H. Fox and Miss Thompson's room and Mr. Yarwood's room showed the largest representation. Pupils from these two rooms are to be dismissed at 3.30 every night next week.

Mrs. F. E. Walden and Mrs. Clair Newman were heard in a very pleasing duet, with accompaniment by Mr. Walden.

Dr. C. E. Stothers then introduced the guest speaker, Dr. Amoss of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville. He spoke of Dr. Amoss as one of the experts of the Department of Education—an inspector of auxiliary classes, who helped advise teachers and inspectors in the treatment and care of children. Dr. Stothers spoke of visiting the school for the Deaf on Tuesday afternoon and of the change in organization there. Deaf children could tell what you were saying. He saw them sewing, typing, making shoes. The aim of the school is to send graduates out, who are able to take a job, in spite of the fact that they can't hear.

Dr. Amoss began by saying that he thought the H. and S. Club had done much to humanize school teachers. Teachers were now like other people — fifteen years ago they were different and could be spotted anywhere. The speaker remarked of the change in the courses in High Schools in the past ten years—of the vocational schools that looked after the children who had the gift of doing things. Even in our public schools we now find children working with wood, iron, and cloth. The course of study is being shaped to deal with children who can't learn out of books, but — seeing and doing. Examples of Arithmetic taught in a school "store", where real money was used —bills made out and cheques written, were given. In Auxiliary classes Composition is taught by orally applying for a job, and observing such points as erect bearing, hands out of pockets, courteous manner, etc.

Children who cannot get along well with "book learning", make great progress in 6 or 8 months in the special classes, and their expression changes from a downcast, unhappy one to a radiant one.

These methods are being successfully used in our cities, many towns and in some rural districts. Interesting examples of the progress made by certain children when these methods were used was given by the Doctor, whose address was most instructive, and withal humorous.

Mrs. Webster moved a vote of thanks to the Doctor and to those assisting with the programme.

Refreshments were then served. Mrs. George Cook and Miss Hill presided at the tea table, and the members of the executive of the club were assisted in serving by the teachers.

Rintelen Gets Life Term Convicted of High Treason

Vienna, March 14.—(CP-Havas) —Dr. Anton Rintelen, once a power in Austrian politics, was today sentenced to life imprisonment after trial by court-martial for high treason in connection with the Nazi Putsch of July 25 last, when Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was slain.

The former Austrian minister to Rome silently heard the verdict in conclusion of the long and dramatic trial, conducted as a court martial, which involved some of the leading figures in Central European politics.

The jury retired after a spirited clash between Rintelen's defence lawyer Klee and the prosecutor. Klee insisted no definite proof of Rintelen's guilt had been established. "Rintelen was not a Nazi and he wanted only friendly relations with Germany," the defence said. "To say that a man is ambitious proves nothing against him, as all men of value have ambition."

Rintelen speaking in his defence said, "I am innocent. I wanted friendly relations with Germany. That was the policy of Monsignor Seipel (former Chancellor). I await the verdict with tranquility."

One Defect May Ruin Beauty

(The Beauty Box)

June Lang

She knows the formula of good grooming

By HELEN FOLLETT

The formula of good grooming contains many ingredients. Such a lot of things to think about if one is to grace the front line of the beauty chorus. One small slip in the get-up and the whole composition is ruined.

Shredded finger nail cuticle for instance, and nail eaves that are not nicely shaped. The glitteringest polish won't cover those defects. Powder in the eyebrows and on the lashes. That's another beauty sin. Then there are lips badly painted, pigment spotty and sliding over onto the white surface. Not nice. Messy.

Hair dyeing, hair bleaching and hair tinting are going on at a great rate. More than ever before. It is a frenzy. The long-nosed critic who looks upon heavy artifice as a deadly sin—there are a few of the darling old dodos left—is being fooled right and left. She admires many a lovely thatch that does not carry its virgin colors, but flaunts the magic of chemicals and beautifying skill.

Disguising silver threads or changing from brunette to blonde is a move that must be carefully planned. Complexion, character, type must all be considered. Finding the proper medium for the presto-change act is important. Professional advice is almost necessary.

Few hair dyes are dangerous, few have a bad effect upon the shafts. The only fly in this beauty ointment is that the old color shows up at the roots. This means retouching. Something to think of before diving into the dye pot.

CONUNDRUM TEA A MARKED SUCESS

Members of the Women's Association of Bridge Street United Church held a novel tea in the church parlors on Wednesday. This was in the form of a "Conundrum" Tea, the names of the various items on the menu being described by riddles. For the decorations St. Patrick's Day favours were used and the effect was lovely, the tea table and smaller ones at which the guests were served making a very charming picture. The guests were received by Mrs. James Semple, Mrs. V. P. Hunt and Mrs. Gilbert. Mrs. J. G. Galloway acted as convener of the tea with a committee of the following Group leaders: Mrs Howard Clarke, Mrs. F. S. Deacon, Miss Simonds, Mrs. J. E. Shortt, Mrs. Lazier, Mrs. Moon, Mrs. Harry Morgan, Mrs. Walter Roblin and Mrs. C. W. Browne, Group members assisting with the serving. The tea table with its quaint old-fashioned centrepiece, was presided over by Mrs. (Capt.) Hunter, Mrs. Bonter, Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, Mrs. J. Young, Mrs. (Dr.) Baker and Mrs. Campbell. Tea was served from four to five-thirty and was followed by a supper. The artistic menu cards were greatly admired and sought-after as souvenirs. The various items were disguised under such names as "Paddy in a Jacket" (potatoes); "Survivor of the Flood" (ham); "Tabby's Comfort" (milk) and "Sweets Served by the Sweet" (candy). The very original idea created much interest and merriment.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Love Wrecked on Girl's Desire to Be the Boss

The unfailing rule to discover whether you love a man or not is to quarrel and send him away, and then if you break your heart from loneliness, you may decide he's the one and only.

About half the letters that come to this coulmn deal with this situation — "I never knew till now how much I love him." Here's a fragment from a girl's letter:

"At the moment I never wanted to see him again, and said so. He answered: 'Nothing would please me better; at last we absolutely agree on something'. Now that he has kept his word for two weeks, I am positively sick."

"We never had a fight like this before, Miss Fairfax, and people are beginning to ask me about him. My family are curious. My brother told me that he met him at a wild party last night, and said: 'He never used to be like that.' I cried all night over this. Do you think I would lose caste if I tried to influence him less? I want him back. I can't think of anything else until he comes. But I won't stand his trying to boss me.

"Christine"

A quarrel, not by any means the first, and complicated this time by hard words and an absence of two weeks. The young man tries to forget at a wild party and the young lady cries all night. Here are some of the ingredients that make up a typical lover's quarrel.

But rarely have I known a young girl to so frankly admit that she wants to continue to be boss.

You want your lover back, my dear Christine, but only on terms of his unconditional surrender. It seems to me you are not as much hurt in your heart as in your vanity. You will take him back only if he submits to you, right or wrong. You can't really care for such a man, if he comes back on any other than fifty-fifty terms.

Your fiance has broken away and has consoled himself with a gay party. He's likely to do this again at your next quarrel, and the periods of absence will grow longer as your influence weakens. Your case doesn't differ materially from that of many other "bosses" — married or single.

Before you really call this young man back, make up your mind to be less of a dictator, to be generous. Suppose he falls in love with you all over again. Try to be more of a pal, less dogmatic. Real pals are rare in love affairs; one or the other nearly always wants to rule.

Of course, you're going to backslide and fall into your old habits of wanting to "influence him", as you call the gentle art of bossing, but if you let companionship be the rule between you, quarrelling will be more difficult. Temperament is more desirable on the stage than in every-day life.

We all love to see a charming actress get away with a curtain, reduce a man to an object lesson by her wit and cleverness. But think well, my dear — do you want an "object lesson" around the house?

FIRST ANNUAL DANCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

About a year ago I went around with a group of boys and girls, until I moved to another state, and I have not been in close contact with them since. Now these boys and girls have had their first annual dance, which proved to be a grand success. I want to write them a letter congratulating them, and would appreciate it very much if you will give me an outline, or tell me what I should write in such a letter. I will send it, of course, to the president of their club.

Devoted Reader

I admire you very much for your wish to write this polite note of congratulation. And your note might be worded something like this:

Dear Bob,

The dance the other evening was such a great success that I do want to write you and tell you so, and tell you too of my deep congratulations. Every plan that was made, every detail of the party was perfect. Everyone said grand things about the charm of the party, and you and your committee should be very proud and happy about this special happiness that you gave to every one of your guests. This "first annual dance" set a very high standard — but knowing this group, I am confident that this standard will be maintained. I'm looking forward to the next dance!

Friendliest greetings to you and the group.

Faithfully.

WEDDING GIFTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of my sister's gave a surprise birthday party for her. Being her sister I took care of all the duties to be attended to. The party consisted of a group of young people, and knowing that they all expected to see the gifts, and my sister not knowing that gifts had been brought. I suggested to the host that he tell my sister to open the presents and show them around. He said that he did not think that everyone had brought gifts, and that the others might be embarrassed if this were done. He did not in any way think it was necessary to show them anyhow, even though everyone had brought one. As I am not very well acquainted with social affairs, thinking he knew more about such matters, I let it go at that.

As one of the girls was leaving, she suggested that the gifts be shown. Since then I think a very grave social error has been made. Both my sister and I feel terrible about this. Please give me your opinion on this.

S

You and your sister mustn't worry about this happening at the party. Since the man who made the decision about showing the presents was the host of the party, there was nothing that you could do but abide by his decision. And I am sure that the guests will understand this.

APPRECIATION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

One Sunday evening during the Holiday Season my husband's employer and his wife invited all the men of the department (about twenty-five) and their wives to an eggnog party at their home. It was the only time we were ever invited to their home. I would like to know if there is anything my husband and I should or could do to show our appreciation?

M.

It would be polite and gracious of you and your husband to make a gesture of hospitality to these kind people. It might be a simple invitation of some kind, similar to the invitation they extended to you.

BLACK TIE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct to wear a white vest and white tie with a Tuxedo for a formal banquet and dance?

E

It is never correct to wear a white tie with a Tuxedo. With the Tuxedo suit a black bow tie should be worn. But with his Tuxedo the man may wear either a black or a white waistcoat.

Nail Biting Nervous Habit?

By LISA GRENELLE

Janie was always biting her nails and nothing anyone could do or say could stop her for long. Mother slapped her hands, nurse tied rags around her fingers, father tried painting the tips with some bitter tasting stuff, and everybody chorused "Shame, Janie, a big girl like you".

But Janie went on gnawing one nail after another down to the quick. She just didn't seem able to help it.

Why do some children bite their nails? Is it just a nervous habit? No, there is no such thing as "just a nervous habit". If a child is nervous at all there is a reason for it, and it is not inheritance. So-called nervous habits are due either to imitation or are indication of emotional disturbance, such as resentment, fear jealousy or anger.

Bears Resentment

Janie bites her nails because she is mad. She bears a deep resentmen against some member of the family. Why? Only the family can answer that question.

Edward is so destructive, breaking everything in sight, especially his sister's dolls. While little Annie, although the doctor swears she has a perfect digestion, vomits every night upon being put to bed. Oscar kicks right and left, shins and table legs. And when they removed his shoes to teach him a lesson he gave up the practice only to replace it by another equally malicious—that of scratching the furniture with a nail of file.

No child does anything without reason, no child is naturally bad any more than he is naturally good. Kicking, biting, breaking, vomiting and such are all indications of rebellion. The child has been hurt and is taking his revenge.

Causes For Actions

Edward is perhaps jealous of his sister. But the "powers that be" will not let him take his hate out on her so he destroys what is hers. Anne, perhaps, has been frustrated. She has not been allowed to play freely in the dirt or make a mess, sa she takes her revenge in vomiting. While Oscar, annoyed at his mother for dominating him or neglecting him for guests, perhaps, takes out his anger, not on her—he would be afraid to do that—but upon her possessions.

It is not difficult for anyone who knows the background and history of the child to find the cause for his unhappiness and remove it. And it is most important. It is not healthy for a child to harbor a repressed resentment, which, unless eradicated early, develops into a permanent neurosis.

Soap Suds Beauty

(The Beauty Box)

Rochelle Hudson

Freshly-washed look..hair glittery.. eyes fascinating.

Soap and water are the king, queen and whole royal family of beautifiers. Nothing so sets a gal up as that freshly-washed look, hair glittery, eyes fascinating. One must keep scrubbing along if one is to make the beauty grade.

Now and then a skin rebels against soap suds, sets up a yowling. There's a simple way of fooling it. Apply a cream or oil to the face, lay on a steaming-hot, lathered wash cloth. Rinse with warm water. That kind of a skin won't stand chilling.

Select a light powder, don't grind it in. Beware of astringents, they are only for the gals with beaming, oily faces. Most of all, make a change in you diet. Add more fats, more butter especially. Put plenty of olive oil in the salad dressing.

Hair, complexion and finger nails depend upon the right diet for their loveliness and well being. The finicky eater is one of the loudest lamenters at beauty's wailing wall.

As for run-over heels and stockings that aren't pulled up satin smooth, there's no excuse for them. They make a gal look slovenly, nothing is more likely to make the new cavalier go chasing elsewhere. These are the days of fastidious neatness. Clothes, coiffure, complexions reach topnotch perfection.

HUSBAND IS HELD

Hingham, Mass., March 15 (AP)—Dr. Harold E. Johnson, 40-year-old Boston optometrist, was found dead under mysterious circumstances today and a few hours later Hingham police announced Robert E. Burns, 33-year-old Hingham man and husband of Johnson's divorced wife, had been held on a charge of manslaughter.

WOMAN'S TROUBLE

WOMEN who suffer from pain in side or back; catarrhal drains, heat flashes, should take that reliable vegetable tonic known for 60 years as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is what Mrs. G. L. Abbott of 176 Erie Ave., Brantford, Ont., said: "My nerves were bad, I couldn't sleep or rest, had pains in my back and headaches. I started taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and gained strength daily, also my nerves became calm. My baby was born very healthy and has been so ever since. Being the mother of ten children I feel that my experience should be of value to others."

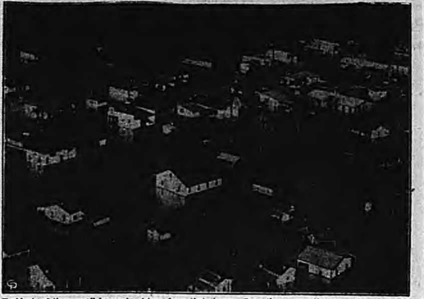
"OLE MAN RIVER" STARTS ITS ANNUAL RAMPAGE



Residents of these small homes in East Jackson, Miss. could have dived from the roof of their houses into the muddy overflow of the Pearl river. Thirty-five feet one inch rose the waters before the crest was passed. Almost 200 were driven from their homes. Soon the mighty Mississippi, father of these river waters, will feel the brunt of the recent rains and the winter's melting snows. One of the worst floods in the history of the Mississippi valley is expected by prognostigators who have heard fearsome reports from as far up as St. Louis. Relief agencies are prepared, levees are being reinforced and a spirit of apprehension has settled a pall of gloom over the entire valley.

Huey Long and Coughlin Drift Farther Apart

Can't Agree on Unity of Policy in Support of Roosevelt

Washington, March 15—(AP)—A widening cleavage between Father Charles Coughlin and Senator Huey Long was seen today in the latest renewal of the spectacular battle of epithets between them, on one side, and General Hugh S. Johnson on the other.

For some time there have been predictions that Long and Father Coughlin had so much in common in the matter of economic doctrines that they might team up in an onslaught on the New Deal. However, observers noted today that, in his reply to Hugh S. Johnson's excoriation, Father Coughlin reaffirmed his 1932 slogan "Roosevelt or ruin". Long loses no opportunity to attack Roosevelt.

Huge Mail Influx Caused

A large part of the Capitol letter carriers' burdens are attributed to the Long and Coughlin attacks on Administration policies. These communications, on the word of party leaders have provided a potent new element in legislating.

Various legislators have told their friends that, where last year their mail largely called for support of the New Deal in general, it now runs in large part to objections to this or that feature.

There was speculation without verification about whether the White House had been in touch with Father Coughlin since Johnson's first speech attacking him and Long, and it was pointed out the refinancing move announced at the Treasury over the week-end was in conformity with Father Coughlin's views.

Johnson, preparing to return to the attack in the immediate future "with plenty to say," went into seclusion awaiting, as he said, a popular call to lead a nation-wide campaign to exterminate the influence of Long and Father Coughlin.

"Anti-Long" Bloc Forming

Formation of an "anti-Long" bloc in the House of Representatives in an effort to whittle down the power of the Kingfish either by direct attack or by ridicule was under way today.

The spearhead of the group is Representative P. L. Gassaway (D., Okla.). He and "12 or 15 others" are holding frequent consultations on the matter, Gassaway said. A wearer of the leather boots and string bow tie of the cow country, he added:

"We are the meanest scoundrels in Congress and we are tired of Huey Long's line of palaver. We are going to knock him over.

"See, that hand there?" the Congressman asked as he extended a tanned and gnarled fist. "See where those fingers were broken. I smashed my first when I knocked out a feller years ago back home when he slandered Teddy Roosevelt, and Teddy was a Republican.

"We don't like for Long to keep attacking our President and I don't have a bodyguard either."

Walk Out on Long

Washington, March 15.—(UP)—Senate Democrats have decided to try to discipline Long by walking out on every speech he makes.

They started yesterday. It is an old formula, known as the "absent treatment" and there is good reason for believing the Senators got the idea at the White House where Senator Joseph T. Robinson, majority leader, and the new members were entertained Monday.

Long jumped to his feet yesterday and began to talk during the debate on the work-relief bill. Democrats began moving toward the door immediately, until only Carter Glass was seated on the Democratic side. He had to stay because he is chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee and therefore, is in charge of the work-relief bill. Only seven Senators were seated on the Republican side of the chamber.

The galleries, however, were packed.

Third Party Suggested

Omaha, Neb, March 15.—(UP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, the radio priest, became the leading candidate for standard bearer of a united Third Party to be formed here next July as a result of his radio address Monday night, Roy M. Harrop, national chairman of the Farmer-Labor Party, said yesterday.

Harrop has received many communications, demanding that Coughlin be drafted, if necessary, to lead the movement, he said. Before the priest delivered his answer to Gen. Hugh Johnson, Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota was the favorite.

Harrop has invited Coughlin Senator Huey P. Long, Upton Sinclair, Norman Thomas and General Jacob Coxey to come here for the Third Party convention.

As a result of the debates between Coughlin, Johnson and Long the issue for the 1936 campaign has been made clear, Harrop said.

"Life Begins at 40"

Fun Crams New Rogers Film Comedy

Picture-lovers who find Will Rogers' brand of humor irresistible.... and this includes the entire screen public — are delighted with the news that his latest picture, "Life Begins at 40", coming to the Belle Tomorrow (Saturday) and Monday, matinee daily, is crammed with fun.

Advance reports label this Fox Film, suggested by the Walter B. Pitkin book hit, a bang-up laugh riot. Critics say it easily eclipses previous Rogers favorites, "David Harum" and "Judge Priest".

Rogers portrays a double-fisted, tender-hearted country editor who prove that the years after forty are the best and goes in quest of the fountain of youth. He launches a series of situations that smash the funny bone to smithereens.

"Life Begins at 40", relates the romance of a young school teacher and a youth "railroaded" to prison. The shrewd editor brings to light facts that clear the boy, and stir up a hornet's nest of fun in the process.

Serenades the Hogs

As an unconscious humorist, he stampedes two hundred hogs by his coy hog-calls. You simply must see Will Rogers as a porker siren. The pied piper of Hamlin had nothing on America's one and only comedian.

Funny-bones will be splintered in another situation, where Will and his favorite enemy iron out their differences with pistols.

Throughout the picture, homely wisdom falls from the lips of America's beloved commentator on the thousand and one foibles of the human comedy. They are bright, apt, and good-natured.

But the romance in "Life Begins at 40", is as compelling as the humor.

All in all, this picture, suggested by the Walter Pitkin book hit, has wide appeal. It is Will enjoyed by young and old.

George Marshall's direction of this production is grand.

Ably abetting Will Rogers in his campaign of fun and romance are Rochelle Hudson and Richard Cromwell in the romantic parts, George Barbier, Jane Darwell, Slim Summerville, Sterling Holloway, Thomas Beck, Roger Imhof, Charles Sellon, John Bradford and Ruth Gillette.

Excellent Short Treats

"The Tortoise and the Hare", another of those very popular Walt Disney Silly Symphony Kartunes in full beautiful technicolor. Dorothy Stone and Bob Hope in the tuneful musical comedy "Paree, Paree". The Belle Latest News, and "The Mystery Mountain".

AT THE CAPITOL

"Man of Aran"

Magnificent and Unusual Film Wins Universal Praise

Colman King, Margie Dirrane, the central characters of "Man of Aran" Today at the Capitol Theatre, are not actors, but natives of the barren, sea-beaten islands off the western coast of Ireland, where the action of the picture takes place. They play themselves. The sea is the villain and the quest for good the plot of this peasants-among-peasants picture, which is thrilling entertainment and is winning critical plaudits.

Naturally, the big item in such a picture is the camera work. This is splendid. With only drab greys and speckled whites to deal with, the educated lens has done right by the cause of sheer beauty and rugged grandeur. Life is harsh and so is the scenery. The Aran natives reversely are pictured as brave and indomitable, unembittered by the rigors of their lot. Mountainous waves smash the rocky shores and set the tempo and tone of the picture.

Said to have been two years in the making, the film bespeaks a canny technique and an inspirational sympathy on the part of director Flaherty and his co-workers. There is practically no dialogue except short sentences of warning, advice, comment on the hazards of shark-hunting. This economy of dialogue is part of the general artistry.

Glorifying human fortitude and character and possessed of a grim splendour, it's the kind of picture everybody will endorse.

There was some thought of bringing over the cast to make personal appearances with the picture on this side of the Atlantic, but the idea was abandoned. The sturdy "Man of Aran" would be lost in civilization.

Second Feature Attraction

"The Camels Are Coming"

You'll laugh as seldom before at Jack Hulbert's hilarious argument with a balky camel. He's up in the air as an aviator sleuth in search of romance and smugglers. It's a riot—read what the Press has to say about the comedy of comedies:

It is interesting to have Jack Hulbert challenging Harold Lloyd to such exhilarating purpose in the current new films. "The Camels are Coming" is certain to be enormously popular.—News Chronicle.

"The Camels are Coming" also has the merit of telling a good story amid authentic backgrounds of ancient and modern Egypt. An expertly happy performance by Jack Hulbert. Picture-goers will find a new and attractive leading woman in Anna Lee.—Daily Mail.

It's the biggest laugh you've ever had, by all means see this excellent show at the Capitol, until Saturday. Srows at 2.30, 7.00, 9.15. Canadian securities were again in moderate demand in Wall Street. Hiram Walker pushed up a full point and among mining issues, McIntyre and Lake Shore gained small fractions. The Dominion bonds were firm, with the 4 percent issue in moderate demand just under 106. The Canadian dollar rose with sterling, getting up 3-16 of a cent to 99 cents.

Steels were held back by the controversy in Washington over the industry's price-making. Oils and dairy issues failed to recover. But farm implements, mail orders, alcohols; non-ferrous metals, motors, miscellaneous, industrials, and scattered rails and utilities all pushed up moderately.

POTSHERDS DATE TO PROPHET'S DAY

the site of ancient Lachish, greatest fortress in the southern area of the Kingdom of Judah, adds irrefutable testimony of the accuracy of the Bible in its account of the period of the kings. It was declared this newest find, enriching the facts already assembled by archaeology, will go far toward causing a revision of the skeptical attitude toward the Biblical accounts which prevails in some quarters.

Lachish was the fortress which offered resistance to Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, when he swept down upon Judah after King Zedekiah had renounced the allegiance of his kingdom to Babylon. Jeremiah was the great prophet of that era who had been preaching during the reigns of Josiah, Jehoahaz, Jenoiakim, Jeholachin until the days of Zedekiah, covering the period between 638 B. C. and 593 B. C.

The Starkey discovery represents one of the few extra-Biblical document on Scripture. No archaeologist had believed the humid earth of Palestine would be able to preserve any document through the centuries.

LINDBERGH TRIAL COSTS ITEMIZED

alone were more than $3,000.

Bills or meals and lodgings for the State officials, witnesses and others participating in the trial at the State's expense, came to $5,400. Of his sum, $3,441.57 was a bill from the Hotel Hildebrecht in Trenton, where the prosecution used the third floor during trial.

"Some of the bills are outrageously high", Attorney General David T. Wilentz declared yesterday. "Some of them will not be approved by me."

Only one item in the Federal bill was definitely known. That was the expense of Arthur H. Koehler. He estimated that the work he did in tracing a stick of wood from the Lindbergh home at Hopewel, through South Carolina back to the Bronx and eventually into Hauptmann's home there had cost the government $12,000.

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann visited her husband in the death house at Trenton yesterday. She will not be permitted another visit until next month. She said her husband had asked for a picture of herself and their 16-months-old boy.

Only Two Pieces Furniture Saved And no Insurance Carried

While the father was absent on a relief job, the mother away engaged on part time work, and the children at school, fire which broke out, from some unknown source in the small, one-storey frame home owned by Chas. Phelps at the east end of Donald Street outside the city limits on Thursday afternoon completely consumed the dwelling. Only the bedding from one bed was saved by a youthful neighbor who rushed into the burning building by a rear door. Mrs. Phelps arrived at the home in time to see the little home a complete loss. Members of the local fire department, apprised of the fact, that burning embers were being fanned on the wind toward other homes within the city limits arrived in time to find the structure all ablaze and salvage out of the question. Only two pieces of equipment had been taken by them. They were forced to stand by until the fire had burned itself out. No insurance was carried on the home or contents, according to Mrs. Phelps.

MAYOR TO ATTEND MONTREAL PARLEY

Will Urge Governments to Assume 100 Per Cent Relief

As a member of the executive of the Association of Ontario Mayors, Mayor Geo. O. Tice will attend the meeting of Dominion Mayors to be held at the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal on March 25 it was recommended at a brief committee meeting of the council held last evening.

One of the chief aims of the mayors of the Dominion at the convention will be to urge the federal and provincial government to assume 100 per cent of all direct relief, shared equally by the two governments, thus relieving the municipalities of the heavy burden. This had been previously moved at a meeting of Ontario mayors held in London, Ontario. Mayor Tice had the privilege of seconding this motion.

Members of the city fire department will be given six new mattresses, if a second recommendation passed last evening is accepted by council at their regular meeting.

After a lapse of several years since the last overhaul and cleaning, the clock in the city hall tower is to be given a second one, it was also recommended. Although much higher price had been asked, Jack Roblin, clock custodian agreed to accept the job of cleaning for a flat sum of $50.

EGG PRICES ARE HALF OF YEAR AGO

Consumer Demand Poor Even at Present Low Prices

Current egg prices are approximately half those quoted a year ago, due in the main to the steady decline of the past two weeks. At which point the present decline will be checked is not known, dealers having been mostly unsuccessful to date in creating sufficient consumer demand at what they call 'ridiculously' low prices.

Until Feb. 25 of this year the egg trade virtually took a new lease on life when prices skyrocketed nearly 12 cents per dozen in about a week. This, it is stated in the trade, proved the undoing of the market, for consumers flatly refused to buy with prices jumping so briskly. Since then the market has been moving lower, and even yesterday the decline was again extended to set up new low levels for the season.

What effect the present market action will have on egg production this year is not at present known. Some dealers believe there is still plenty of time for a general readjustment to more seasonable levels, but it is contended that this will be hampered if milder weather sets in earlier than usual. Current supplies of eggs in storage and in warehouses are substantially in excess of last year's totals, and the situation, it is said, will become more aggravated if the new production period rolls around too soon.

The immediate future of the market hinges on a brisk revival in consumer demand. With eggs now definitely established at prices in some cases 50 per cent. below a year ago, it is believed that demand should be showing signs of picking up, but when this will take place is not known, nor will the trade commit itself in the way of predictions.

GRILLS GARAGE RETAIN TROPHY BEAT PICTON 6-5

Trenton Default in The Round Robin Series

FAIR GAME

"Sandy" Burrows Presents His Trophy at End of Match

Successfully defending the Burrows trophy emblematic of the Belleville and District hockey championship Grills' Garage sextette downed their challengers of the honors, Picton, by the score of 6 to 5 before a good crowd of spectators at the Belleville Arena last night. The game was filled with thrills, when a second period out-break of high sticks and general roughness was entered into, to brings the patrons to their feet, but. this outburst passed from the limelight as the teams settled away to play fast clean hockey in the final stanza. A second challenger for the district hockey honors, Trenton, dropped out at the last minute and before they could be substituted, much to the annoyance of those sponsoring the series. Following the game and victory Mr. S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, donor of the fine large trophy personally presented the "mug" to the victorious Grills' team it being their second successful attempt in winning these honors.

Grills opened on the offensive and carried too much speed for the invading Prince Edward County pucksters, scoring in the first minute of play. The local squad gave their net custodian plenty of protection, a trait, that was sadly missing on the part of the Picton club. Although the invaders evened the count in the initial stanza, Grills pulled away to lead 3 to one as the second period opened. Goals by Hudgins and Grinrod knotted the count in the middle frame, when plenty of rough hockey was played and seven penalties were meted out by Referee Truiasch. The homesters out-scored Picton three to two to win the title in the last 20 minutes. Picton were purely on the offensive in the last few minutes, but the successful defensive work of the Grills team saved the day.

Jim Semark, with three goals to his credit led the scorers of the night as Canning, Howie and McGuire all notched a single counter. McDonald bulged the twine twice for Picton as Hudgins, Hepburn and Grinrod added one each. Grills' clever passing game and better system of defensive protection in their own zone proved the medium of victory.

The line-ups:

Grills' Garage—Goal,Davidson; defence, W. Henn and G. Ethier; centre, Howie; wings, Semark and Day; subs, Canning, McGuire, Harvey and T. Henn.

Allan Cup Playdowns

By The Canadian Press

Port Arthur Bearcats lack little of the potency, that carried Fort William's Thundering Herd to the 1934 Allan Cup finals it was apparent today.

This year's representatives from Thunder Bay showed a clean pair of heels to Winnipeg Falcons, senior champions of Manitoba, last night and won the first game of their Allan Cup playdown series 3-0.

The second game is Saturday night with the Bearcats favored to scramble into the western final against either Kimberley Dynamiters Edmonton Superiors, or North Battleford.

Dynamites and Superiors are even after playing two games of their inter-provincial series. The British Columbia champions won the first game 3-1 but last night the Superiors, kings of Alberta hockeydom, came back to win by the same score.

Westboro won the Ottawa and District Amateur Hockey Association intermediate title by defeating Cornwall 6-5 and taking the round 17-7. Victory meant the right to meet Ottawa Canadiens in a series at Ottawa next Monday and Wednesday, the winners to enter Allan Cup playdowns.

The O.H.A. junior "A" situation was somewhat clarified last night when Oshawa Majors defeated Kitchener-Waterloo 4-1 in the first of their best of three series for the "A" group title. They meet again in Toronto Saturday with Oshawa favored to win.

Plans are being formulated to stage an inter-city swimming meet in the spacious Albert College swimming pool the latter part of this month. Already applications have been received from Peterboro and Kingston "Y" while Instructor Ralph Morden, in charge of the local aquatic celebrities, is weekly staging local meets preparing his proteges for this event. Last spring two swimming meets were held at the Albert pool and met with such marked success that it was deemed advisable to repeat the programme this season. Male and female events are to be included on the programme as well as mixed speed events. No diving is being provided for owing to the absence of a suitable diving tower. Mr. Morden is personally conducting this swim meet and further announcements can be looked for before the end of March.

An announcement of importance to all lovers of yachting and aquatics was made today, when it was learned that the South End Athletic Club had procured new properties on the harbour water-front and would soon move their club rooms to the new site. Incidently the S.E.A.C. has changed its name slightly and is to be hereafter known as the South End Yachting and Athletic Association. For some time past the active members of the organization have been diligently working towards this new move and all arrangements have at last been completed. The comparatively new clubhouse, located on Front Street South, will be moved across the road and placed on a new foundation on the water-front. The new premises borders along one hundred feet of water-front and a spacious verandah will be built on the west and south sides, facing the harbour and bay. A work shop will be included in the basement of the building where boats in need of repair may be dry-docked in case of necessity. The old clubhouse will be enlarged considerably and the future boxing bouts of the club are to be held within these rooms. Training quarters for boxers as well as facilities for the sailors and yachtsmen will be included in the new programme being mooted by the South Enders. President Maurice Callaghan announced with all sincerity that the new club would go in for punt and other sailing on a much larger scale in the future. (Looks like a big break for the sailors.)

Although President Joe Shortt would not divulge the name of the donor it is understood, that a member of the local Anglers' Club has donated a fine steel rod, reel and silver silk thread line to the junior member of the club showing the most improvement in casting during the spring training period at the Armouries. Each Wednesday evening the members of the local Anglers' Association can be seen casting their plugs and flies across the Armouries floor with as much precision as though they were trying to lure the elusive trout from a secluded stream early in May. Weekly competitions are being held in both the junior and senior classes and a large gallery of spectators always avail themselves of the opportunity of taking in the activities. Later in the season expert casters in plug and fly casting will give an exhibition at the Armouries, including Canadian champions from the Toronto Anglers' Club.

Walker Grills' "Mechanics" retained the Burrows trophy and the junior championship of Belleville and district, when they downed the Picton challengers 6 to 5 last evening. The Grills aggregation carried a little too much speed and combination for the Prince Edward County lads, but were forced to the limit before victory was claimed. Plenty of action was witnessed throughout as a large contingent of Picton supporters were on hand and made their presence well known. A rather unfortunate accident happened before the game started when Wright of the visiting squad was seriously injured, sustaining a dislocated jaw, when he collided with a Grills player as the teams were warming up. Wright was assisted from the ice and received medical attention. The game was thoroughly enjoyed, that is if the enthusiasm shown by vocal outbursts could be any criterion of the spectators' feelings. At any rate both squads left the ice in good fellowship and the Picton aggregation stated they would be back for another crack at the mug next season. Following the game S. R. "Sandy" Burrows, doner of the fine large district trophy, personally presented the cup to Manager Walker Grills. It was the second time in succession the Grills team had won the honors.

Although two games were advertised for last night, only one was played, the Trenton entry dropping out at the last minute. Exactly one hour before scheduled game time the Trenton management notifed the league executive that they were not sending a team to compete in the post-season series in Belleville. Naturally those at the helm of the loop were in the well-known "tough spot", as it was much too late to substitute another club. After the many extra concessions given the Trenton team in the local city league, the executive in charge of last night's play-off were anything but pleased with the attitude taken by the Trenton club. Had they given the local sponsors sufficient notice the situation could have been remedied, but holding back their decision until the last minute was what annoyed the mentors.

Although the new commission or tribunal to govern all baseball in Belleville has not been announced fully yet, it was officially stated last night, that Art Young and Ray Carr were to represent the new organization at the semi-annual meeting of the C.O.B.L. at Oshawa tomorrow. The association will be officially entered and registered by these men. A full executive meeting of the new body will likely be called on Monday next.

BOXING FANS ENJOY BOUTS AT AIRPORT

Johnny Gorman Wins Decision Over Howard Wheeler

NINE BOUTS

Fred Parry of This City Defeats Dave Harris Easily

Trenton, March 15 (Special) — Boxing fans of the district were treated to one of the finest cards seen in this locality for some time, when about eight hundred people including many of the fair sex attended the program at the airport last night. The card was presented by the Relief Project with the permission of Wing-Commander G. O. Johnson, M.C. officer commanding. The judges were J. Saylor, Trenton, R. Leigh, Project No. 28 and Col. G. Smith of the R.C.A.F. Bert Wells of Belleville refereed to the satisfaction of all. Sgt. Major Wibberley of the R.C.A.F. announced the fighters as they entered the ring and Sgt. A. O'Neill was on the bell.

The first bout between Fred Parry of Belleville Stewart-Warner A.A.C. and Dave Harris of the Project, saw the former win a decision but as Harris left the ring covered with blood, he was cheered by the crowd for his gameness. Harris took plenty of punishment from the well-known Parry.

Len Maracle of the project and Joey Miller tangled in the second but the many clinches spoiled the bout from the cash customers' view. Both boys have improved since their last appearance. Maracle was given the decision.

Bobby Schroder of Trenton and Gordon Woods exchanged punches and the 'bout was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. Woods gave some hard punishment but Schroder showed plenty of grit although he did not get the decision. Schroder was floored a couple of times but stayed for the count as he rested.

"Scotty" Kline made his appearance to the fans of the district after a long lay-off. Scotty put on a fine show for the first two rounds but he lacked the condition to carry on and Eddy Bruce of the Project gained the decision. The boys handed out plenty of punishment and the bout was enjoyed by all.

Bobby Vieau of the S.W.A.A.C. took a decision from George Smith of Trenton. The bout saw both boys boxing nicely but neither did much damage.

Johnny Teale of the Project added another victory to his string when he gained the decision over Bob Cook of the S.W.A.A.C. The boys were very evenly matched and the fans were pleased with the exhibition.

The next bout between Art Angel of the S.W.A.A.C. and Chuck Brown of the Project started as a dancing lesson but ended with plenty of action before Angel was declared the victor.

Dick Richardson of Toronto failed to show up for his scheduled bout with Bill Crawford of the S.W.A.A.C. so an exhibition with Jack Lawrence of the same club was staged. It was a good exhibition of boxing but the light taps and soft blows did not go over with the fans.

The main show between Howard Wheeler of the Stewart-Warner Alemite A.C. and Johnny Gorman of the Project again proved the pick of the night. Gorman took every blow and worked in on Wheeler's style. Gorman was awarded the decision after a fine battle. This is the second win for Gorman over Wheeler but the vest pocket edition of Dempsey has taken the honors from the Irish lad, who would rather play soccer than fight any day.

Gorman is considered as the district featherweight champion.

Fight Summary:

Fred Parry, S.W.A.A.C., decision over Dave Harris, Project, three rounds at 140 pounds.

Len Maracle, Project No. 28, decision over Joey Miller, Trenton, five rounds at 126 pounds.

Eddy Bruce, Project No. 28, decision over Scotty Kline, Trenton, four rounds at 145 pounds.

Bobby Vieau, S.W.A.A.C., decision over George Smith, Trenton, five rounds at 160 pounds.

Art Angel, S.W.A.A.C., decision over Chuck Brown, Project No. 28, five rounds at 137 pounds.

Bill Crawford, S.W.A.A.C., and Jack Lawrence, S.W.A.A.C., three round exhibition.

Johnny Gordan, Project No. 28, decision over Howard Wheeler, S.W.A.A.C. five rounds at 126 pounds.

These daily gatherings offer a vivid cross-section of the thoughts, ambitions, and ideals of an entire people; and it is only one more step to the questions, "Where are all these opinions created?" "What basic agency can be held responsible for the origination of so great a number of ideas?"

The answer lies in a great unconfined power in which the Canadian public places its faith; an institution in which ideas form an ever-changing picture yet maintain a firm grip upon the imagination, the desires, and the buying thoughts of the entire world.

Boston Bruins, Champions of American Division of N.H.L., Defeating Amerks by 5-4

Will Meet Toronto For Title, First Game in Boston, March 23

SCORE MANY GOALS

63 Scoring Points in Three Games Played Thursday

(By the Canadian Press)

Boston Bruins are champions of the National Hockey League's American Division and now all that remains to be settled before the playoffs start is how Chicago and New York Rangers will finish.

Frank Patrick's team clinched the right to meet Toronto Maple Leafs for the League title last night by defeating Americans 5-4 in New York. They play the first game of a best-of-five series with the Torontonians in Boston March 23.

Chicago aided Boston to the section title by dropping their game with Detroit Red Wings in Chicago last night 4-3. In the playoffs they probably will meet Montreal Marcons who finished second in the International Section.

It won't be finally decided until either Saturday night, when Chicago play Bruins on Sunday in New York when Black Hawks and Rangers clash. Hawks need only two points in three games for a clear title to the second spot.

Montreal Canadiens, third in the International section, gave their probable opponents in the post-schedule series another trimming last night, when they took Rangers 5-4 in Montreal. They beat them 4-3 in New York Tuesday and took the season series four games to two.

Seven Goals in Period

Sixty-three scoring points were added to the records from last night's three games, delighting the players who got them and can point with pride, when discussing next year's contract.

The scorers at Chicago were particularly generous, handing out 14 assists on the seven goals. On two of the Chicago goals they gave credits to four players, the scorer and three assistants. The nine goals at Montreal produced 13 assists and the nine at New York 11.

Seven of the goals in the Ranger-Canadien contest were scored in the second period, Habitants ripping five markers past Davie Kerr in ten minutes after Rangers had scored twice. The New Yorkers came close to tieing up the game in the closing minutes when, with Harold Starr, Ranger defenceman, on the penalty bench, they scored two goals in 21 seconds.

Leroy Goldsworthy got two of the Canadien counters and Jack McGill, Nels Crutchfield and Wildor Larochelle the others. Frank Boucher, Cecil Dillon, Bill McKenzie and Lynn Patrick were the Ranger marksmen.

Scuffle at Detroit

A rough-and-tumble scrap between Ebbie Goodfellow, Detroit, and Art Wiebe, Chicago, in the second period featured the Detroit-Chicago game. The players were down on the ice wrestling with each other twice before they could be separated and given major penalties.

Detroit came from behind twice to tie the score in the first period and after they got a goal lead for the first time in the middle frame, Chicago took their turn at knotting the count. Wings settled it with a goal half way through the final period.

Johnny Gottselig scored two of the Hawk goals and Paul Thompson the other. Scotty Bowman, Cooney Weiland, Johnny Sorrell and Larry Aurie marked up scores for Jack Adams team.

Just to show those reports about a strike in their camp were untrue, Americans scored two goals in 13 seconds in attempt to tie the score in the dying moments of their game with Boston. They had come from behind in the second period to tie things up after Boston's brace of first period goals but couldn't overcome the trio Bruins scored in the second and third.

Jerry Shannon, Eddie Shore, Nels Stewart, Charlie Sands and Peggy O'Neill shared the Bruin goals and Red Conn, Art Chapman and Lorne Carr got the American counters, Carr sniping two. Chapman was high scorer with his goal and two assists.

OLYMPICS TOP INTERNATIONAL

Defeat Tecumsehs 5-1 With Scoring Splurge in Overtime

(By the Canadian Press)

With London, Detroit, and Cleveland assured of their playoff positions, the race for the fourth position occupied major attention in the International Hockey League today.

One of the two teams in the running for the lower bracket, Buffalo and Syracuse, the Stars have the best chance to make the grade.

Last night Bisons lost an opportunity to take the coveted spot by losing 4-3 to Cleveland and now, with one more game to play than Buffalo, the Stars could just make it. That is, provided they win all their remaining games.

Detroit came through with an overtime scoring splurge to defeat London Tecumsehs 5-1 and take over first place alone. Cooper's first period goal for Detroit was matched in the second frame with one for London by Eric Pettinger, Regina playmaker and the third period was scoreless.

FRED PLUMMER WINS HANDICAP

50 Yard Free Style Race Held in Y. M. C. A. Pool

At the regular weekly meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Swimming Club the feature event of the evening's programme was a 50 yard free style handicap race. Fred Plummer, a junior member of the group who received a 15 second time allowance over the scratch man, was winner of the event. Next Wednesday evening the members of the club will compete for the weekly prize in the 50 yard breast stroke.

In order to stimulate interest and speed up the competition, a prize is being awarded the winner of the special handicap event which it is planned to run off at every meeting of the club for the next few weeks. Toward the end of the month a swimming meet on a much larger scale will take place in the city and on that occasion several out of town clubs are expected to be represented at the meet.

MADOC VICTORS IN FINAL GAME OF CENTRAL LOOP

Defeat Tweed 6-3 And Much The Best in Every Department

ICE FIRST CLASS

Jerry Keeler Outstanding For The Winning Squad

Madoc, Mar. 15—(Special)— Madoc Intermediates won the Central County League championship by decisively beating Tweed in the Madoc Arena by the score of 6-3 on Wednesday evening. Despite the mid weather, the ice was in good condition and the play was fairly fast. Referees Watson and Rollins handled a good game, only three penalties being handed out and those for minor offences. Hulin, Alexander and Henderson turned in their usual good game but Jerry Keeler, the midget centre player of the locals was outstanding. Akey worked well with Henderson and was accountable for two goals and two assists. For Tweed, Rupert turned in a nice game as did Shanques.

1st Period

Play centred around the Tweed net, Henderson having two nice shots on goal. Tweed opened the scoring when McGuire bulged the twine on some sloppy clearing by West. Akey, Alexander and Ross all missed nice chances to tie the score. Shortly before the period ended Henderson launched a long shot on which Alexander circled the net, picked up the rebound and banged it in.

2nd Period

In this period Madoc carried the play to the visitors and from then on were never headed. Henderson put the homesters one up when he carried the puck from his own blue line, split the defence and barged in on Thompson and sank the puck home. Two scrambles took place in front of the Tweed net but the goalie kept them all out. Tweed missed a nice chance to tie up the score when McGuire shot past an open net. Shanques received the first penalty of the game when he was chased for tripping Ross at centre ice. Akey put the locals two up when he made no mistake on the rebound of Alexander's shot.

3rd Period

Less than a minute had elapsed in the final period when Akey put the game on ice when on a beautiful end to end play he accepted Henderson's pass and coasted in on Thompson to put Madoc three up. Some loose defensive work cost Madoc a goal when Meraw passed to McGuire who beat Hulin from ten feet out. Madoc scored again on a play in which Henderson scored on a nice pass from Akey. Tweed claimed Henderson was inside the goal crease when he received the pass but the referees allowed the score. Alexander made a nice play on the face off in front of the Tweed net hard luck robbing him of a goal.

Bell was chased for rough work and shortly after Akey was sent to the cooler for tripping Quinn. On his return he made a nice pass out from behind the net to Keller who sank the puck behind Thompson. Tweed put on the power play and scored a goal from a scramble with every man except the goalie inside the Madoc blue line. Kelly Rupert almost scored another when he split the Madoc defence but Hulin came out of his net to make a miraculous save, and the game ended with the Tweed team pressing hard.

Line-ups:

Madoc—Goal, Hulin; defence, West, Embury; centre, Henderson; wings, Alexander and Akey; subs, Noble, Keller, Ross.

Tweed—Goal, Thompson; defence, A. Geraldi, G. Geraldi; centre, McGuire; wings, Meraw and Quinn; subs, Rupert, Leal, Bell, Shanques.

Referees—J. Watson, Madoc; B. Rollins, Tweed.

Frank Boucher, Ranger Centre Peer of Pivot Men in Loop

Completing his 14th Season in Pro. Company

By ELMER DULMAGE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, March 15—(CP)—Gentleman Frank Boucher, who is something more than a shunner of penalty boxes stands out in the National League today as one of the most durable hockey players of all time. He mentioned to Manager Lester Patrick of New York Rangers the other day that the Boucher big league days would extend over another couple of seasons.

There are 14 years of major league activity behind the dark-haired Ranger centre—or the 14th will be behind him in a week or so—and the world hasn't a pivot player his equal. Only yesterday the Canadian Press listed Boucher at centre of the 1935 all-star N.H.L. team chosen by sports writers.

He doesn't look it, but Gentleman Frank is the daddy of the all-stars—by a margin of plenty. He is six years older than Eddie Shore, who occasionally gets himself called a veteran and 11 years older than Harvey Jackson who is 25. He's outlasting Bill and Bun Cook with whom he has played since the fall of 1927.

Boucher started his big league career when Howie Morenz was still chasing pucks for Stratford, Ont., amateur teams. He has seen the rising Morenz, the Morenz that topped all centre players in his great days. And now, when the Stratford streak has tapered off, his successor is the durable Boucher.

Frank signed an Ottawa Senator contract in 1922 and he and King Clancy made their N.H.L. debut together in a game at Hamilton. The following season he was sold to Vancouver Millionaires, of the Patrick-operated Pacific Coast League and wore a Vancouver uniform until Conny Smythe assembled the Rangers in 1927.

Free of Injuries

He is as effective as ever perhaps because only time has been chasing him and not the injury jinx. He has skated neatly around all kinds of trouble. In his 14 seasons he has spent an average of less than 12 minutes a year on the penalty bench. He's been waved off five times in the last three campaigns.

Frank and his brothers Billy and George had made Boucher a pretty well-known name in hockey before any of the other 1933 all-stars started big league operations. Incidentally, only one of them—Earl Seibert of Rangers—ever played in the minors. The Kitchener boy spent two seasons with Springfield in the Canadian-American League.

Lorne Chabot, 34 year old before all-star recognition came his way, broke in with Rangers in 1927 and later played with Toronto and Montreal Canadiens before he went to Chicago as successor to the late Chuck Gardiner. Chabot made the jump straight from Port Arthur's Allan Cup team.

Shore started with Regina Capitals in the Prairie League—then a major circuit—and also played for Edmonton Eskimos before going to Boston. Charlie Conacher and Jackson finished their amateur careers as juniors in the spring of 1929 and in the fall of that year joined the Leafs.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Faith moved again more decisively to the locked door. "This is all too melodramatic and absurd," she said angrily. "I'm sure this isn't your villa. If I call, the servant who let me in will——"

"He's deaf," Roger remarked with convincing indifference. "As for the villa——" He sauntered over to an ebony tabouret and picked a cigarette from a sandalwood box. "I've got the run of it. My charming hostess, Lili Rosen, won't be back till dawn. I doubt," he added, "if you know Lili. She doesn't move in your world." This seemed to amuse him. "A long time ago,' he said enjoying himself, "Madame Rosen got mixed up in a scandal. Her husband found her with another man. Think of that!"

Faith paced up and down, folding her ermine collar high and close around her throat. The smell of incense in the horrible room got into her nostrils. Her heart drummed unevenly.

Roger hummed a popular tune, and lit another cigarette. "I've no kick coming," he said complacently. "Lili's a swell sport. She——"

"Who planned that telephone message?" Faith swung around on him.

"What good would it do if I told you?" Roger's smile slanted across his narrow face. "Can't you guess?"

"Gertrude Stevens!" Faith said aloud. It was all so very clear now. When Gertrude had found out at luncheon that Hunter had planned to dine alone with Faith on New Year's Eve, she read the signs, and she must have gone wild——

Roger didn't deny anything. "There's a fiery gal for you." Hands in his pockets, he padded across to the gramaphone," and put on a jazz record.

He had another drink. "Come on baby, let's dance. Might as well pass the time away."

The cocktails were beginning to affect him. Faith realized with a new terror. What was he waiting for? She got behind a teakwood chair, concentrating all her will in her eyes.

"This isn't going to get you anywhere." Her voice was very quiet. "I'll make it worth your while if you will let me out of here, Roger."

"It's worth my while as it is." He came on determinedly, snatching at her coat. "Gee, you're a beauty!"

Faith was still as a white flower in the hush of a coming storm. Her stillness strangely disturbed and disconcerted Roger.

"Damn it, can't you be nice to a fellow?" he muttered sulkily. "I won't eat you if you dance with me."

She thought quickly. There was just one chance if she dared take it. "Is my being nice to you included in the program, Roger?" A shot in the dark, but it told.

"I'd nearly forgotten that." Roger turned and made his rather unsteady way to a red lacquered screen at the farther end of the room.

So there was a program! In a few seconds he vanished behind the screen. Faith ran to the red silk curtains shrouding the window. She had felt air sift between their fringe. The windows must be open! But before she could be sure, Roger was back carrying a bucket of ice with a champagne bottle.

Faith's hand fluttered from the curtain to her white fur collar. She must get him off guard again before she moved.

"Come away from the window." He sounded quite sober. But Faith drifting back to him, noticed that his hands trembled as he released the cork. And he spilled wine, pouring it into two glasses. "Lili forgot the caviar," he muttered.

Then he lifted his glass with a swagger of his narrow shoulders, and a glitter in his eyes. "Better drink," he said. "I'll have to muss you up a bit, later on, baby. But it won't mean anything."

Faith couldn't breathe for a second. "Muss me up?" she whispered.

Roger laid a finger across his lips. "Mustn't tell tales before it's time. Give you stage fright," he murmured.

Faith moistened her dry lips with the wine. "Put on another record—and I may dance."

The gramaphone was across the wide room that was cluttered with tables and tabourets. Roger, smirking, started for it, almost reached it while Faith edged back to the window.

Suddenly a motor horn sounded eerily near. To Faith, it was like a voice calling. She didn't have to be told. That was Hunter—coming to find her alone with Roger—

Roger whirled about. She saw him narrow, glistening with a kind of feline grace as he bounded for her. "Here's where I act up, baby". He had her by the arm.

Faith was strong, but not strong enough. She hit out with her free hand. "Let me go, you devil—"

Roger laughed. "It's the second time someone will catch me kissing you," he said. "And I've waited for it."

Faith seemed suddenly to relax and yield. "Oh, what's the use?" she sighed, and turned her lovely face toward him.

His grasp tightened but with less vigilance. With an unexpected wrench, Faith tore herself frantically away and raced for the window. The hum of the car on the driveway seemed to fill the night with thunder. If it were Hunter, and she opened the curtains now, he would see her, and whatever she said or did, he would never believe

Roger was after her again, his sallow face twisted with fury. In his haste he tripped against one of the ebony tabourets, and fell forward, cursing.

Faith took a precious second to peer between the curtains. Headlights of a powerful car blazed on the gravelled drive, turning the grass and flowers livid. Heart seemed to die within her as she saw Hunter fling himself from the machine.

He was out of her sight now, at the door of the villa, his finger on the bell that whirred through the house.

Roger, picking himself up with an oath, lunged forward. The bell had stopped so the man must have let Hunter in, Faith thought desperately. Not a second to lose.

She slipped out of her ermine coat and threw it, spreading, at Roger's head. It caught and tangled about him, blinding him for the second it took her to slip around the curtains.

The latch was off the casement window that opened inwards. Faith climbed across the sill with a ripping of her black tulle. Half sobbing, she stared down at shadowy flowers in a bed below. Then, clinging to the ledge, she closed her eyes and dropped.

The damp smell of earth and flowers rose to met her. Luckily the distance wasn't far. But she was dazed and shaken, and crouched there, huddled against the wall.

From the window come Hunter's voice almost unrecognizable with rage. "Where's my wife, you filthy swine? —That's her coat——"

And then Roger murmuring, pretending to cover her flight as if she——

"You and she——? Oh my God!" Hunter's voice sounded again, harsh with shock.

Faith waited to hear no more. Her senses reeled with panic and horror. Hunter might kill Roger, but he believed Roger's lies. He believed that she, Faith, had gone to this house to meet Roger, and that now she had escaped rather than face discovery.

The crash of breaking glass jangled from the room. Hunter must have swept the bottle and glasses off the tray.

Faith picked herself up from the bruised flowers, and wildly, blindly, ran up the driveway. She swayed as she ran, her hand to her heart.

FAITH DISMISSES HUNTER

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

Faith staggered past the gates of the villa Rose and on to the white road that led back to Monte Carlo. She had only one fear now: that the headlights of Hunter's car would sweep around the driveway and pick her out in the disarray of her wilted tulle, the tossed pale gold of her hair. She looked guilty, Faith thought in horror.

Her little slippered feet with the twinkling buckles, tapped along the road as she ran unevenly a few steps. Stopped and stared over her shoulder.

There was a lull in traffic along the road. The spangle of lights caught Faith like a frightened bird in a web. "I've got to get back to the hotel," she moaned. But at the sound of a motor coming around the corner, she shrank aside under the stab of headlights.

The car stopped with a grinding of brakes. "In trouble?" a pleasant voice enquired.

A young man with a felt hat pulled rakishly over his brow, leaned from a cream white sports roadster. "Going anywhere?" He was as matter of fact as if it were the most usual thing in the world to find a beautiful young woman wandering alone on New Year's Eve.

With sudden decision, Faith climbed in beside him. "Will you take me to the Hotel de Paris?"

"Sure." He was a very wise young man. With hardy a glance at Faith's set white face, he reached into his pocket and produced a flash. "Good old U.S.A. habit of mine—" A smile flickered on his disillusioned young lips, and the speedometer quivered up to 70.

Brandy. Faith took a grateful sip. In silence they raced along. By the time they reached the Hotel de Paris, she had gathered herself together so that she could thank this discreet stranger, and walk through the hall without feeling too conspicuous.

Ten o'clock. Only two hours since she had left the hotel. The upper corridors were empty as Faith moved along them with the stilted precision of a toy wound to the snapping point. There was set purpose in her mind. It had been there ever since she jumped from the window of that ghastly house. She must find Gertrude Stevens.

The door of the Dawtrey's Suite was unlocked. Faith crossed the small foyer and opened the door of the salon.

Gertrude, in ivory brocade, sat at a card table playing solitaire. At Faith's noiseless entrance, she sprang up with a startled cry. The next instant she recovered her wits.

"Why Faith, where have you been? You look—"

Faith advanced upon her. "You know where I've been." Suddenly the tightness in her had broken with the fury of a storm. "How did you manage it?" she said in a queer savage voice that drove Gertrude back against the sofa.

"Manage what?" Gertrude moved nervously around the card table, nearer the bell.

"Better not ring. I saved you once from scandal. I'm not doing it again. You'll have all the scandal you want if you ring." Faith stood, her golden head thrust a little forward, her hands rigid at the sides of her limp black tulle. "How did you manage it?"

Gertrude turned wtih a shrug of her shoulders. "I'll let you do the explaining, my dear." And her dark eyes taunted.

All the harm this woman had done her, swept like a tempest over Faith. She was hardly conscious of her fierce movement as she dipped forward and caught Gertrude by the arm. Her strong young fingers gripped and pushed forcing Gertrude back on the sofa. Held her there.

"You've always hated me, but I didn't think you'd go as far as you went tonight," Faith said in a tense voice. Gertrude collapsed with a whimper of fear, but Faith didn't relax her hold. "Before I let you up, you'll listen to me. You wanted to have your cake and eat it, too. You didn't want to divorce Philip until you saw that Hunter and I might make a go of our marriage. Then you wanted Hunter more than ever. And Philip found another woman, so you saw yourself left out all around unless you made Hunter want to marry you." Faith's grey eyes blazed down. "But you had to get rid of me first, didn't you? And when you couldn't do it any other way, you hired a vile blackmailing gigolo to do it for you. That's the kind of—creature you are!"

"You're hurting me," Gertrude moaned.

"I ought to kill you," Faith said somberly. A sickness of disgust came over her. She let go of the other woman's arm as if the touch of it made her unclean. "It doesn't matter how you managed anything. I'm through with the whole beastly rotten business."

Gertrude got to her feet, her lips a hard crimson gash against the hating white of her face. "Just for that, I'll tell you," she cried. "You will see how much Hunter trusts you—a common girl my husband picked up from the gutter. You've never quite explained how you happened to be with Philip that night, have you?"

Faith looked at her. "Go on," she said.

"I'd do anything to save Hunter from you." Gertrude had lost all control. "That gigolo, that vile little blackmailer as you call him, was your friend, wasn't he? He talked a lot about you and Therese when I met him in Paris. I hadn't any idea he was coming on to Monte——"

But Gertrude couldn't stop giving herself away. "You little fool!" she cried. "Roger's always wanted to get even with you. I telephoned him after lunch. He thought up the whole thing. When Hunter got back late—I saw to that—and you were not here, I only had to hint where he might find you". Gertrude's voice rose to shrillness. "Did you think I'd ever let you take him away from me?"

"So that's it!" Hunter's voice came harshly from the door. Neither of the women moved. Faith stood as if blocked in ice. Hunter seemed like a stranger. His black brows slashed across his pallor, his eyes of a deep and startling blue were fastened on Gertrude with icy contempt. "I listened,' he said. "You had everything fixed very prettily, didn't you, Gertrude?" He clipped his words as if he wanted to get them over with.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper ma said to pop, I bawt a new hat today, Willyum, a sweet little hat, delightfully old fashion in the most up to date manner and I was still trying it on when I noticed a hat box reddy for delivery and the name on it was Mrs. Clawde Cornhouse, Bertha Cornhouse of all people in other werds,

Your ancient enemy by gollies, pop said, and ma said, Dont mention her in the same breath. Well, I was seized with an uncontrollable sispicion and I insisted on having that box opened and sure enough that insidious Cornhouse woman had chosen that very same idennical model, and I had a mental reservation of how she would go around crowing that I was copying her stile and using her for a fashion plate as a criterion to go by, ma said.

So you didn't buy that model, pop said, and ma said, Well naturelly I wanted it more than ever and I wasn't going to abandon it without a struggle, so I asked Madam Dupont if Mrs. Cornhouse had said she was in a hurry for her hat, and the anser was that no she hadn't said so in black and white werds, but she had payed for it and if she wasn't in a hurry for it she was the ony woman in the history of Mrs. Dupont's experience that wasn't and I told her nonsense how redickulous. Bertha Cornhouse was the most gabby, tawkative woman that ever lived, I told her, and invaribly says everything there is to be said and even more to the point of add infinitum, so if she hadn't said she was in a hurry for the hat she just couldn't of been in a hurry for it, and the upshot and outcome of the matter was that Madam Dupont promised not to deliver Bertha Cornhouse's hat for 2 days if I bawt the same model, so now of course I'll be the ferst to be seen with it and if anybody informs me that Bertha Cornhouse is copying my stile I'm not even sure that I'll bother to deny it, because my rule is not to discuss that woman in any way shape or form. After all she hadn't said she was in a hurry for her hat so there wasn't anything really underhand in what I did, was there Willyum? ma said.

Lets just put it down at Mackeavellian or even Napoleonic, pop said, and ma said, Well, that doesn't sound so bad.

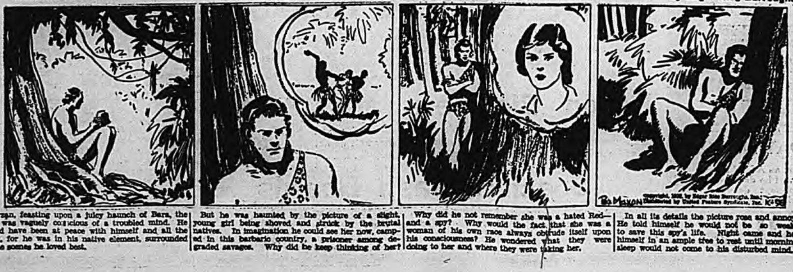
TARZAN THE UNTAMED (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Tarzan, feasting upon a juicy haunch of Bara, the deer, was vaguely conscious of a troubled mind. He should have been at peace with himself and all the world, for he was in his native element, surrounded by the scenes he loved best.

But he was haunted by the picture of a slight, young girl being shoved and struck by the brutal natives. In imagination he could see her now, camped in this barbaric country, a prisoner among degraded savages. Why did he keep thinking of her?

Why did he not remember she was a hated Red—and a spy? Why would the fact that she was a woman of his own race always obtrude itself upon his consciousness? He wondered what they were doing to her and where they were taking her.

In all its details the picture rose and annoyed him. He told himself he would not be so weak again to save this spy's life. Night came and he settled himself in an ample tree to rest until morning. But sleep would not come to his disturbed mind.

CAPONE IS SENT TO A DUNGEON

Claimed He Struck Another Prisoner While Working

San Francisco, March 15 (UP)—A fight with a fellow prisoner, who charged that he received special favors, sent Al Capone into solitary confinement in grim Alcatraz Island Prison, it was revealed.

Capone struck the man, whose name prison officials declined to reveal, as they worked in one of the prison shops. The man, suffering a cut over one eye from Capone's blow, lunged back at the former king of racketeers, and sprained a wrist as he struck a machine.

It was rumored that the object of Capone's sudden attack might have been John Stadig, "collegiate counterfeiter." Stadig escaped from a deputy United States marshal in Richmond, Calif., while enroute to Alcatraz from Portland, Ore.

Recaptured almost a week later at Concord, a few miles from Richmond, Stadig, voiced sharp fears at returning to Alcatraz. He claimed that Capone was a favored prisoner, given special favors. Warden Johnson denied Stadig's story.

Prison officials said the man attacked was sent into solitary confinement at the same time Capone was relegated to a "dungeon."

WIDER TEST OF 'ROBOT' PLANE

Mystery Craft is Under Repairs For Effort to Reach Hawaii

Oakland, Calif., March 15 (AP)—The United States Government's robot-controlled ocean plane was held in its hangar for routine repairs last night while technicians sped arrangements for further tests before undertaking a flight to Hawaii.

Eugene Vidal of the Commerce Department's Air Commerce Bureau, said in Washington that further test flights would be undertaken before essaying the projected 2,400-mile hop.

Vidal reported plans to send the big twin-motored ship farther and farther out over the Pacific in a series of test flights. On one of these, he said, the plane could continue to the islands if conditions proved favorable.

The object of the flights is to make ocean aerial navigation as nearly fool-proof as possible, with a view to facilitating operation of regular trans-Pacific passenger service, scheduled to start this year. Two new instruments carried by the plane are expected to bring ocean flying nearer to a precision basis.

The first of these is a new compass which will utilize a wide variety of radio signals to show the exact position of the plane at all times. The second instrument is an automatic pilot intended to all but do away with the human element in handling of the controls.

BUDGET SURPLUS IS PREDICTION

Excess of Revenue Over Ordinary Expenditure is Small

Ottawa, March 15 (CP)—Finance Minister E. N. Rhodes will have the pleasure of reporting a surplus on ordinary account when he presents his budget to parliament some time within the next fortnight, but the excess of revenue over ordinary expenditures is not expected to be great, according to present indications.

Circumstances attendant upon budget preparation are such that accurate forecast is impossible in view of the fact that changes and new decisions are made right up to the day of presentation.

Revenues have so greatly exceeded those of last year, however, being some $32,000,000 greater during the last 11 months of the year, that a small surplus seems almost a certainty. Ordinary expenditures have also advanced but not to the same extent as revenues increased.

NAVAL SITUATION 'NOT TOO TRAGIC'

First Lord of Admiralty Hopes To See Parley

London, March 15 (AP)—Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons Thursday, Great Britain was disappointed by Japan's denunciation of the Washington naval treaty of 1922 but there was no need to treat the situation "too tragically."

Sir Bolton said he hoped that a naval conference would be held that year as he introduced the government's naval estimates.

"We have already drastically reduced the numbers of our ships," said the head of the Admiralty, "and we cannot further reduce them, but we are willing and anxious for an international agreement for the reduction of size."

Sarnia, Ont., March 16 (CP)—A train journey of 2,000 miles was not hardship for Paper Louis Dionne of Hayter, Alberta, for tonight it had subtracted six years from his age.

New York, March 16 (CP) — The 99 club, composed of women pilots, had their own fashion show here.

There were numerous creations called "take-off," or "Happy Landing," or "Cloud Bank," but what caught the eye of the lady fliers was a non-crushable dinner gown displayed by Leonora Ormsby. It can be worked under flying togs, and is claimed to be quite handy for dropping in unexpectedly somewhere.

New York, March 16 (CP) — Too much is too much, police advised Juan Torres today.

Torres, 20-year-old native of Puerto Rico, is accused by police of burglarizing some 25 or 30 apartments. His downfall, they suspect, was the result of over confidence.

He was noted standing on the curb in front of a West Side apartment building with eight suit cases calmly looking for a taxi. The suitcases, curious detectives found, contained everything from tapestry to alarm clocks.

New York, March 16 (CP) — The city's fire-fighters heard today what constitutes the perfect answer to a question included in the examination for promotions —and they got the information from James E. Finegan, President of the Civil Service Commission.

"Is it possible for a fireman to prefer charges against his superior?" is the question.

"Yes, it is possible under the rules but it would be a damn fool policy," is the answer which Finegan said rates "100 percent."

DEFENCE ATTEMPTS TO SHOW MAN INSANE

State Rests Case Against A. H. Fish Charged With Murder

White Plains, N.H., March 16. — The state rested its case against Albert H. Fish for the slaying of ten-year-old Grace Budd in Supreme Court today after it had called to the stand a Columbia University anatomist to reconstruct, with human bones, the skeleton of a little, decapitated girl.

James Dempsey, defence counsel, moved for dismissal of the dependant on the grounds of insanity and failure to prove a prima facie case. Justice Frederick Close denied the motion and Dempsey called as his first witness, Albert Fish, Jr., son of the defendant.

An immediate attempt to show the old man insane was made by Dempsey through his questioning of young Fish. He told of seeing his father standing on a hill a few yards from the "Wisteria" Cottage where the slaying occurred and where the child's bones were dug up shouting:

"I am Christ. I am Christ."

He also told the jury after the family had moved to New York, he entered his father's room and found him beating himself with a spiked paddle.

SCHOLARS TAUGHT BY RADIO WAVES

Test For Teaching Aid Will be Made in Ontario

Toronto, March 16—As a means of testing radio as a teaching aid, a series of eight radio lectures has been proposed under the auspices of the department of education, commencing April 30, the department notified school officials yesterday. The lectures which it is believed apply to the public schools, will be given in music, literature, history and geography.

They will be a half-hour in length and given on Tuesdays and Thursdays commencing at 3 p.m. Schools not equipped with radio will be able to secure rental equipment for the series.

Two classes in public schools in Toronto have recently been experimenting with the use of radio in these subjects. The experiment has proved successful according to a report to the board of education. American broadcasts were used. One teacher in commenting on the use of the radio, pointed out that Canadian talent should be used and that material should be presented from a Canadian point of view, and according to the age and grade of the pupils.

If Belleville scholars are to enjoy the lectures being broadcast to the schools of Ontario via radio they will have to depend upon the generosity of some donor for the loan of a receiving set, it was stated today by Lt. Col. E. A. Geen chairman of the Board of Education. Local schools are not radio equipped, it was pointed out.

"I believe the idea of broadcasting the lectures is an excellent one" stated the chairman when asked to comment.

STEVEN'S REPORT GIVEN COMMITTEE

Sets Forth His Views on Matters Within Probe Scope

Ottawa, March 16 (CP)—A programme of drastic regulation and control of industry and commerce in Canada, from Hon. H. H. Stevens today was before the Commission on Mass Buying. The former Minister of Trade and Commerce, who also occupied the chairmanship of the Mass Buying body until his resignation from the government, it was learned had submitted to his colleagues of the commission four memoranda setting forth his views as to certain matters coming within its scope.

Establishment of a federal trade and industries commission with wide powers of regulation and control; control of profits over a certain allowed maximum; steps to circumvent losses of sales tax revenue due to price discrimination between large and small distributors of goods; regulations governing financial set-up of companies; these and other innovations in the world of business were, it was learned, submitted by the former trade minister.

With these documents before them, members of the Royal Commission, soon to make its report to the government and eventually to parliament, were spending the week end in study of the proposals. The question to be determined was whether or not the views of Mr. Stevens, as embodied in the memoranda, would be placed in the majority report of the commission. When that report will be completed has not been stated definitely.

RIVERSIDE, Ont., March 15. — (CP)—Desks at St. Thomas Separate School were empty today while the students holidayed as a result of a fire in the building last night. The fire, believed to have been caused by an overheated furnace caused damage estimated at $1,500 and $2,000.

POWERFUL ARMY, AIR, SEA FLEETS, HITLER'S OBJECT

British Plan Does Not Go Nearly So Far as German Aim

HALF MILLION ARMY

Predictions Intensify Feeling Over Probable Demands

Berlin, Mar. 16 (AP)—The German cabinet in secret session today decreed compulsory military training in the Reich and Reichsfuehrer Hitler declared Germany is released from further obligations under the Versailles Treaty.

The German peace army of the future, it is stated, will consist of twelve army corps and thirty-six divisions.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler rushed back to Berlin from Berchtes-Garden today and issued an appeal to the German people in which he emphasized failure of other nations to live up to the reduction of armaments called for in the Versailles Treaty releases Germany from further obligations under the treaty.

Hitler's Appeal.

It compels her to take her own military fate in hand, he declared.

Hitler's appeal emphasized Germany is animated solely by peaceful intentions but rearmament is essential to safeguard the Reich's territorial integrity and to command international respect as a co-guarantor of European peace.

The appeal to the people was a flaming denunciation of the armaments policies of other nations.

Germany's reported action in establishing compulsory military training, an apparent open violation of the Treaty of Versailles, follows by six days the Reich's action in publicly announcing her possession of an air force, also forbidden her by the treaty.

Swift Move

Last Sunday General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Minister of Air, announced the German Sport Air Associations thenceforth would be under the direct orders of the Reichswehr (regular army). He himself, he added, would head the "official" air force.

Today's second swift move in apparent contravention of the treaty also comes just 10 days before Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler is to receive Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, to discuss with him the inclusive European security plan drafted at London early in February.

The security proposals, drafted with co-operation of British and French statesmen, provided for abolition of certain of the military clauses of the Vercailles Treaty but contemplated leaving intact the provision that the left bank of the Rhine be demilitarized.

POST IS FORCED DOWN IN FLIGHT

Cylinders Foul on Engine When Forced Out of Stratosphere

New York, March 16—(AP)—Wiley Post, forced down at Cleveland yesterday while attempting a record-breaking transcontinental flight through the stratosphere, will try again.

Only minor trouble prevented him from completing the Los-Angeles-New York span in less than eight hours, the aviator said. He predicted mail and passenger planes soon would follow his trail.

Post's oxygen supply ran dangerously low as he streaked over western Pennsylvania, so he planned to descend to breathable air and fly on. Dropping from the sub-zero stratosphere, however, the plane plunged into the cloud belt and condensing moisture fouled two cylinders of the Winnie Mae's engine.

"If that hadn't happened," he said, "I would have made it into New York in seven hours and 40 minutes," Post said.

HOUSE RATIFIES REFORM MEASURE

King Accuses Mr. Stevens of Playing to The Gallery

Ottawa, March 16—(CP)—Despite sharp clashes of viewpoint both within and between parties the Bennett Reform Programme is a step nearer enactment today as a result of yesterday's sitting of the House of Commons.

As the House ratified the International Convention dealing with minimum wages preliminary to launching a National Minimum wage Law, Hon. H. H. Stevens, former Minister of Trade and Commerce, broke his silence to find himself challenging his former colleagues in the Government and clashing with Secretary of State C. H. Cahan and Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader.

Mr. King accused Mr. Stevens of playing the gallery and indulging in cheap claptrap and declared the differences of opinion in evidence on the Government side was proof of the soundness of his contention all social legislation should be referred to the Courts before being placed in effect.

Challenged by Mr. Stevens to say whether the Government was sincere or not in presenting its Social Legislation, Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, said he sponsored the Minimum Wage Bill and could speak for the Government in saying it sincerely intended to carry the measure into effect. Mr. Stevens said he would take Mr. Guthrie's assurance at "its face value."

Again the constitutional validity of the Reform Programme was under fire from Mr. King and Hon. Ernest Lapointe (Lib. Quebec East) while Mr. Cahan gave a long statement of his views and concluded with the assertion no one could predict what decision the Courts would come to if consulted. Mr. Cahan declared the British North America Act had been construed too narrowly in the past and within its terms could be found sufficient authority for the course the Dominion Government was pursuing. He claimed it was impossible to predict, what a court would rule on a complicated point of law.

POLICE BILL STILL TO BE DECIDED

Adjournment is Called Twice This Week Before Bill Discussed

Toronto, March 16 (CP)—Centralization of Ontario police under a special director, proposed in a bill of Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck, has still to be decided. A second week has passed in the Legislature without the bill receiving second reading.

Twice last week the measure was talked out by the Conservative opposition before a vote could be taken and a vote was prevented on its two appearances this week by early adjournment of the debate.

Discussion of the bill at the tail end of yesterday's brief session climaxed two hours of heated exchanges between government and opposition.

One bill, however, received third reading yesterday—the bill respecting the guardianship of the Dionne quintuplets. It is the first bill this session to pass through all stages and will become law when signed by Lieutenant-Governor H. A. Bruce.

Turmoil arose early in yesterday's session when Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, accusing Conservatives of asking questions "to embarrass the government," threatened to wipe every question from the order paper. Cries of "dictator" and "Hail Hitler" followed.

Other sharp exchanges came during discussion of the Police Bill. Opposition leader George S. Henry was attacked for sending tanks and machine guns to Stratford during the strike in 1933 and for permitting a "small army" to appear when one Northern Ontario lumberman was in difficulty.

BLINDING SAND STORM IN KANSAS

Damage to Wheat Crops Could Not be Estimated

Kansas City, March 16—(AP)—A blinding, choking dust storm, born on capricious March winds, left the plains States deep in grime and sand today.

Whipped by winds that reached velocities as high as 63-miles an hour, the billowing, dun-colored clouds of dust swept across the eastern sections of Wyoming and Colorado, the western portions of Nebraska and Kansas and Oklahoma and Texas.

Relief for Wyoming and Nebraska was not slow in coming as rain and snow moved in from the northwest.

The damage to wheat fields could not be estimated but reports from Kansas and Oklahoma said the fields were not blowing as bad as the week-end storms of February 23. After that storm the Federal Soil Erosion Service estimated 34,000,000 acres had been damaged in six states.

POETICAL LEGEND, BROADWAY TURN IS GIVEN SLUMP

Archibald Mac Leish And "Panic" Given in Poetry And Sound

STORY OF MORATORIUM

Depression Visualized as Those in Grip of Panic Shout Woe

New York, March 16 (AP)—Broadway has turned the depression into a poetical legend.

The trick was done last night by Archibald McLeish and his "Panic" presented in poetry and motion and sound.

Even Broadway playgoers, accustomed to the odd in entertainment, sat on seat edges through "Panic."

Putting the poetry on the stage were such persons as James Light (direction), Martha Graham (movement), Joe Mielzinger (lighting), and Virgil Thomas (sound).

There were word-sounds as well as words employed in telling the story of the United States banking moratorium in the early part of 1933. Two scenes were used and they were mostly lighting.

Words 'Not Nice'

People held in the grip of Panic whispered and shouted their woe. The weight of the unknown terror of the depression was impressed on the audience by the words themselves, the sound of the words and the movement and grouping of actors.

Many of the words weren't nice, but as observers explained, neither was the 1933 Panic. Some of the words were those short, sharp ones, that make policemen blush.

Through the words and sound and movement ran the story of bankers, who sought to stem the tramping of feet, that translated their noise into bank runs.

Symbols were thick in the play. Symbols like ticker tape, a svelt mistress of the great banker, tattered mobs in Times Square, and despair.

And on the closing night of the play, a two-night stand by prearrangement, there even was some symbolical hissing for capitalism from the balcony.

WEATHER

Toronto, March 16 (CP)—Pressure is high over the Western States and off the Atlantic Coast and relatively low in Alberta. The weather has been unusually mild in Ontario but cold with scattered snowflurries in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Lake Superior: Strong winds, shifting to northwest; somewhat colder, with a few scattered snowflurries.

Kenora and Rainy River: Fresh northwest to west winds; mostly fair with somewhat lower temperature.

Western Provinces: Westerly to northerly winds; partly cloudy, with moderate temperature; colder in northern districts at night.

CONCRETE WORK IS GOING ON STEADILY

Concrete work on the new dock extension in the harbor is going on steadily this week with a fairly large force of men employed. The men pour the concrete from a specially constructed ramp leading the length of the new pier above the form.

BARLEY CONTEST AGAIN AT FAIR

Encouraged by their success with the new division last year, members of the Belleville Fair Board have unanimously decided to hold the Brewers' Barley competition again this year.

Barley entered in this competition will be judged both in the field and in the bin after threshing. A total of $105 will be offered in prizes divided up among the six winners. First prize will be $30, graduated down to $5 for sixth prize.

Added to the field grains class this year will be a competition for White Oats. Entries for this class must be grown from registered seed. Substantial prizes are being offered.

According to President Walter Aselstine, the Board will commence within the next week or so holding regular meetings in order to prepare every final detail for the fair.

WILL NOT SOLICIT DIRECT FOR FUNDS

At a meeting of the executive of the local branch of the Canadian Legion it was unanimously decided that in the future no direct solicitation of funds for any purpose would be made by the members. Where funds must be raised, it was decided, that value would be returned for the money, such as through bazaars, field days, special parties and the like. Cases had come to the attention of the Provincial Command, that individuals had solicited help for themselves in the name of the Legion, and through correspondence carried on with letters bearing Legion letter heads.

It is pointed out that no persons anywhere have authority from the Legion for such solicitation. This does not apply to Poppy Day campaigns or campaigns on behalf of building programs made with the approval of the Command.

King and Queen Cable to Mabees On Anniversary

Picton, March 16—Congratulations cabled by Their Majesties King George and Queen Mary made the 72nd wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Mabee a truly royal event. The message from the King and Queen who will on May 6 celebrate their silver jubilee, was dated at Eastbourne, where they are resting in anticipation of that event, and read: "The King and Queen send you hearty congratulations and good wishes on the 72nd. anniversary of your wedding day."

Mr. and Mrs. Mabee were married in the commodious log cabin of the groom's father, Isaac Mabee, at Cherry Valley, to which, following an old-fashioned Methodist service, the two families repaired with the minister, Rev. Mr. English. Mrs. Mabee was Elizabeth Huycke, daughter of Peter Huycke, and wore a hoop skirt wedding gown. The groom wore a frock-tailed coat and the honeymoon consisted of a visit among relatives. Mrs. Mabee is now 91 and her husband 93. For 40 years they kept store at Odessa; now they are happily retired at Bloomfield.

Home For Homeless?

A few days ago fire destroyed the home of a couple living in Belleville suburbs. Misfortune laid its heavy hand upon this couple and virtually put them on the street homeless. Sympathetic neighbors are endeavoring to create a new home for them and are meeting with encouragement—men who are skilled in the various arts of house construction are giving their services free and help is being offered from various sources. Through illness the couple are incapable of working, and the very laudable effort of erecting a shelter for them deserves encouragement.

Any one who would like to help by donations of cash, food, labor, or building material can communicate with Mrs. Simpson, Box 14, Belleville, or phone 2166J.

GEORGE REYNOLDS (Stirling)

In the death of George Reynolds which occurred on Thursday afternoon, March 14, the village of Stirling has lost one of its oldest and most popular residents. He had been ill for some time and his passing was not unexpected.

The late Mr. Reynolds was well advanced in years being close to 80 years of age. The greater part of his long and useful life was passed in Stirling where he conducted a successful shoe business. He was a man of fine character, friendly and public spirited and was held in the highest esteem by all residents of the village and district. He will be missed by many friends. In religion he was a member of St. Paul's United Church.

Police News

Following complaints relative to unknown persons "pan handling" from door to door on the East Hill, local police arrested three transients early last evening. The trio, giving their names as George Nolan, 22, Edward Humphrey 23, and Albert Wiles, 24, were arraigned in open court today and were remanded in custody until Monday on charges of vagrancy and begging. According to police reports there were originally four members to the party, but one disappeared before the police arrived. All admitted being transients and gave different addresses as there respective home towns. The residents to lodge the complaints assured the authorities that the men were making an organized canvass of each house on the street, soliciting alms of any description, preferably money. They are alleged to have been "drinking".

Youthful miscreants caused a slight disturbance on Cedar St. last night when they overturned two garbage pails, stewing the contents about the street. Later two lads were apprehended nearby and upon being questioned by the police, admitted taking an old sugar sack from a garbage pail, but denied upsetting the can. The boys were reprimanded for their actions.

Ten transients slumbered peacefully in the cell block at the police station last night, all wending their different ways out of the city early today. No motor accidents were reported on local streets or adjacent highways since Friday.

Routine of Condemned Man Leaves Vermilyea Still Calm

Though Restraints Are Tighter, His Attitude Outwardly One Even of Cheerfulness—Prison Discipline Allows Use of Glasses Eight Hours a Day

Less than seven weeks away from the day set for the expiation of the crime of which he was convicted, the killing of Mrs. Aurelia Vermilyea, his mother on the night of October 4th., last, Harold W. Vermilyea the California citrus grower and native of Hastings County has settled down in his cell home in the county gaol without complaint to the restraints which surround a condemned man. As a man awaiting trial he had the benefit of outdoor exercise in the jail yard, as a condemned man he never leaves the stone walls, never departs from the cell block where he is the lone inhabitant, never gets farther away than the corridor in which he is permitted for half an hour in the morning and half an hour in the afternoon to walk.

"He takes up the full time walking and seems to enjoy the exercise to keep himself fit," commented the gaol governor, Mr. G. H. French.

"Does he go in for other physical exercises in the half hour?" the governor was asked. "I have never seen him do anything but walk."

Conduct Unchanged

His guards see no change at all in his conduct. Mr. French remarked in answer to an inquiry. "He seems to be quite cheerful and he has given us no trouble at all."

So far the only visitor to Vermilyea outside his guards the officials of the prison and Adjutant Martin of the Salvation Army, has been the man's sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Faulkner, who makes occasional visits.

The routine of a man doomed to die is very narrow. There are of course the meals, for which Vermilyea always shows zest and which he eats with relish. His exercise and the selection of foods maintain his physical condition. He does not seem to have lost nor to have added weight.

As the long days pass, Vermilyea, the once outdoor man, has several occupations, reading, solving crossword puzzles, playing solitaire, and conversing with his guards. The latter of course do not encourage the man to speak but nevertheless Vermilyea talks a great deal in the course of the day. For some days after the condemnation and sentence Vermilyea settled down to playing solitaire. With this he contented himself for a week or more but then widening his interest he asked for crossword puzzles which the warden of the prison did not deny him. With these he interested himself and now between the two, he spends a good portion of the day. With crossword puzzles, he takes great pride on his ability to solve the most intricate words, and to rebuild the most complicated scenes.

Allowed to Read

Mr. French has allowed the man the use of his glasses. "I let him have them from nine in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon and they are taken from him then and not returned until the next morning. Vermilyea reads magazines a great deal." Vermilyea's eyesight is not too good, reading would be difficult without glasses.

There are three guards on eight hour shifts, and at night a fourth guard attends with the watch on the night shift. For the sake of the guards, in order that they have the entire cellblock within observation the light is burning throughout the block throughout the night.

Visits From S. A. Officer

Adjutant Martin's visits, which are made two or three times a week, are another variation from the deadly monotony of the few interests which the man is permitted to enjoy. It is said that Vermilyea is very attentive when the officer is in converse with him. He seemed to take a notion to the Adjutant last autumn when he first met him.

Seemingly contented with his lot to spend the last few weeks of his life awaiting the end without reference to the event with which he was charged and of which he was found guilty, the one-time boxing champion of the University of Toronto has without ostensible objection settled down to be immured temporarily within the prison walls, a short stone's throw from the room where for nearly half a century his father with his associates, the reeves and deputies of the county council guided the destinies of Hastings. From the windows of Shire Hall to the west loom the ominous grey walls of the county prison and court house, obscuring the western landscape completely. The windows look blank at the nearby jail wall and not far away is the cell block where the doomed man is confined.

No word has yet been heard here as to the probability of an appeal though the time for lodging an appeal will soon have expired.

Mrs. Schoor Coming.

Although his daughter, Aurelia, 19, and his son, Than, 14, separated by the width of half a continent are not expected to visit Belleville from California to see their father prior to May 2, Harold W. Vermilyea will be solaced in his place of close confinement at the Hastings County jail by a visit within a week or so of Mrs. Jack Schoor, of Ontario, California, widow and close friend of the condemned man. Following communication with Governor G. H. French of the county jail, Mrs. Schoor left California by train en route to Belleville this week, it was learned.

What periods of conversation Mrs. Schoor will be allowed with Vermilyea after her arrival here was not stated by Governor French. "That is something we will have to work out yet," he said. It was intimated, however, that Mrs. Schoor will be allowed only the same privileges as any other friend.

Heard Singing.

Though he has not had a breath of fresh air in the open since the death sentence was pronounced, he is reported in excellent condition, due to the strenuous exercise gone through in the cell corridors, and his choice of diet. His regular meals are balanced with fruit and other luxuries sent to the jail by relatives. Milk is his choice of beverage.

This morning the prisoner was moved from the cell in the south wing to the north wing while a housecleaning was being given his quarters. Vermilyea could be heard through the open windows of the jail, talking loudly and singing snatches of song.

Brief Meeting

The meeting which was one of the briefest on record occupying less than one hour, was characterized by little discussion and a very small amount of business.

With the Trustee R. D. Adams in the chair in the committee of the whole, some discussion was injected into proceedings following a recommendation by the Finance Committee, that a second-hand cheque protector be purchased at a cost of $50.00. Following a vote, the machine was finally ordered purchased.

In presenting the recommendation with his report, Russ Wotten chairman of the Finance Committee pointed out, that the purchase of the protector had been advised by secretary J. B. Findlay and also recommended by the auditor. The machine, he told the Board, had originally cost $115.00 and had been in use by a company for only one year. It had then been turned in on a larger system of protection.

"Mr. Findlay has needed one of these machines badly," stated the chairman of Finance.

The motion by Mr. Wotten, that it be purchased was seconded by Trustee Reg. Moncrieff.

"Is it guaranteed?" asked Trustee H. J. Allin.

"One year," replied Mr. Wotten.

Trustee Geo. F. Lent objected to the purchase at the present time. "The committee, of which I am one, was not unanimous at all on this purchase. I turned it down because I felt, that it was a luxury. I don't believe we need it, and I think that we should consider the cost in this case. Nothing has happened so far with any cheques, and I believe that we can get along all right without it for this year anyhow," he said.

Not Policy Wanted

Mr. Moncrieff pointed out that if the Board followed the policy of "nothing has happened so far" they might as well drop their fire insurance.

"We have a banker on the Board here, what does he say about the necessity of this machine?" questioned Trustee R. R. Stiver, glancing in the direction of Mr. B. C. Sisler.

"In my twenty-three years of banking experience I have never seen a raised cheque," replied Mr. Sisler.

Trustee Geo. Sprackett voted against the purchase of the protector. "It's up to this Board to be careful of these expenditures. If the machine is needed then I favor the purchase of it. If it isn't needed, then I certainly am against it. Just now we should go easy. We should think of the taxpayer when we are considering any expenditures. I don't believe we need this."

Chairman of the Board, R. A. Geen, pointed out that he had voted in favour of the purchase because Mr. Findlay, secretary, and the city auditor had both recommended it as a safeguard for cheques being issued. "I believe the city purchased one, and a much more expensive one than this, not long ago," he added.

"A total of $180,000.00 was spent by this Board last year, most of it by cheque," Trustee Allin pointed out.

"What is the necessity for it; do we need it, can we get along without it?" questioned Trustee David Harrison in declaring himself opposed to the purchase. "Can any one here show why it is needed?"

"It would appear that all we have to go on is that the secretary of the Board and the auditor recommended its purchase. We have just their opinion," explained R. D. Adams to the previous speaker.

Vote 8 to 6 for Purchase

When finally put to a vote a total of eight stood for the purchase, and six against. The machine was ordered purchased. Chairman of the Finance Committee Russ. Wotten, who had introduced the motion that it be purchased voted against buying the machine. He explained that he had merely brought the motion in.

Tenders on liability insurance will not be opened until about two weeks' time in order to give the committee time to prepare, stated Trustee Wotten.

In the report of Mr. P. C. MacLaurin, principal of the Collegiate and Vocational School it was stated that departmental examinations in the school would begin on June 13 and end on Friday, June 28. Students who have a standing of 66 per cent. and over, in both Middle and Upper School subjects are not required to write the final examinations, it was explained. "In former years we recommended about 35 per cent. of our Middle School pupils for exemption from final examinations and this is the first year that the Upper School students have been given exemption on the basis of 66 per cent. or more," stated Mr. MacLaurin.

In the report of Miss E. A. Earshman, school health nurse, it was stated that the home nursing classes sponsored by the local Red Cross, who generously supply the necessary equipment, had been started with the senior girls in each school. The aggregate attendance was given at 90. A note of appreciation was contained in the report for the work being performed by Mrs. Moult in King George School; Mrs. Sisler in Queen Mary School; Mrs. Kenny in Queen Alexandra School, and Mrs. MacIntosh and Miss Josephine Sampson in Queen Victoria School for giving so generously of their time and effort to the work.

An ash tray for each member of the board, to be kept in the Board rooms for committee meetings was the gift last evening presented by the local St. Charles Motor Company. They were presented by Trustee W. J. Harrison on behalf of the Company who will be thanked through a letter ordered sent by the secretary.

In the absence of Mr. J. B. Findlay, secretary of the Board, who is confined to his home through illness, Miss Wedden, assistant, capably filled the office during the meeting.

Adjournment of the Board was made shortly after nine o'clock.

CARRYING PLACE

HOCKEY TEAM ENDS SEASON

Finish in Fifth Place, With Eleven Teams in The League

Carrying Place— With memories of the winter a year ago still fresh in our minds, most of us are congratulating ourseleves on the weather of the past two months. The fall of snow has been light, roads have been blocked so very infrequently that mail service has not known a single interruption, and winter work has gone on apace, unhampered by the frigid blasts of last season that sent the mercury down to the "thirty below" level. Now all are wondering if March will live up to its time-honoured reputation of departing like a lion.

Special Lenten services are being held from time to time in St. John's Anglican Church here with the rector, Rev. Arthur Strother, in charge. The first of them was held on Ash Wednesday evening.

A very pleasant social evening was presented in the United Church Hall by members of the Woman's Association here on Wednesday of last week when a large number gathered to spend a pleasant period with games, conversation, and the enjoyment of a dainty lunch served by the ladies in the later evening.

Whatever hopes the local puck-chasers had of reaching a play-off berth in the Trenton and District Hockey League were extinguished when the locals went down to defeat at Trenton Arena last Friday evening before an inspired Benedict-Proctor team who outscored them 5-3. Finishing the season in fifth position with eleven teams contending the locals have given a good. account of themselves.

Before leaving the subject of hockey for the season it might be will introduce one by one the members of the team whom we refer to as the locals. The first line was composed of Norm Johnson Vic Willie, and John Anderson. Johnson is one of the prettiest skaters to be seen in many a league and packs a good shot as well He is well known in Belleville also and is a member of the present Trenton Imperial team, cup winners in the Belleville city league. Willie, left wing, played fine junior O. H. A. hockey a few years ago, and proved himself to be one of the best checkers on the team as well as a clever stick-handler. John Anderson, familiarly known to a host of acquaintances as "Sunfish" is one of the wonders of the game, a perennial player who comes back year after year apparently fresh as ever. During the present season he revealed the fact that he played his first O. H. A. game twenty-eight years ago. John is perhaps the most colourful figure on the team. He possesses a terrific shot and cruises up and down the right boards with all the familiarity of years of experience. A second line consisted of Jim Dolan, left wing, Ken Ferguson, centre and Fred Juby, right wing Dolan and Ferguson are well known in Trenton, the former having played for a number of years. Ferguson is more of a new comer, but a hard worker; and both boys gave bang-up efforts that revealed true ability. Juby, formerly a star in Picton league games has been out of the game for a season or two, and getting into the game late in the season had little chance to display his wares.

On the defence Bobby Vieau and Eddie Allore proved a hard pair get around, both being experienced players. Allore also started late this season, but he showed that he has plenty of what it takes. Vieau contributed many dangerous rushes, but was most effective in blocking plays. Frank LaMorre minded the net, and while possibly not the best goalie in the league, still proved himself not far from the top. Of the boys who are purely home products, and who saw little service since competition was so stiff that there could be little easing up on the play, Fred "Pat" Hicks was perhaps the most effective with a hard wrist shot and persistent check. Eddie Quackenbush is one of the swiftest skaters of the local boys. With a little seasoning which they could hardly get this year this pair will give an argument to any. Harold Herrington is another hard-working local who saw little service but who has considerable ability.

Manager Bill La Tour was trying his hand a coach and director for the first time and the team's record reflects credit to his ability and knowledge of the game. Ever popular in sporting circles he directed the team smoothly, and is to be congratulated upon the outcome of his endeavours.

A dance given at Consecon on Friday evening drew a large crowd, many local young people attending an reporting it very enjoyable.

The minstrel show given in the Parish Hall a week ago in connection with the Pie Social presented by the Guild proved a novelty. After three practices the cast were hardly at their best, but their efforts drew bursts of merriment at any rate.

Motorists are congratulating themselves upon the good fortune which provides them with a paved road to Trenton, thus avoiding the mud and discomfort prevailing in other years. A few are wondering to what extent the thawing will affect the new highway. Already the seam in the centre has opened up in some places to the width of an inch or more. In the meanwhile it is a real pleasure to skim along, realising what other spring thaws have been like in years past.

Miss Esther Young is the proud possesor of a new piano shipped from Toronto and arriving here last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Turney of Colborne were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Buchanan.

An unusually powerful and persistent outbreak of influenza has swept the community during the past several weeks with the school children getting the worst of it. several weeks ago an epidemic of coughing broke out which could scarcely be checked; and now there is hardly a pupil who has not known at least a few hours discomfort with a cough or cold. Attendance has been reduced, and several of the more severe cases have necessitated doctor's attention. There was some suggestion that it might be an outbreak of whooping cough, but when Mr. Norrington, principal, consulted Dr. E. A. McQuade, M. O. H., he was told that their seemed to be no evidence supporting such a theory. Rather it was pointed out that the "flu" this year has been more persistent than in many seasons, and many who contracted the cough weeks ago are still enduring it.

The congratulations of the community are being showered upon Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Hennessey of Trenton to whom a son was born Sunday last. The proud father is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hennessey of this community.

Messrs. Eddie Quackenbush, Ernest Green, Allan Barker, and a group of friends spent Monday evening with Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hennessey and family.

Miss M. Corrigan attended the Toronto Skating Carnival in the Queen City last week.

A party consisting of Messrs. Percy Leland, and Jim Green, and Fred Hennessey and Gordon Hanthorn, motored from Detlor and Coe Hill on Sunday last to visit in the community with their parents. This is the first trip since their departure for the lumber camps at Christmas time. Mr. Gordon Hanthorn remained at home here, but the others returned on the following day.

A jolly party of friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Moynes in Gardenville on Monday evening to tender them a surprise party and reception on the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Married at Picton on March 11th in 1885 and have lived hereabouts all their lives. The old couple were very surprised and pleased when their neighbors and friends trooped in on them so unexpectedly, but with true hospitality gave the best and kindliest of welcomes. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Snider, Mr. and Mrs. F. Madigan and Miss Gladys Madigan, Mrs. F. Snider, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hicks, Mr. W. Hart and many others.

The school report for the public school for the month of January and February is submitted:

Old Country Artisan Succeeds In Belleville

Fifteen years ago a sturdy young man left England to try his luck in Canada. He had undergone a long and strict apprenticeship in the art of making shoes—shoes for men, women and children—the way they have been made in England from time immemorial, by hand from the very best of leather—none of these latter day machine-made creations, dainty, but not as durable as the hand-made creations of the Old Country shoemaker.

The young man in question was C. R. Tillbrook, who located in Belleville, went into business for himself, and built up a large and prosperous trade, by good work and square dealing. His business has increased to such an extent that the premises occupied were found too small, and on Monday he will open new and larger business premises at 318 Front street, formerly occupied by the Dominion Store.

The new Tillbrook business is comfortably housed in commodious quarters, with reception room for ladies, nicely furnished, smoking room for men, and fixtures and furniture of the very latest model. Known as The Belleville Shoe Hospital, boots and shoes brought here for treatment certainly receive the care of specialists and step out looking and feeling just like new.

Mr. Tillbrook has proved himself a good business man and good citizen and his many friends wish him continued success.

50 STRIKE AT BRANTFORD

Brantford, Ont., March 16 (CP)—Their demands for a 20 per cent wage increase refused, some fifty employees of Bantford Washing Machine Company staged a general walkout last night and most of them remained on strike today. Officials of the company blamed the trouble upon a few agitators and said operations would not be interrupted.

CARRYING PLACE

SCHOLAR RECEIVES EGYPTIAN LETTER

Exchange Stamps With Students in Alexandria

Carrying Place—Arriving at the local post office several mornings ago an envelope covered with a long row of Egyptian stamps attracted considerable attention. It was addressed to Allan Barger, teen-age son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Barker at the Murray Canal, and came as a reply to a previous letter sent requesting an exchange of stamps. The letter was from a little student at the British Boys' School in Alexandria, and a copy of it is supplied.

Alexandria Egypt,
36 Rue Fouad 1st,
Feb. 12th, 1935

Dear Allan:

I thank you very much for the stamps you sent me, and I hope you like mine. I am sending you these pictures as a souvenir. Do you read books or do any other hobby? If you do please tell me next time you write to me. Yesterday in Egypt it was very hot, and there was a hot wind called "hampseen". Egypt has changed tremendously since the Great War, and what about Canada, or Ontario? Frozen lakes and rivers, I suppose. The climate is changing in Alexandria because it is on the sea. Tell me about Canada, won't you? I am nearly ten years of age.

Yours Affectionately,
Alec G. Kitroeff.

Enclosed with the letter were a number of stamps and a few pictures as souvenirs of Egypt. Members of the Stamp Club at school welcomed the letter, though it is not the first time they have exchanged stamps with boys in Alexandria.

Messrs. Vernon Westfall and Will La Tour attended the Bloomfield-Consecon hockey play-off at Wellington Arena on Saturday night. The third game of the series, played on Monday, went to Consecon 2-1, but was protested on the ground that Pearson of Consecon had played during the season for another team in another league. Frank "Fuzz" Pearson is well known locally, being a brother in law of Steve Hanna of Trenton.

The malicious epidemic of coughing pervading the community has led many to believe that it is an epidemic of whooping cough. However when Dr. E. A. McQuade, M. O. H. for Murray Township, was consulted on Tuesday regarding the possibility of such an epidemic existing in the school, he stated that he did not think such was the case, all the symptoms indicating merely the presence of that lingering type of "flu" so common this year.

Many friends of Mr. Ray Weese, employed at the Harbour Stables, sympathize with him in the recent loss of his mother. The late Mrs. Weese was also related to the LaTour family and others locally.

When thirty guests gathered on Monday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Moynes to help them celebrate the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary, a presentation of a finely worked table runner and of potted flowers and a bouquet of daffodils was made, while the following address was read:

March 11th, 1935

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Moynes:

It is with much pleasure that we have met here tonight to congratulate you on this, the fiftieh anniversary, of your wedding. This home has been one of warm welcome to us all. You no doubt can recall many recollections in the past years. We trust God in his mercy may still continue to bless you with health and strength, and as a small token of our love for you we ask you to accept these small presents.

Signed on behalf of friends gathered here, Mrs. Fred Hicks.

During the course of the evening two grandchildren of the happy old couple, Frank and Billie Moynes, sons of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Moynes, sang "Put on Your Old Gray Bonnet." More than thirty guests were present.

Easter examinations have begun at the local school, and are being carried on each Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese and Norman spent Sunday evening last with Mr. and Mrs. George Bongard of Belleville. While in the city they were olso guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Leeman.

Mrs. M. J. Weese is at home here again after spending some time visiting friends and relatives at a distance.

ONE YEAR FOR WOUNDING

St. Catharines, Ont., March 15—(CP)—Nick Turner, Smithville today was convicted of unlawfully wounding William Tremblay, Smithville bailiff, and sentenced to one year by Mr. Justice Henderson in Supreme Court here. On a separate charge of wounding Kenneth Vaughn, Turner pleaded guilty and was sentenced to one year, the sentences to run concurrently.

MARKETING ACT OPPOSED

Cottam, Ont., March 15 (CP)—Opposition to the Natural Products Marketing Act, as it pertains to the growing of early fruit and vegetables, has taken definite form here with the forming of an organization for the purpose of fighting proposals which they do not believe to be in the best interests of the growers.

GREATER CITIZENSHIP LECTURES

Eight fine lectures which made up the greater citizenship series for the winter of 1935 under the auspices of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce will not be forgotten by ticket-holders.

These lectures accomplished a number of things: they proved that lectures on present day economic and political problems, lectures on archeology, lectures on education are intensely interesting; they proved that men and women will attend and enjoy them; they proved that lecturers can give a deal of information and inspiration in sixty minutes, for the lectures were generally no more than an hour in delivery.

Accordingly it is easily understood why ticketholders want another series, next winter.

The Chamber has made a fine contribution to education and training in public affairs.

Why the attendance should be doubled or trebled is not difficult to see. The professors who have spoken know their subjects and are not like the lecturers who deliver addresses for an hour and a half or two hours and overload the hearers with facts and figures. These Queen's professor have the faculty of making the most businesslike subject attractive and they inspire. Fortunately there is no effort on their part to be orators, for great as oratory is, there are times like these when it is preferable to have the inspiration come from the content of an address to having it founded mainly on the speaker's gifts so that hearers are convinced with eloquence. These professors aim not so much to convince as to inspire and cause listeners to think for themselves.

One would like to see expansion of the membership. Everywhere one hears that some time in the future there is to be plenty of leisure. If that is so, the fields of interest are so vast that there is no end of subjects which could be brought before the people in lectures.

PREMIER'S ILLNESS

Canadians regret the illness of Premier Bennett which is no doubt due to the tremendous burden which public men have to carry in these days, with their seemingly endless problems. That he will be restored to health after a rest which he has well earned is the prayer of every Canadian.

Fortunately the House possesses men of experience which can lend aid in the time of his enforced illness.

The load which leaders of men are carrying in these days is heavy, just as the load borne by those who have been faced with unemployment.

25,000 BOOKS BURNED

More than 25,000 books, pictures and plates valued at half a million dollars were burned on Thursday morning in the furnace of police headquarters of New Yor City as obscene. The "fuel" was the result of a seven months' collection of immoral stuff in raids on "fly-by-night" book stores and stands.

The waste in paper in publishing such works, in metal plates and in rich bindings runs the value of the "fire" up to the half million mark. Many of the books destroyed were beautifully bound in fine leather and several hundred copies of one suppressed edition had been sold for as much as one hundred dollars apiece. Most of the books were priced at $5 to $25 each. Some had considerable sales.

The clean-up was quietly conducted for "under-the-counter" books and a number of arrests were made during the seven months.

This total seizure must be but a small share of the vile publications which have been sowing seed.

It shows activity on the part of the authorities to ferret out the vile stuff and is a sad commentary that there is so great a demand for trash and filth.

BIBLE CORROBORATED

The importance of the find of porcelain archives written in Hebrew in Palestine between Dan and Beersheba cannot be overestimated, say Oriental scholars. The discovery was announced this week as the work of the British expedition headed by J. L. Starkey.

The records are from 2500 to 2900 years old and are regarded as of vast importance in corroboration of the Bible stories during the period before King Solomon. Value is also seen in the relation of the archives to the student of ancient Hebrew, which is said to have been a dead language even in Christ's day.

More finds are forecast,—something that scholars have been looking for for years.

That there is an underlying basis of fact for what are known as the historical portions of the Old Testament, has always been believed, and what is given as history is not myth or fiction as knowledge of the ancient Palestine grows. Higher criticism which upset numbers of religious folk a generation ago, is the spirit of research which is bringing to light these corroborations of the great events on which the Biblical stories are founded. Higher critics and others of course realize that the Biblical histories and other portions of the Bible are not like any other histories for their aim is to convey spiritual knowledge.

Knowledge of the old land of Palestine, and discoveries of remains of pottery and archives such as have just been dug up support the Old Testament and make it richer to readers than it was even to their forbears, thinkers and scholars state.

SAP SNOW

Sap snow has come and spring is just a little way off. So the winter which always drags towards the close is preparing to shrink away like the snow and disappear leaving to spring up in its place the vernal scenes of reviving life in nature, birth in the animal world, growth in everything and expansion of spirits in man and beast. It will soon be growing time.

Sap is beginning to rise in the maples, though the full sweep of the spring's revival has not yet felt in the trees. Coming of spring which is associated in Canada with the rise of the sap from the roots to the branches to make leaves which will give the trees means of breathing which means growth, has been marked in every land with an exhilaration and expansiveness of spirit to which man and nature are so prone. The effect is felt not only in body but in mind for the pulse seems to be happier when the long enforced cessation of growth is at an end.

Sap is like human hope. Hope is as relentless in man as the urge upward is in the sap in the tree. Man's hope of spring's coming is founded on the fact that in all the ages during which man has been on this earth, springtime has never failed. Nature's certainty is man's hope. He knows that the time is at hand. If he is a farmer he knows the time is near for sowing. He never doubts it, any more than nature doubts that the progression of seasons is a certainty.

Man, whether he be poet or not, has seen more than mere existence in this season of the year. He reads a revival of life into every drip of sap into the bucket, into every sign of budding on the trees into the disappearance of snow and the revival of grass and floral life, in the relentless pressure from underneath the surface of the earth exerted by the tender bulb which forces its shoots up to greet the sun, whose worshipper it is.

Tennyson speaks of the coming days in words which will not die,—

> "Once more the Heavenly Power
> Makes all things new;
> The blackbirds have their will,
> The throstles too."

That is the spirit of regeneration which every man feels in these great days, when the annual wonder of spring is unfolded to man's reverent eye. Man loves the old regenerating earth mother more than he ever did. What explains this kinship between man and the soil on which he lives is something for the philosopher to muse over but every man, every woman knows it.

Man gazes from now on at the miracle of new life, pictured in every leaf, in every tree, in color and in bird song and he wonders why in the riches of nature things have been so ordained as to move as they do. Unless a man is chronically a pessimist or ill unto death, he cannot but love more and more the precious earth and its atmosphere which permit him to live and enjoy his own and other life.

With the sap coming, soon the old rose leaves which have clung like a dying man to life, during the stern winter, and have dared and beaten the angriest storms will fall away under the pressure of growth and give way to the new buds which will open up the way for new leaves. Soon the signs of the light green in the dark evergreen branches will be seen as nature begins to add to the development of bush and tree. Soon spring will be here.

Let your letter be written as accurately as you are able—I mean with regard to language, grammar, and stops; for as to the 'matter' of it the less trouble you give yourself the better it will be. Letters should be easy and natural, and convey to the person to whom we send them, just what we should say to the persons if we were with them.—Chesterfield's Letters to His Son.

And what is called a smattering of everything inevitably constitutes a coxcomb. I have often, of late, reflected what an unhappy man I must now have been, if I had not acquired in youth some fund and taste of learning. What could I have done with myself, at this age, without them?—Lord Chesterfield to His Son.

To know mankind well requires full as much attention and application as to know books, and it may be, more sagacity and discernment. I am at this time, acquainted with many elderly people, who have all passed their whole lives in the great world but with such levity and inattention, that they now no more of it now than they did at fifteen.—Lord Chesterfield to His Son.

To an honest mind the best perquisites of a place are the advantages it gives a man of doing good.—Addison.

A ROSE

If I would steel my heart, I would not dare
To take a rose between my hands, for there
In that perfumed and petalled loveliness
Is typified all good I might express.
Its beauty is serene, though but a day
Is spent before it passes quite away;
Its gifts for all alike with gladness spring,
As freely to a beggar as to king.
Unto the day its color adds delight,
Its perfume lends new magic to the night.
The lover holds it to his darling's cheek,
And in death's room it makes despair less bleak.
If I conspire in any wicked plot,
It must be where the rose's face is not;
If I would harbor hatred for my foes,
Let me not ever look upon a rose!

—Aline Michaelis.

"I NEVER GIVE ADVICE" said a philosopher, because "a wise man does not need it and a fool won't take it."

"DE LAWD" IS DEAD. Meaning, of course, Richard B. Harrison, Canadian actor, who played the part of "De Lawd" in "Green Pastures" for 1,652 performances, never missing a show in five years' engagement. He suffered a stroke dressing for the matinee in New York City two weeks ago and died Wednesday in the Fifth Avenue Hospital. Not long ago in this column a paragraph was published in regard to the road tour of Green Pastures instancing cases of communities where the color line was drawn and "De Lawd" refused a bed in public hotels, as well as the rest of the company. These towns were, remarkable to relate, in the North which shed such bitter tears and much young blood for the unhappy slaves in the South "Befo' de Wah." In the South the "Green Pastures" company achieved their greatest triumphs anl were accorded every honor which by right of their individual genius they were entitled to. Now Richard B. Harrison, whose skin was black, but whose soul was whiter than many of the "superior" race, has gone before the higher tribunal where his earthly color will not count aganst him and be rather an added honor, as it were, having triumphed over the handicap of race and creed and color prejudice. The trials of "the road", a journey of 40,000 miles, with the experience of sleeping in railway stations, gettin up at unearthly hours to catch trains, cold and draughty, all kinds of hotels, good, bad, and indifferent, with the latter in the majority, must have sapped the strength of the gallant old trouper and struck him down when he persisted in working when he should have been resting.

TOM SAWYER was the brain child of Samuel Clemens, (Mark Twain) but he is duplicated many times in every community. Tom Sawyer is the spirit of the average boy, that's what makes his memory so real and living. And that's why thousands of he-men will journey many miles to Hannibal, Missouri, this summer, just to pay a tribute of loyalty to Sam Clemens and his interpretation of "Every Boy" in Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn. One hundred years ago Samuel Clemens was born, and he still lives in the hearts of many boys who refuse to grow up,—and of girls, too, who recognize themselves in "Becky Thatcher," the sweetheart of Tom Sawyer.

x x x

RAMBLING ABOUT TOM SAWYER just naturally makes us forget the limitations of space, but the sweetest memories humanity falls heir to have to do with youth and the joys of a period when the heart held no fear and the life trail ahead was bright with promise of great things, health, wealth, happiness and all the secret delights bound to pop up at every turn of the trail—that's what makes all our thoughts ramble—thinking about the lads who used to gather 'round the old swimmin' hole in the olden, golden days.

DO NOT MARRY IN HASTE AND REPENT LATER

Select The Right Mate And Avoid Much Trouble

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

(Copyright 1935 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Proper selection of a life partner is a problem indeed! The question of correct choice in marriage is second to none that either man or woman must face.

Select the right mate and half your battles are won! Pick the wrong person for husband or wife and you start with a handicap which will hamper your every move.

Do you really have happily married couples in these modern days? Listen to those who are unfortunately mated and the answer will be an unhesitatant "no." But, on the other hand, listen, to those who are happy, who love their homes, their children and each other! Without the shadow of doubt, they will recommend marriage in no uncertain terms.

When a person marries, he or she is taking a responsibility that is all-important. Be careful lest your feelings and sentiments run away with you. Rationalize, consider all pros and cons. Think of every side of the question.

The person you have fallen in love with may not necessarily make a good wife and mother, or good husband and father. In other words watch yourself and your reactions.

Be sure, for one thing, that you have made careful allowance for the shortcomings of your favored one. Never marry until you know your partner-to-be as thoroughly as possible. Slight acquaintance and short engagements have led to many disasters.

Don't let wealth, social standing —even culture and refinement — influence your choice. For all these, in themselves are fine; but to have them without love will never counterbalance the tortures of perforced intimacy with a person who is practically a stranger.

Always try to have your love pure, free and ennobling. When your heart is so entwined with the life of another person that you cannot conceive separate existence, then, indeed, you are in love.

Genuine love comes when mutual attraction merges into admiration and companionship; love is present when it is mutual helpfulness and bliss to be united in love and sorrow.

Then, as the final test, ask yourself whether you feel for your beloved the same depth of adoration and idealism that you feel for your mother and father.

And note what Elizabeth Barrett Browning has written: "I love thee with all my breath, smiles, tears, of all my life—and if God choose, I shall but love thee better after death."

This is one of the finest, truest and most beautifully expressed of all the many self-analyses of love.

It is really easy to fall in love. But this passing attraction is but an infatuation built on shifting sands. If you find yourself easily attracted to members of the opposite sex, better wait until your fickleness has subsided before you marry.

It may be easy to obtain a divorce in these days of change, but no divorce leaves the participants entirely unscathed. Marriage changes one. Divorce does, too.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

For no better reason than an irrational adversion, many persons believe they cannot digest milk. This ispuurely a mental attitude which may best be overcome by modifying the milk in some way, as for instance, by adding lime water or some other flavoring extract.

LOVE SCHOOL

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE

Gertrude flung at him. "Hunter darling, if you'll only let me—"

He pushed her aside, and turned to Faith. "I beat the toad to a pulp. He'll not bother you again," he said. "And I never believed you went there —for him, Faith."

Faith shook her head sadly. Nothing he said now made any difference. "It doesn't matter why you went, Hunter," she said. "I never should have come back from New York." And there drifted across her vision with an almost intolerable pain, the image of Paul Tuckerman's thin eager face.

Gertrude trailed over to the sofa and picked up a red scarf she had left there. "I don't suppose at the present time," she said bitterly, "there's any use talking to you, Hunter."

"Nor at any other time," he briefly retorted.

Faith turned to the window as Gertrude walked across to him slowly, provocatively, her beauty held up for him like a ripe rich fruit. "We've all been fools tonight," she said. "We'll all be sorry."

Silence fell over the room when Gertrude had left. But Faith remained by the window looking over the square at the huge sugared casino and the drift of gay people in the warm night. Soon it would be 12 o'clock, and like Cinderella she would vanish.

"Faith, you must listen to me." Hunter's low urgent voice turned her around. Light fell on the silvery gold of her hair, the delicate contour of her cheek. Her perfume stole in the air between them, and her black tulle ruffles hung limply from her slender waist.

"I'm leaving the first thing in the morning, she said. "This time it's I who could never be sure of you again."

"I don't blame you," he said humbly. "But won't you try once more, Faith?"

"It would be the same thing again," she said gently. "You're not anchored anywhere, Hunter. You're just like a splendid yacht drifting about in blue waters. Nothing but a good time on board. Lots of guests to amuse you and no destination."

"If you came aboard, there wouldn't be any other guests, Faith." Hunter pleading—actually pleading.

"I wouldn't be human if I didn't love that," she admitted with a wan smile. "But it isn't enough—not now."

"Faith, dear child, you'd never be lonely again," Hunter tempted, and raised her hand to his lips. "I've been in love with you since the night I took you to my apartment in Paris, and I never knew it—until the night I gave you the pearls. Then you hurt my pride." With sudden violence he crushed her to him. His lips were on her hair, his hands electric, restless, followed the slim loveliness of her shoulders, her waist.

But Faith didn't want the lover in him now. She moved a little with a gesture of withdrawal that instantly he felt. He let her go.

As soon as his arms fell from her, she felt a joyless freedom. "I'm sorry dear," she said. "I came over here to test us both— and we've both failed. I hoped I could get you away from this sort of life where women like Gertrude can make so much mischief. The airplane motor —" Faith's voice trembled, "was to be the beginning of other things for us. You even believed Gertrude when she put ideas in your head about that. Why, I wanted you to take hold of it. It was a wonderful thing I wanted you to share."

"It isn't too late,' Hunter said without conviction.

"This afternoon", Faith went on "you were obliged to go off with Gertrude even when you didn't want to. That's how far you're tangled up with her. And tonight—" Her gesture stopped his protests. "I was under the window when you went in to that horrible room. You went there suspecting me. That was Gertrude, too. You're weak, Hunter," she said sadly. "You blame it on the war and everything, but you're just a charming rich young man with no ideals——"

Hunter stood back as if stunned, his sleek black head bowed "I sound pretty hopeless," he said at last with a faint smile that was somehow pitifully boyish. "Couldn't you make something of me, Faith?"

"I might have." And then as if the words were dragged from her, Faith went on, "it's too late. I'm afraid I care for someone else, Hunter. Someone,' she said slowly, "who really needs me. The boys who invented that motor is poor. I don't even know if he'll ever make good. But I'm going back to see it through with him. Perhaps that's love—seeing things through with someone who needs you."

"I understand." Hunter's face was haggard against the frosty white of his collar and shirt. He straightened with a gallant set to his shoulders. "I'll make it as easy for you as I can." There was a rare heart breaking sweetness to his smile. "It serves me right," he said. "I had to find you to lose you." And he walked out of the room.

The door closing had an inflexible sound. With a few words Faith had closed that door. She had closed out warmth and music, beautiful soft things. She had sent way the man who meant all the enchantment in the world.

She sat on, staring blankly at the window where they had stood in the fragrance of the moonlight. Bells and voices and music broke through the air. It was midnight— and the New Year.

FAITH SEEKS PAUL

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE

Paul Tuckerman met Faith at the dock when she landed once more in New York.

She had clung to the thought of him and the new values he represented and that had given her quiet exit from Monte Carlo a reason and a dignity. Mary Alan was the only person she saw in Paris. Mary, painting portraits in the old studio on the left Bank of the Seine, seemed never to change. Her work, her friends, and a humorous acceptance of things as they were, kept Mary's fine clever face serene.

"When I get my divorce, I shall probably marry Paul," Faith had told her.

Mary, gazing at the grey January sky, the distant white dome veiled in winter mist, had answered: "I'm glad for Paul's sake."

And now Faith seeing Paul again, felt a strange peace, as of a vessel storm tossed riding at last into a small harbor. But there was a shyness between them, each realizing the import of Faith's return.

"I've made my last trip, Paul," Faith said while they waited among her luggage on the dock. And she added quickly, "I didn't sell your idea."

"You've come back, Faith. That's all I care about,' Paul said in a low voice. There was a radiance about him that lifted him from his shabbiness.

He was shabby, Faith thought with a little pang at her heart. Fortune had evidently not smiled upon him in the few weeks she was away. Why hadn't he bought new clothes with the money she had left for him?

"I've got to go to a cheap hotel, Paul," she told him. "Beyond that, I haven't any plans."

"There's a furnished room in the place where I am," he suggested diffidently. "It isn't very grand, but it's quite a nice house between Second and Third Avenue on 48th St."

"Probably just what I want," Faith decided with determined brightness.

It really wasn't bad, she assured herself a few hours later. It was a quite large sitting-bedroom on the first floor of a house that boasted an overworked colored maid and an air of gentility. There were no private baths, and the telephone was in the hall.

Standing among her unpacked trunks and bags, Faith said with a slight catch in her voice. "I wonder if I've become an incurable snob. It's comfortable enough—it's clean—there's even a fireplace. But oh Paul, it's so dingy!"

"I can't bear to think of your being poor," Paul burst out. "Why, to me, this is luxury. But you—! I've always thought of you as having everything. I can't imagine you without the best the world can offer." And he caught hold of her hand.

Faith lifted her grey eyes to his. "I didn't always have things," she said. "I guess I've known as bare and grim a life as you have, Paul. And I ought to be ashamed of myself. This is lovely."

His thin face brightened. "You know there's an awfully jolly little Italian restaurant around the corner," he said. "We'll dine there tonight. And, though she doesn't actually allow it, Mrs. Baumer says you can have an electric burner if you want to get your own breakfast mornings."

"Splendid!" Faith wandered to the window, drawing aside the coarse lace curtains. The elevated rumbled by shaking the buildings. A strip of blue sky overlay the street, and sunlight flattened on the brownstone opposite. Paul came and stood beside her.

"There are some quite nice houses on this street," he said wistfully.

Faith glanced at his long sensitive profile, the tossed mass of his red hair. "I'm sure there are," she said gently. "Tell me about yourself. Have you seen Mr. Rider?"

Paul shook his head, turning back into the room. "I have a job, Faith," he said at last. "Got it last week. They let me have today off."

With a sinking feeling Faith walked over to the fireplace and stretched out her hands as if there had been a fire there to warm her. "A—job! What sort of a job?"

"Clerk in a store," he said avoiding her eyes.

Faith leaned suddenly, weakly, against the cracked imitation marble of the mantelpiece, her head in her arms. "I can't bear it," she sobbed.

Paul's touch on her shoulder brought her about. "You should have gone back to Mr. Rider," she cried. "Even if I didn't succeed, he would have done something for you."

Paul's chin took on an obstinate line that she had never seen in him before. "I'm not asking any favors of Mr. Rider," he said quietly. "I'll have to work this out for myself, Faith."

She sank on to the red upholstered sofa with its hideous crocheted tidies. The luster of smart grooming she her apart from her surroundings. The smooth silvery gold of her hair, the smooth pallor of her skin, the slim belted elegance of her dark green gown, seemed only to coarsen the light grained wood and red hangings of the room.

Her mind flashed over the situation, adjusting itself. She couldn't blame Paul. "All right," she said smiling up at his anxious face. "Here I am and here you are. We won't let life beat us, will we?"

"I should say not." His expression cleared wonderfully. "But I'll have to get accustomed to your being in here, Faith. I can't believe that you've come back—to me."

"You'll have to believe a lot of things," Faith said more gaily than she felt. "And you have a lot of explaining to do, too. You're a very foolish boy not to use that money I lent you. It's just false pride—"

He didn't want to discuss that now. "Perhaps you'd like to rest a while," he suggested. At the door he turned. "Having you here is like heaven, my dear," he said in a hushed voice.

And now — what? Faith started unpacking. Trying to find places for all her things. Soon the bed and chairs were covered with fine silks and furs. Recklessly, she dumped everything out. Evening gowns, afternoon gowns— each one with a memory in its scented folds. Sheer silk stockings, lovely slippers meant for dancing. Silken pajamas. Over them all floated the melancholy of vanished playgrounds.

"I'll sell them," Faith thought with forced cheerfulness. "I could almost start a shop.'

She would have to start something soon. "I'll have to get work," she told Paul that night at dinner. She laughed at his horrified expression. "Don't be silly, Paul. I've worked before for my living. You won't touch my money, and I won't touch Hunter's". Thus she linked herself and Paul, dreading the moment when they must speak more plainly of themselves and their future.

Paul's eyes adored her as they sat in the greasy little Italian restaurant, but he treated her as if she were some rare ornament much too fine for him.

He was putting her on a pedesal, Faith thought. And as she lay on the lumpy bed in the rooming house that night, she wondered what was going to happen to her. How strange it would be if Paul never did anything about his motor, and went on being a clerk in a store! And she married him— she would have to get the divorce first, of course—that meant Reno —money, money, money—Her mind raced in one direction, then in another trying to collect scattered thoughts and piece them in a pattern.

There were two pictures. In the first one, she married Paul and they lived in a glorified tenement, and bought things from the corner delicatessen and he was a clerk forever and ever. In the second picture, she married Paul, and he became a famous inventor. She watched over his interests, kept his correspondence, interviewed people. "Mrs. Paul Tuckerman—you know—the Tuckerman motor—"

None of it seemed real. Tossing on the slab of a pillow through the hours, other pictures stole in that she fought off. When you had torn a man from your heart, you must not think of him. It was disloyal to remember standing in the window that scented night of stars and music in Monte Carlo. Hunter's arms holding her to him, his lips on her hair. Hunter begging her not to leave him. That was done, and finished——

Faith woke with a start. The colored maid stood at her bed with a cup of coffee. "Mistah Tuckerman ask me to bring you this cup of cawfee—yes ma'am. And he say to give you this." From behind her back, she triumphantly produced a slim box of flowers.

Dear Paul, how thoughtful and sweet he was! Faith smiled gratefully.

"They shuah are pretty." The maid hovered grinning. "I'll get you sumpin to put 'em in.

Narcissus. Faith lifted them from the box. Their perfume was like spring gardens. A card was tucked in the tissue paper. Paul had written—"Until tonight—my Faith'.

Faith's eyes filled with tears. This was love you could trust and build upon. She would be happy this day. And tonight they would plan together what was best for her to do. If he needed her, she wouldn't leave him just yet. The divorce could wait a few weeks.

Late in the afternoon Paul came. He came in quickly as if he feared not to find her. When he saw her there, smiling at him in the simple black satin she had so carefully chosen, he gave a little cry and stumbled forward.

"Faith you do care—you do."

"That's why I'm here, Faith said, and felt her heart tremble.

He took her by the hand and led her to the sofa. He knelt beside her. "I love you,' he said in a hushed voice. "You're mother of pearl and gold. You're flowers and silk. Do you love me? Tell me you love me, my sweet."

But he didn't wait for her to speak. His arms went out with a hungry rushing motion, lifting her as he rose, and cradling her against his shoulder. His face was fierce with rapture. "My sweet—beloved"

Faith moved faintly in his arms. She couldn't breathe. Something terrible was happeneing to her. She closed her eyes, and there came blackns into which she seemed to be sinking.

ove-love-love. It pounded in her ears like the beat of an unleashed set against a cliff. And she was the cliff. Cold and dead with that passion rocking against her in unavailing waves.

Suddenly there was quiet. Paul put her gently in a chair.

"I shouldn't have done that," he said in a low voice. "Did I frighten you, dear? I—couldn't help it."

LOVE'S REALIZATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-SIX

It would kill Paul if he ever found out that Faith didn't love him. And she didn't. She knew that now. The fires of such love as he wanted from her, had burned out. She had nothing in her heart for Paul but an aching tenderness, a desire to protect him from pain.

But she must see it through. She must devote her life to making him happy. Because it was her fault if she had made this terrible mistake: believing that love could be a flowing tranquil force with no swell and drag of passion like the undercurrents in deep bright water.

"You'll stay with me until I grow accustomed to having you, beloved?" he pleaded. "You won't go away?"

"I'll stay. Faith felt humble. Paul was being so gentle with her, so fearful of frightening her again.

He had become once more the charming whimsical companion of those first walks she had taken with him in the Luxembourg Gardens in Paris. But behind the light in his hazel eyes, the boyish smile on his lips, Faith knew the longing that was gathering there for her.

"I'll wait until summer to go to Reno, Paul. I wrote Hunter's lawyer yesterday. But you'll have to promise me something."

"Anything you want, my sweet. A cornucopia of suns and moons. Or would you prefer—" he said quite seriously, "a mountain brook and a birch tree, because they have silvery reflections like you."

"None of those things." she laughed. "Have you forgotten you're an inventor, Paul?" And the laughter went out of her voice. "Aren't you ever going to do anything about your motor?"

That was what she wanted him to think about and talk about. She felt safer in laying foundations on that dream of his.

"There's our adventure," she said.

"Some day.' And his face looked suddenly sealed, as if he were hiding something from her.

One morning Faith woke to realize that she had been in New York three weeks; that she had grown accustomed to the hideous red hangings and maple of the furnished room; that she had worn the same dress—a black tailored suit—four days in succession, and that stagnation had descended upon her. She seldom left the house. She read magazines, polished her nails and stared out of the window at the opposite brownstone fronts. And every evening she dined with Paul in the greasy little Italian restaurant on Second Avenue.

That afternoon she went out to look for work. Surveying herself first in the mirror, she said severely. —"You look disgustingly rich, as if you'd stepped off the rue de la Paix—Not at all like a poor honest girl down to her last penny." Somehow she didn't want to look poor today.

Her small beret rode jauntily on the smooth shining waves of her hair. The pale spring tints of her eyes and skin were fragile against the sable collar of her smart little green jacket. But there were violet shadows under her eyes, and she had grown thinner.

Mechanically she turned up the street where once a girl called Faith Martin had stood in the window of a flower shop looking toward Park Avenue, with so many hopes and dreams in her heart. It all came back to Faith with a terrible and poignant sweetness, White carnations—and Hunter Barclay, the smartest handsomest young man in town.

Her knees felt weak as she neared the shop. If she looked in, she would see Miss Prime buzzing about like an ancient bee among flowers. And perhaps some other girl romancing about another Prince Charming.

Suppose she went, Faith thought, and said—

"Good afternoon, Miss Prime. I married Hunter Barclay, and now I'm divorcing. And I want my job back, please."

How fantastic it sounded! Why had she come here? Her face averted from the shop window, she hurried by to Park Avenue. In the crisp winter sunshine, the sort of women she used to gaze at with envy, passed her. She was as well groomed as they; she carried herself with the same detached ease.

Impulsively, she turned into one of the rendez-vous of fashion at that hour. Why shouldn't she have a cup of tea? For a moment to feel again the atmosphere of luxury, the soft moving, soft speaking people around her. It was delicious to be sitting in a place like this. She sipped her tea slowly.

"Well—well — where have you been?" Of all people, Philip Stevens popped into the chair opposite her. There was a comlacent smile on his florid goodlooking face. He had gained weight. His shoulders bulged under the grey and white check of his business suit.

"Why hello, Philip—" Faith shrank back a little sorry now that she had laid herself open to such an encounter.

He opened his silver cigarette case with a flourish. "Have one? What's the news?" But his eyes, always slightly injected with red, were knowing.

"There isn't any." Faith pushed aside her tea cup, and glanced around for a waiter.

Philip poked a fleshy finger at her. "Come now, young lady, I'll tell you then. Got a cabe from Gertrude last week. She's coming home, mad as a hornet." He chuckled. "I cabled her back that divorces were cheaper in Paris where she could keep in touch with her dressmakers. What do you think of that?"

"It doesn't interest me," Faith said.

"And what's more," Philip Stevens continued: "I've heard rumors about you and Hunter. . doesn't matter to me now what you do, my child," he added cheerfully. "I'm still strong for the widow. But if I were you, I wouldn't throw Hunter over. A little bird told me he sailed on the Isle de France the other day."

Faith threw down a dollar bill, and rose from the table. "I've listened to enough people's advice." Her voice was choked. "I don't ever want to see Hunter again." And she walked out of the restaurant leaving Philip to gape after her.

She was still trembling when she reached the rooming house. She meant what she had told Philip that she never wanted to see Hunter again. She wouldn't stay in New York if there was any chance of seeing him. She would go to Reno right away. Get it over with.

Paul found her lying down, pleading a headache. He sat quietly beside her, after lighting a fire in the little fireplace. Faith closed her eyes listening to the crackle of wood.

When she opened them, she felt Paul watching her. He had put out all the lights except one lamp. In the flickering shadows and dying flames of the fire, he looked gaunt and brooding.

Faith made an effort to sit up. "What are you thinking of?" He stretched his fine thin hands to the wood glow, hunched in his chair so that he seemed all shoulders and knees. "You", he said.

"I'm nothing to think about," Faith wearily returned.

Paul got up then and leaned over her. She couldn't suppress her instinctive move back among the pillows, away from his lips. But he hadn't intended to touch her. Under the mane of his red hair, his young face was strained and grave. He looked at her for a moment His eyes seemed to reach out, probing the depths for things even she could not see.

"Goodnight, my sweet," he said softly at last. "I may have something to tell you tomorrow."

But the next day he didn't turn up. He left a note for her in the morning. "Faith dear: I may be away on business for a few days. You'll hear from me soon."

Where had he gone, Faith wondered a trifle irritably. She must wait now. It wouldn't be fair to skip off to Reno until he got back to skip there was no use looking for work since she had decided to get the divorce at once.

So she fretted and moped until the third day when Paul came back. It was in the morning. She was so surprised to see him, and so glad, too, that she ran to him and flung her arms around his neck.

"Paul, where have you been?"

There was an air of tenseness, of excitement about him. He smiled down at her, an odd twisted little smile. "Prepare yourself, my dear—I've found a backer for my airplane motor," he announced. "I didn't want to tell you until I was sure.'

"Oh, Paul—I'm so happy!" Faith stammered. The lovely color rushed to her face, lifting it to radiance. "But how?—why?—"

"I want you to come with me," Paul went on in that odd excited way. "You can help me a lot, Faith. Meeting him, I mean and —you know—telling him what a great fellow I am. We're to go to his office. Can you be ready in half an hour?"

"In a twinkling," Faith cried. She felt awakened, electric. Paul was alive again. She was alive. It was this horrible house, and the dull dead days that had got on both their nerves, distorting everything.

Her cheeks were pink, her grey eyes sparkling when she joined him in the hall. She wore the jaunty beret, and the green jacket with the sable collar.

"You look gorgeous," Paul whispered. But he wouldn't answer any of her questions.

The office was on Park Avenue near the Grand Central. Going up in the elevator, she noticed that Paul had grown very pale. He stoped before a door on which was painted in black letters—Rider, Inc.

"Dan Rider!" Faith gased. "Oh Paul, why didn't you tell me?" Suddenly, she wanted to run away.

Paul took her by the arm, He leaned close to her, and there was the old hunger and longing in his eyes. "Trust me, Faith darling. It's all—for you."

Before she could speak, he led her past a smiling young woman in the outer office. Two men were standing by the window in the inner office. They turned as Paul opened the door.

The room seemed to reel toward Faith. Dan Rider's face was blurred in a smile. Paul had let go of her arm.

She stood staring at the tall man who came forward.

"Faith—sweetheart."

The world receded. There was just Hunter reaching her, holding her close, murmuring broken little words over her.

"I need you, Faith—I didn't dare go to you until Paul found out I was here, and came to me. He told me—you couldn't deceive him, Faith—He knew you were mine——"

Faith was sobbing. "Paul did this for me? He knew I wasn't happy then. I loved you all the time," She raised her head to look into the deep blue of Hunter's eyes.

Behind them, the door closed softly. The others had gone.

"It's true then—really true." Faith murmured wonderingly. "We have found each other. Oh, Hunter my darling, think of all we can do and learn together." Everything was blotted out again as his arms locked her to him.

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

Princess May and her three brothers.

EVEN as a girl of fourteen, Princess Victoria May of Teck, one day to be the Empire's Queen, was as comely and graceful a princess as any in the land.

Trained early in life in queenly ways, she became a woman of perfect assurance, touched, when the occasion demanded, with the haughtiness and dignity demanded of royalty, but capable at all times of displaying the human emotions, characteristics of the loving wife and mother.

To-day's picture shows Princess May (as she was known before her marriage) at the age of fourteen. With her are her brothers, Prince Adolphus (left), Prince Francis (right) and (seated) Prince Alexander, now Earl of Athlone. They were children of Francis, Duke of Teck. This picture was taken in 1881.

Nine years later, when the beautiful Princess was 23, she was betrothed to Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence, heir in succession to the throne. (His father, Edward, was then only Prince of Wales.) The betrothal, it was whispered at the time, was a "state affair". It is now common knowledge that both the Princess and the Duke were genuinely fond of each other.

But the betrothal of Princess May and the Duke of Clarence was broken by death. Prince Albert Victor died in January, 1892, and Edward's second son, Prince George, became heir to the throne.

Again the whisper of "state reasons" was heard when, a few months after the death of the Duke, Princess May was engaged to marry Prince George. Perhaps they did not know the story of how Prince Albert Victor on his deathbed drew his brother George to him and said: "Take care of her for me, George."

To this day, it is said that the Queen still wears the ring given to her by her first-betrothed.

Burke, 14 Highland Avenue, became the bride of Mr. James Kenneth Crosby, son of Mrs. Crosby and the late Mr. James Crosby of Ameliasburg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. J. Walker, pastor of the church.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a smart ankle-length frock of brown crepe with boat collar of mòire, the long sleeves being trimmed with touches of moire and white. She wore a white velvet turban with nose veil and a corsage of Talisman roses.

Mrs. Lawrence Burke was matron of honor and wore a becoming frock of emerald green crepe with frilled white Regency collar and trimming of white satin. She wore a black and white hat and a corsage of white roses.

Mr. Lawrence Burke, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Buffet luncheon was served, the guests being immediate friends and relatives of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Crosby left on a short wedding trip to western points and upon their return will take up residence in Oshawa.

MISSION WORK AMONG JAPANESE IS DESCRIBED

Seven Japanese Ministers Labor in Vancouver Field

Madoc, March 15—The regular weekly meeting of Trinity Young People's Society was held in the Sunday School rooms of the church with a good number present. An attendance contest is being held and two sides have been chosen with Miss Jean Phillips as one leader and M. Rutherford as the other. Mervyn Rutherford's team were victorious at the first meeting.

Owing to the illness of the president, Miss E. MacDermid, the vice president, Mrs. Wesley Hulin had charge of the meeting. Following the singing of hymn 168, the minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. The Scripture lesson from Psalms 1 and 2 was read. Reverend G. W. Rivers then led in prayer.

The program was under the direction of the missionary convener, Miss Aileen Kelly, but owing to her absence, Mrs. Hulin conducted.

A letter from a missionary labouring among the Japanese in British Columbia was read. It gave a very interesting outline of the work of Christian missionaries among these people. It disclosed the fact that at the present time there are seven ordained Japanese ministers and one student at Vancouver, B.C.

A poem "What Counts in Life" was read by Miss Mary Bronson. A knowledge contest was held. Miss Edna Salisbury and Miss Minnie Ferguson rnedered a very pretty piano duet. The meeting was brought to a close by singing hymn 109 and repeating the Mizpah benediction.

Trinity Junior C.G.I.T.

On Tuesday evening the junior C.G.I.T. held their meeting at the home of Miss Helen Wellman. Five minutes was devoted to a sing-song. The hymn 613 was sung and was followed by repeating the C.G.I.T. purpose. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Roll Call was answered by a new name for the club and it was decided to call it the Blue and White Mohawks.

Miss Madeline Bailey was appointed the Press Reporter.

The Scripture lesson was read by Miss Ruby Parks. The Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. A very pretty piano solo was given by Miss Kathleen Phillips. An interesting resume of the life of Pauline Johnson was given by Miss Gladys Adams and Miss Madeline Bailey. Two vocal selections, were rendered by Miss Laura Storrings. Miss Verna Casselman read a poem written by Pauline Johnson. A riddle contest was conducted by Miss Iris Roberts. The meeting was brought to a close by singing hymn 622 and repeating the Mizpah Benediction. The hostess served a very tasty lunch.

STIRLING

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S. REGULAR MEETING

Interesting Program Given at Home of Mrs. McGee

Stirling—The regular monthly meeting of St. Andrew's Women's Missionary Society was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. M. McGee. The meeting was opened with a hymn and silent prayer, and short prayers by Mrs. Koffend and Mrs. Fargey. This was followed by the business of the meeting and the roll call. The Scripture was read by Miss Reid and Mrs. Nolan led in prayer. Mrs. J. A. Koffend gave a very interesting review of the Glad Tidings, and she was assisted by Miss Evelyn Drury and Mrs. Duncan. Mrs. C. N. Baker took the topic from the new study book, and Mrs. Montgomery lead in a period of discussion. Mrs. Alex Fargey read a paper on Dr. and Mrs. Goforth. Following the reports of the treasurer and if the visiting committee, the meeting closed with a hymn and the Lord's Prayer.

The household effects of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Murduff are being moved to their new home at Beeton Ont., where Mr. Murduff has been transferred by the Royal Bank of Canada. The family is expected to follow within a few days.

Mr. Charles Ratcliffe is under the doctor's care because of a painful injury to his foot, received the other day while he was cutting wood. The axe slipped, inflicting a wound that required several stitches to close.

Dr. Edmund Carleton and Mr. Art Duncan spent Tuesday in Belleville.

Mr. Clifford Chambers was taken to Belleville Hospital on Tuesday morning to undergo an operation.

Mr. Isaac McCaugh, former resident of Stirling, and now residing in Bancroft, with his son James, visited friends here on Thursday.

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. F. Jackman on Wednesday afternoon. The meeting opened with a hymn, and president Mrs. R. G. Lawlor led in prayer. The secretaries presented their report, which was followed by the business part of the meeting. Mrs. Arthur Scott was appointed delegate to the Belleville Presbyterial to be held in Picton. Mrs. Jackman then presented a further discussion on the study book. Mrs. Robert Patterson gave a very fine paper, and later an interesting letter was read by Mrs. W. Fox, from Mrs. Hoyward (nee Ruth Eggleton) now on mission work in China. The meeting closed with prayer by Mrs. Clifford Lansing.

Mr. Roy Tomilson, former resident of Stirling was a visitor in town this week.

The many friends of Mrs. Ezra Nicholson will be sorry to learn of her illness which has caused her to remain in bed for the past week.

Fashion Flashes

Come along and pick out a hat to welcome the first Spring-like day. A between-season model, in brown, black or blue bolting ribbon, is an off-the-face hat with gardenias at the side or forming a wreath across the front of the raised brim.

Not yet do thoughts of short evening wraps intrigue us. One shop has just sold a full-length wrap of violet blue velvet with a crossed fichu collar, deep cuffs and wide hem of snowy ermine.

It is interesting to note the general acceptance of color scheme that is favored often by a small group of women. This is especially true of gray and pink. It is used for a pretty dinner frock in medium gray taffeta with enormous circular collar and cuffs of pleated pink stiffened lace. The wide armhole is marked by shirring, and the skirt has a shirred section low in front.

If you like striped fabrics for evening wear, you should be happy, for the smartest women at the Winter resorts are wearing them. Typical of this fashion is a frock in red and white striped upholstery satin—the stripes in inverted chevron effect down the front. The frock has a camisole top.

For once mother and daughter agree on evening dance frocks for daughter. They are fresh and appealing and yet have a brisk, adult air. Very charming is a picture gown in turquoise blue taffeta with a quaintly-frilled off-the-shoulder neckline; the wide hemline is also outlined with ruffles.

A steady demand for the unusual keeps designers busy thinking up new clothes that are different but not too exaggerated for general wear. Different but most wearable is a long, fitted coat, in black satin with a tiny dot in silver thread. Silver lame lines the hem and the cuffs.

Chronic Fatigue
Tells of exhausted nerves

In health, rest soon overcomes fatigue
When you become chronically tired
There is an underlying cause.
Perhaps you cannot rest or sleep
Because of the irritability of the nerves.
Memory and power of attention soon weaken
When the nervous system is exhausted.
It is difficult to concentrate the mind
And the daily task becomes a worry and a burden.
Indigestion and sleeplessness ruin your temper,
And you become depressed and discouraged.
Whatever may have been the cause
There is a way in which to regain health
And that is by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.
New Nerve Force is created
To restore the functions to the bodily machinery
And ensure the healthful working of the mental and physical organs.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Sure She Can Make Him Quit Drinking

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mother is of a very nervous type, and I can't go to her with my problem. I am 15 and in high school, and I go to "younger set" parties and dances. I have met a young college graduate whom I see almost every day, as I walk past his place of business to school. We've been out together several times.

Lately I've heard he has been drunk several times, but he has always been sober in my company. I feel certain that I could stop his drinking if I went with him 'steady'. I care for him enough at least to try.

Forlorn

Many women, a good deal older than 15, have had the same idea about men who drink. But this dream of reformation almost never comes to pass. And at 15, when you're still in high school, it would be most inadvisable to attempt this sort of missionary work.

Seem to Be a Model Couple

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We fell in love at first sight. I am 20, and she is 17 and a senior in high school, and will graduate in June. I have been working for the past two years, and am making very good wages.

I suggested to her that we have dates only once a week, because I did not want to interfer with her studies. You see we are a good deal alike. Neither of s smokes or drinks, nor do we indulge in heavy petting, and we get along swell.

I wonder if it would be best to ask her before or after she graduates, whether she would like to marry me.

Undecided

As you were so thoughtful to suggest seeing this young lady only once a week, so as not to interfere with her studies, don't you think it would be well to exercise the same restraint about proposing?

The last few months before graduation a student has to concentrate on his studies, and if you pile on top of that the question of whether to become engaged or not engaged, you would be making things more difficult. Wait until she gets her diploma, by all means, is my suggestion.

Sensitive Boy Quits Work

Dear Miss Fairfax:

After a lot of trouble, I succeeded in getting a job which paid me $14.00 a week. I was free to save this money toward a college education, as I live at home and under no expense. I worked around a drug-store, and among other things had to deliver packages. The prescription clerk in the store used to guy and tease me a whole lot, and on the spur of the moment I quit the job.

My people are so disgusted with me that I find it hard to stay at home, and would like to "take the road." People don't seem to understand me, only mother, and that's why I hate to leave this house.

John

Often young people do things on the spur of the moment which throw their lives and prospects in the ditch. Leave no stone unturned to get that job back, and if you are so fortunate, ignore the prescription clerk's teasing.

If you can't get that job back, try to get another. And don't think of leaving home. There is an appaling number of homeless boys and girls wandering about the country, and getting into all sorts of trouble. Fight that morbid sensitiveness for all you're worth.

WHAT IS LOVE?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a girl of 20, and not sure whether I'm is love or not. What is love anyway? Please tell me about it.

When I don't see S. W. I miss him, but when I get into a crowd of other people, I forget him entirely. Then when I'm alone again, I think of him. But I can't picture myself as his wife. He is three years older than I am.

Therese

When you ask me to define love in the space of a few lines, you pay me a sky-high compliment. Philosophers, poets and average citizens have been nibbling at that riddle since the beginning of time.

It's safe to say you're not very deeply in love with S. W. since you forget him when you're in a crowd, and you cannot visualise yourself as his wife. Don't marry him until you do think of him in a crowd, and feel that you would be absolutely happy as his wife.

Library Corner

The Yachtsman's Yearbook is an exceptionally fine book edited by Alfred Loomis a noted authority on yacht racing.

In this fine book are many beautiful pictures and some really excellent stories told by men famous in yachting circles. The opening chapter is given to the complete account of the America's Cup Races. This account is one of the most complete stories of this series of races that has been written. In the book also are complete stories of practically all the important races of the year including the Bermuda, Miami—St. Petersburg races and many others.

Besides these are many fine stories of incidents in both racing and cruising. One of the best of these accounts by S. W. Sharp taken from "Yachting" is a vivid description of a sailing boat caught in a tropical hurricane.

The concluding chapter is given to the summary of yach racing for the year 1934. For anyone interested in yachting this book is recommended

Small boat building by Edward Monk is an excellent book for both the amateur and the professional boat builder. The opening chapters are given to the description of boat building and materials. These chapters are clear and concise and can be fully understood by even a beginner in boat building. In these chapters also are lists of materials and information on lumber and hardware for boats.

In the remaining chapters of the book are plans for many boats including cruisers, racing hydroplanes and sailboats. The plans for these boats are clear and exceptionally easy to follow. Boats built from these plans have been tried and found to be both stable and fast.

Handloom weaving, although a necessary craft of the past has become an art of the present. Handloom Weaving by P. Arnam, one of Pitman's Craft-for-all series, describes in detail all aspects of this useful art. The various types of looms are dealt with fully as well as plain and pattern weaving. The book also contains instructions for brocade, tapestry, and rug weaving and is illustrated by photographs and drawings of the various looms and types of weaving as well as a few pictures of finished articles.

The book is well written and is a valuable aid to any one interested in weaving.

Pitman's have also included in their Craft-for-all series a book on the art of felt-work written by Gwen Thornton. This book is well illustrated, first showing the bare pattern of the article and then as it appears when finished. This book should be of great assistance to the woman who makes her gifts. The field covered is very wide, ranging from three ways of making tea-cosies to nine ways of making dolls. A full-page color illustration at the front of the book gives the reader an idea of what gay things can be made from felt.

Ouida Pearse has written a very instructive book on the art of quilting. It begins by describing how to do the very simplest pieces such as cushions and gradually covers the more difficult steps until one can do the most intricate designs. The book is well illustrated, each picture showing clearly the outlines of each step necessary to make the article and then a picture of the finished product. The various lines of quilting described are quilting with a backstitch outline, double line quilting and shadow quilting, quilting with a sewing machine, quilting in a frame with a running stitch outline, quilting enriched with embroidery, quilting for dress accessories and thrift quilting.

This book is of special interest to beginners.

Still another in the Pitman's Craft-for-all series is "Constructive and Decorative Woodwork" by A. C. Horth. This interesting book is useful to teachers of woodcraft as well as the beginners and is easily understood. Consideration is given to the average home craftsman in relation to his lack of many of the conveniences of a well-equipped workshop.

A great many helpful illustrations showing the right use of tools and different designs. It also contains instructions for making articles such as folding tables, candlesticks, electric light stands, trays, and cabinets for wireless sets.

It ends with full descriptions of the final touches in varnishing and polishing. The finished products are fine combinations of usefulness and beauty.

Another interesting and instructive book is "Art Metalwork With Inexpensive Equipment" by Arthur E. Payne. It is a valuable little handbook for craftworkers and students. Payne has managed to present the commonly known metals and their relation to Chemistry and Physics, which deals with their colouring and finishing, in a not too laborious manner. The problems sketched for experiment are graduated to give the beginner some new knowledge as he progresses and also to give the more advanced worker direction and information. Of great importance is the special care taken to reduce the expense of the needed equipment to a minimum.—The Pen Club.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Enter Madame"

Intoxicating Romance Crammed With Comedy, Excitement and Beauty

Never before have we seen more sumptuous, elaborate, beautifully sung and satisfactory opera scenes in the films than those presented in the deft comedy-drama "Enter Madame", which will be the feature attraction at the Capitol Monday, and Tuesday.

Without for a moment impeding the speed and pace of the delightful picture, or detracting from its truly inspired comic moments, Paramount has included scenes from "La Tosca," "Il Trovatore" and "Cavalliere Rusticana," featuring the voices of Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan Opera Star, and Nina Koshetz, celebrated soprano. In fact, "Enter Madame" is two shows, an opera concert within a comedy!

The plot of the film revolves about the predicament of Elissa Landi, as a primadonna who has to choose between love and a career. But in this film the choice does not have to be made until she has been married for more than a year.

Cary Grant represents the romantic side of Miss Landi's dilemma, and the sight of him, after a gay and impetuous worship, chasing his career-mad wife through the capitals of Europe, carrying her fluffy dog and serving as background for the glamorous beauty, is occasion for much merriment.

Then the worm turns, and Grant careens off to the United States, where a much more sympathetic lady offers to help him forget. He institutes proceedings for a divorce and soon madame enters, thoroughly determined to win back her husband.

For the hilarious climactic scene Miss Landi has her husband, her rival and her entire entourage, including her doctor, cook and maid, assembled about a dinner table. And as the party becomes merrier, Grant's misgivings over the divorce grow until he's finally convinced that it is a mistake and is only too eager for a reconciliation.

The film ends delightfully in a flurry of kisses and reproaches. The pair elopes to South America to escape the clamoring reporters who have heard of their reconciliation and the other woman, who is out for revenge.

Miss Landi and Cary Grant are superb in the leading roles, but the film has such a wealth of delightful characterization that only bare mention can be given to other members of the cast who help to make it complete and distinctive entertainment.

Featurette

"Salted Sea Nuts" a big Vitaphone comedy packed with laughter together with a British Miniature entitle "Mother of Parliament" bring to a close an entertainment of exceptional merit.

"Du Barry" bread and butter plates will be given away Monday and Tuesday. Your last opportunity tonight to see "Man of Aran". The most talked of picture of the year, for sheer beauty of scene, human courage and devotion it cannot be eclipsed. Jack Hulbert in the laugh-riot "Camels are Coming" is the added feature on this departing bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Life Begins at 40"

Latest Will Rogers Comedy, Brings New Brand of Fun

If you have been saving up laughs, prepare to shed them now, for Will Rogers' latest comedy, "Life Begins at 40", opening a two day engagement at the Belle today, matinee daily, contains a bundle of hilarious situations that will act as magnets to the laughter chained within us all.

This breezy comedy, suggested by the Walter B. Pitkin book hit, is decided as hilarious fun fest that works into a pandemonium of mirth.

The inimitable Will is cast as a country editor who proves that the way to get a kick out of life is to put a double kick in it.

From other cities, reports tell of this picture delighting as the "clowning triumph" of Will Rogers' screen career. Youth and age rear in unison with the mirth-provoking happenings.

Rogers stampedes excitement into his small town, tries his hand at match-making, leads an army of veterans hill-billy hog-callers into battle, fights a frolicsome duel using wisecracks for every pistol bullet of his adversary.

Funny-bones are in peril, from all counts. The comedy of "Life Begins at 40", is doubled with a tender romance. As the editor, Rogers clears the reputation of a youth "railroaded" to penitentiary, and so stirs up a hornet's nest of hostility.

This Fox Film picture surely uncorks a new elixir of fun. The spectator will be under an unstrained uproar, laugh succeeds laughs. Witticisms pungent as any Will himself concocts, leave his lips in this picture. They deal with politics, women, rusticity, wealth, self-praise, love, youth and age.

After this, one may return to a studied understatement and report that "Life Begins at 40", is the season's blithest screen comedy, Will Rogers' crowning triumph, and the entertainment event of the season.

Rogers is the quaint country editor who furthers romance, breaks his enemies of their enmity, and has a good time in the meanwhile.

In the all-new and fine supporting cast are such screen personalities as Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, George Barbier, Jane Darwell, Slim Summerville, Sterling Holloway, Thomas Beck, Roger Imhof, Charles Sellon, John Bradford and Ruth Gillette.

Entertaining Shorts

The enjoyment of the above excellent feature offering is enhanced with the exhibition of a splendid array of varied and entertaining short treats including Dorothy Stone and Bob O'Day in the smart, tuneful and refreshing musical comedy "Paree Paree," Walt Disney's latest Silly Symphony "Tortoise and the Hare" in full beautiful technicolor, and the Belle latest important world events gathered the world over. Complete performances will commence daily at 2.30, 7.10 and 9.10. The feature offering at 3.10, 7.45, and 9.50 p.m.

Method of Egg Marketing Cause of Much Criticism

Toronto, March 15.—A definite movement is under way in Ontario towards the compulsory licensing of reputable dealers and truckers, and others connected with the egg industry, it was reported in the local trade yesterday.

It is understood that a petition will be made to the Ontario Minister of Agriculture and the Ontario Marketing Commissioner to adopt a scheme similar to that now in effect for potatoes. While a plan, proposed for the whole of Canada at the recent convention of the Canadian Produce Association, was forwarded to Ottawa, there has not been any news of progress, and it is stated in the trade here that the situation has become so acute that immediate action is recommended for the province.

Local egg prices again touched new low levels for the season yesterday, and a good deal of the blame for the sharp break of the past two weeks is being placed, by some members of the trade, on truckers. This was the case with potatoes. It is stated that it is almost impossible to keep track of egg supplies in the province with truckers marketing as at present.

The general complaint from the trade is that, while eggs are moving at a fair clip in comparison with recent sessions, truckers are bringing supplies into the city and selling direct to retailers. In view of the fact that truckers' eggs are not consigned to anyone in particular, they are usually unloaded for a price profitable only to truckers. This, it is stated, is one of the chief reasons for present market weakness. It is claimed that if truckers are licensed, and therefore known to the trade, regulations along the line of the potato scheme would make it impossible for them to bring eggs to the market until they are sold beforehand. It is planned, if the scheme is adopted, to compel truckers to deliver all shipments to reputable wholesale establishments and not to the retail trade.

"There is no reason why we should not be able to market eggs intelligently," one dealer stated yesterday. "We can't keep track of the extent of egg supplies if truckers are going to be allowed to run loose. If everything is brought under control, higher prices will result, and producers will benefit."

POWERFUL ARMY HITLER'S OBJECT

(By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 16 (CP Cable)—The German demands are growing while Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon and Lord Privy Seal Anthony Eden prepare for their visit to Berlin to talk over European security.

Uneasiness over the situation intensified today with predictions common Hitler will want formal recognition of a German rearmament far beyond the original British disarmament plan—a plan which Germany accepted as a basis for discussion before she quit the League of Nations.

Army, Navy, Planes

1. An army 500,000 strong. The Reichswehr strength allowed under the treaty of Versailles is 100,000, long service. The German claim, it is predicted, will be based on the increase in the French military service term and announcement the Soviet army is now 930,000 strong.

2. Recognition of a military air fleet of 1,500 planes. In the House of Commons last November Stanley Baldwin estimated the strength of German military aircraft as between 600 and 1,000 planes.

3. A German navy at one-third of the strength of the British navy.

(By The Canadian Press)

After a long debate in which German rearmament was constantly mentioned, the French government early today secured approval from the Chambers of Deputies of its plan to double the military service term.

Promptly Berlin newspapers accused France of attempting to "sabotage" the forthcoming Anglo-German conference and of killing all hopes of disarmament. The reaction was even more violent than that following the British white paper on increased British defences.

Meantime London looked to the Anglo-German talks with misgivings, apprehensive over predictions of probable German demands including an army of 500,000 men.

BELLEVILLE CHAPTER EASTERN STAR VISITED BY D.D. GRAND MATRON

Last evening, Mrs. Susan Reid, Bancroft, District Deputy Grand Matron, paid an official visit to Belleville Chapter No. 55, O.E.S. for the purpose of inspection. Over three hundred were present and the Chapters in the district were well represented.

Miss Irene Hallam, Worthy Matron, presided and accorded a cordial welcome to members and visitors. An impressive and beautiful initiation ceremony was conducted and the degrees of the Order conferred upon candidates. The District Deputy Grand Matron congratulated the Worthy Matron, Worthy Patron and officers upon the excellent manner in which the work was exemplified and gave the Chapter an inspiring message. As a momento of her official visit, Mrs. Ethel Adams presented the district deputy with a gift. Mrs. Reid thanked the Chapter most graciously for their kindness. The Worthy Matron called upon presiding matrons and patrons for a few remarks. Each in turn congratulated the officers on the proficiency of their work and extended fraternal greetings from their respective Chapters.

The St. Patrick motif was effectively carried out in the decorations in the hall. Lovely shamrocks were suspended from the lights and beautiful ferns and pots of shamrock were artistically arranged about the room. The Group of Mrs. Flossie Smith, Past Matron, were hostesses for the evening and served delectable refreshments. A delightful dance program was much enjoyed and concluded a memorable evening for guests and members of Belleville Chapter.

"Picobac's the Name,"

Mr. Picobac had dropped into the post office to ask for his mail and see who was there.

"Where have I heard that name before?" exclaimed his old friend the postmaster, passing out a bundle of letters and post cards, "You've got mail there from every part of the Dominion. Seems as if Picobac was the most popular pipe tobacco in the land. Everybody's smoking Picobac".

"It's a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke," explained Mr. Picobac with pardonable pride. "Everybody who tries it is bound to like it. It's the best Canadian Burley, and I want to tell you that the flavour of good Burley is a wonderful satisfaction".

"Are you telling me?" demanded the postmaster.

"I'm telling the world," replied Mr. Picobac. "You can roll good cigarettes with it, too".

BIBLE WITNESS SERVICE HELD

Ministers of City Join With Salvationists in Unique Service

A service unique and original — A Bible Witness, was conducted at the Citadel last night, by the Salvation Army Cadets, under the direction of Captain E. S. Payne.

A mammoth congregation, the largest of the series so far, filling the Citadel auditorium, united with Salvationists in true Christian Community Spirit, with Rt. Rev. Bishop Geo. Marshall, Rev. A. G. Sinclair and Rev. R. E. Newman, representing the city ministers.

Specially designed Song Sheets for the service were used, with an appropriate Bible Reader's Covenant, and at the close of the service an appeal was made for those present to accept and sign for the revival of Bible reading. One hundred and fifty persons accepted the Covenant.

During the service, a number of choice readings were presented, in relationship to the topic, "God's Book", "The Story of His Mother's Bible", "Wonderful Word", "Reading the Bible" and "I supposed I knew my Bible". Vocal numbers were also contributed — "The Bible My Mother Gave To Me" — Solo by Cadet Velle and "Break Thou the Bread of Life" by Quartette Party.

Following the music of the band and Songsters, the final appeal was presented in original form, being readings by the respective Cadets, from "The Diary of a Bible", being typical inferences as to how neglectful and irreverant many folks are in their care and use of the Bible. It was a powerful challenge to Read the Bible.

Captain and Mrs. W. Hawkes and some delegates from Picton, attended the service.

The campaign goes on according to the details in regular announcements.

Laurel And Hardy "Team It" No More

Hollywood, March 16— For seven years Oliver Hardy, stout and pompous screen comedian, has been venting his wrath on slight Stan Laurel. Today the "team" is split.

Producer Hal Roach announced Laurel declined to continue under contract because they disagreed about screen story matters. Neither the producer nor Laurel was available for further comment, but a studio attache said that "is all there is to it."

Which leaves the Laurel plans indefinite. But Oliver Hardy, under the Roach colors, will keep on getting into trouble in a series of domestic comedies.

SPEAKERLESS CONVENTION

Windsor, Ont., March 16 (CP)—A "speakerless" convention will be held by the District of Ontario Lions Club at Hamilton, this year, according to Francis Howe, of Ottawa, District Governor.

"I have listened to so many speakers at various banquets and found so few that have been worth listening to, that speakers will be deleted from our Hamilton convention," Mr. Howe informed the Windsor Club last night. The Hamilton sessions will be held June 16, 17 and 18.

IRISH SPIRIT IS STILL EXISTENT

St. Patrick's Day This Year Falls on Sunday

The spirit of the Irish still shines undimmed, and is reflected in the activity of local stores purveying various sentimental novelties and favors dedicated to the occasion.

Sunday of this week will see March 17—St. Potrick's Day in the morning—roll around again, and once more thousands of Irishmen throughout the Dominion and the world will sport a shamrock leaf in their buttonhole, the true symbol of their native land.

Florists of the city report a fair business in the retail of green plants of any sort, but actual shamrocks were declared hard to get. Only a few potted plants of the flower or bloom were on hand on one shop.

Already the stores are feeling the weight of the day. Cards, emblems, novelties, all containing the best wishes of one Irishman to another on the occasion of the day are being dispensed freely, in greater numbers than in previous years, it was said by one stationery store. Through the mails hundreds of letters are also being sent and received marked with the familiar harp and the age old saying of "Erin-go-Braugh."

This evening special St. Patrick's Day parties and dances have been arranged in the city.

B. C. I. Qualifies for Finals Defeating Chatham C. I. in Interscholastic Series by 3-2

Will Meet Ottawa, Who Defeated Westdale 12-0

FAST GAME

Johnson Scores All Goals For Winners and Sharpe Plays Well

Kingston, Ont., Mar 16—(Special)—Belleville Collegiate Institute team qualified to meet Ottawa High School of Commerce for the Ontario Secondary Schools hockey championship, when they nosed out a 3 to 2 victory over Chatham Vocational School here Friday night. Ottawa had previously beaten Westdale Secondary School of Hamilton 12 to 0. The final will be played Saturday night, following the consolation game between Chatham and Westdale.

It was Belleville's ability to take advantage of Chatham's penalties in the last period that won the game for them. They scored their second goal, when Chatham were a man short and the winning goal came when Chatham had a man on the bench. On the other hand they almost tossed the game away themselves on penalties for in the last periods two penalties at almost the same time found them playing four men to six and it was here that Chatham counted their second goal.

Brilliant rushing by Johnson, who scored all three Belleville goals and smart goal tending by Sharpe, were the high lights of the hardchecking rugged game, which saw Belleville with just enough at the finish to rap home the winning goal.

Belleville played hard hockey from the start and skated well with the speedy Chatham forwards. It was not until seven minutes after the game opened, that Johnson scored for Belleville, picking a corner of the net to beat Steele. The Belleville team played a rugged, hard checking game, but Chatham broke in several times only to have Sharpe turn them back. Harding tore through on a pretty rush and Sharpe made a grand save. Babcock missed a sure [illegible] when he tried to bat the [illegible] the vacant net.

Belleville [illegible]

Chatham played [illegible] improved brand of hockey starting the 2nd period and forced Belleville on the defensive. Babcock's rush ended in Sharpe making a beautiful stop, but before he could clear the puck away Everitt swooped in and drove it into the twine. Johnson returned the play to the Chatham nets, but his pass out was wide. Everitt drew a penalty for upsetting McElrath as the latter went to shoot, but Belleville were unable to take advantage of the extra man power.

The teams gave everything they had in the last period and it was because they had more in reserve, that Belleville finally won. The puck travelled up and down the ice with both goalers making some brilliant saves on dangerous rushes. The play wore on past the half way mark in the period before Belleville got a break. McElrath was through for what looked like a goal when Everitt tripped him and drew a penalty. Immediately Johnson grabbed the rubber and scored on a high shot, that completely fooled Steele.

Their advantage was short-lived however, when Kenny and McCreary were benched for tripping and Everitt returned to the ice. The two man advantage was too much of a handicap and when four Chatham players swarmed into the Belleville territory Boyer beat Sharpe to tie up the game again. A minute later Everitt again drew a penalty for tripping and Belleville once more turned on the pressure. Johnson and McElrath tore in on a pretty rush, but Johnson's shot went past the nets. The Belleville centre however raced in fast picked up the loose rubber and slapped it past Steele for the winning goal. In the remaining two minutes Belleville kept the puck well out of the danger zone.

The teams:

Belleville—Goal, Sharpe; defence, McElrath, Logie; centre, Johnson; wings, Finnegan, McCreary; subs, Muir, Liddle, Lee, Hannah, Kenny.

BRIGHTON AND WOOLER BEATEN IN TRENT LEAGUE

High School and Benedict Proctor to Playoff For Trophy

MANY SURPRISES

Wooler Led League Nearly All Through Season

Trenton, March 16.—(Special)—After leading the league most of the season, the Wooler entry fell before the surprising Benedict-Proctor team on Wednesday night and were eliminated from the running in the Trenton and District Hockey League. The silver-platers won 4-2 and took the round 9-4. The High School and the Benedict-Proctor will battle the best two games out of three for the Courier-Advocate Cup. The runners-up will each receive medals.

Battling to overcome a three goal lead, Wooler pressed from the beginning and had the Benedicts 2-0 in the second. In the opener Roy Smith banged home Carm Ruttan's pass to give hope to the boys from Wooler and a large number of fans who journeyed to town for the game. The balance of the period went scoreless but not before some real hockey was displayed by both teams. Soon after the beginning of the second canto Friday Ruttan raced in and circled the defence to let a back hand shot fly that beat Cotterell. With but one goal down Wooler played inspired hockey but the close-checking silver slingers held them at bay. Tid Blakeley spoiled the fun for the visitors when he netted a pair before the period closed.

In the third Blakeley checked Steenburg at centre and passed to Wells who went in to score. Blakeley, who has excelled himself in his comeback, put the series in the bag when he scored his third tally of the game on Vandevoort's pass. Vandevoort went in on Bryant alone but was stopped as the game ended.

Every man on each team turned in fine games and were exhausted as the final bell rang. Tid Blakeley was the pick on the ice with three and an assist to his credit. Bill Miller spent a busy night watching Roy Smith, sharpshooting ace for Wooler, and Bill is proud to think that he only let Roy away once to score in the two games. Roy led the league with goals and missed the first three games.

Benedicts—Goal, B. Cotterell; defence, S. Cotterell and Beale, centre, Blakeley; wings Miller and Wells; subs, Wallace, Vandevoort, Harvey.

Wooler—Goal, Bryant; defence, Claude Ruttan and Redcliffe; centre C. Ruttan; wings Roy Smith and Steenburg. Subs— Putnam, Gates, Teale, Scriven, McColl.

Referee—G. Bowen and W. Bowen

Trenton, March 16.—(Special)—Last Tuesday night, Brighton was eliminated from the race in the Trenton and District Hockey League when they won from the High School by 1-0 but lost the round 6-3. The High School will now meet the winner of the Wooler-Benedict series in the finals. Brighton forced the play throughout but the student's defence of Kerr, Heaney and Mitchell seemed to break up the plays of the black and white. Gray, in the scholar's net, was sensational at times. The first period went scoreless but at the opening of the second Brighton played five up and Chapman beat Gray for the lone tally of the game. The remainder of the pastime was thrills and spills as both bore down without registering a counter. Utronki led the attack for the visitors but the kids had him checked very well as they all knew that he seldom passes the puck. Smith at centre was also one of the Brighton spotlights and he turned in a fine game both offensively and defensively. School hockey finds all the players putting forth all they have. The work of Heaney, Dadswell, Lamore and Kidd was mostly responsible for the High School to enter the finals.

High School—Goal, Gray; defence, Heaney and Mitchell; centre, Kidd; wings, Beale and Derry, subs Kerr, Cain, Dadswell, Lamore, Staples.

Brighton — Goal, McKinnon; defence, Utronki and Lindsay; centre, Smith; wings, Waddling and Lambert. Subs, Shannon, Chapman, Cheer, Purdy.

Benedict-Proctor 5—Wooler 2

The biggest surprise of the hockey season was when the Benedict-Proctor beat the league leading Wooler sextette by 5-2 in the second game. The winners were not given a chance to beat the fast travelling Woolerites. They had to battle with Carrying Place for the fourth place in the league and came back to take the first game and pile up a three goal lead for the second encounter. A clean passing game, with every man keeping their man under the check, won for the silver-platers. Tid Blakeley scored the opener when he beat Bryant after taking Miller's rebound. Wooler forced the play but Bob Cotterell rose to the occasion to keep them off the score sheet till the end of the second period while his teammates ran in two more in the second. Miller shot from the blue line to the boards and Blakeley batted in another rebound. Led by Roy Smith, Friday and Yum Ruttan the Wooler lads saw hope waning and continually went in to miss the net or have Cotterell turn them away. Gates got the first counter in a scramble just before the period closed. Friday Ruttan made it 3-2 at the outset of the last canto. He went to shoot afer beating the defence but missed the puck. Cotterell came out, but Friday shot again to score. Fighting for the equaliser, they failed to gain a counter but Blakeley blasted their hopes when he went in alone to score. Blakeley took the rubber in on Bryant but it rolled away and Miller grabber it and banged it home for the final tally. Wooler were without the services of Windy Ruttan owing to illness. Smith, Claude and Carm Ruttan were the pick of the losers with Bob Cotterell and the line of Miller, Wells and Blakeley outshining the other for the winners.

Benedict-Proctor — Goal, B. Cotterell, defence, Parks and Beale: centre, Blakeley wings, Miller and Wells, Subs, Harvey, Vandevoort, Wallace, S. Cotterell.

Wooler — Goal, Bryant, defence, McColl and Claude Ruttan; centre Carm Ruttan, wings, Smith and Steenburg, subs, Redcliffe, Scriven, Putnam, Teale, Gates.

WATSON CLARK BETTER HURLER

Pain in Pitching Arm Disappears With Slight Operation

By Edward J. Neil

Associated Press Sports Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 16—(AP)—Baseball's original Gloomy Gus for the past two years — sore-armed Watson Clark — is whistling and singing again and those happy chirpings may mean the difference between sixth and fourth place this season to Brooklyn Dodgers. The pain is gone from the pitching arm of the best southpaw Brooklyn has had since the days of Nap Rucker.

In 1932 Clark was just about the best southpaw in the National League. Some of it might have been mental, but Clark could scarcely throw a ball in 1933.

"You're out of the hospital," Casey Stengel informed Clark this Spring. "There's no surgeons around here. Let's see you pitch."

He changed Clark's windup, making him throw his arm way back behind his head. Clark started pitching. There was no pain. He went four innings against the regulars and they got two singles.

"Fifteen games from Watty," says Stengel rubbing his hands. "And we're in the first division. You can address me now on as Bonesetter Stengel if you wish."

Magedomas of Brockville are Beaten 4-3 in First Game of Playoff by Sudbury Wolves

Make Great Comeback in Last Frame Scoring 3 Goals

PRICE, SHERRY STARS

Coleman, Nicol And Kennedy Marksmen For Magedomas

Toronto, March 16—(CP)—Brockville Magedomas, having played some of their worst hockey of the season and some of their best all in one night, stood almost on even terms with Sudbury Wolves today at the halfway mark in their Ontario senior hockey playdown series. There was no favorite.

Apparently well beaten by a faster, better checking northern team last night at the end of two periods, he O.H.A. Senior "B" champions thundered down the stretch to score three goals and lose the first of the two game total goal series by only 4-3 They hope to overcome this margin in the second game in Hamilton Monday.

But for 40 minutes last night Magedomas seemed to have no chance at all against a fleet N. O. H. A. team, that did everything better and showed a rousing punch on the attack. The score was 4-3 against Brockville after the second stanza.

Particularly in the first period the eastern forwards failed to check back. Once they had skated into Sudbury territory there was no hurrying about the business of getting back and the Wolves took this situation in their own hands. They raced through the wide-open defences and made it a busy evening

Doug Runions scored the first Sudbury goal on a pass from Steven Conick. Four minutes later Gordon Anderson picked up a pass from Red McArthur and jammed it in. The pair duplicated the performance before the end of the period, making the score 3-0 and giving Coach Jess Spring an opportunity to talk his wingmen into doing some checking.

Goalie Scores Goal

Magedomas put up a better battle in the middle period. The forwards stuck to their checks and while Sudbury continued to force the pace, the O.H.A. team was dangerous occasionally. The fourth northern goal was credited to Cooper, but actually Tice hooked the rubber into his own cage, while trying to clear.

Verdel Price and Bill Sherry started Magedomas on the comeback trail in the last session by completely tying up the Sudbury attacks. The Wolves tried in vain to break through, while Price and Sherry used their bodies to advantage and even started a counter-offensive.

The period was eight minutes old, when Coleman tricked his way in close and fired a corner shot, that Goalie Anthony Healy had no chance to stop. Brockville supporters cheered on the comeback.

Coleman also provided the play for the second goal two minutes later, passing to Harry Nicol, who snatched it right in the Sudbury goal mouth and slammed it home. Kennedy reduced the arrears to a single tally, skating around the Sudbury net and poking the rubber into a corner before Healy could move.

It was a clean game, only two penalties being awarded, both in the second period.
for Goalie Tice.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

All sport eyes are focussed on the C.O.B.L. at Oshawa today as a number of motions of a paramount nature are expected to be tabled for discussion. Such important baseball questions as the possible enlargement of the circuit, the appointing of delegates to the O.B.A.A. meeting at Kitchener, the appointing of an Eastern Ontario potential O.B.A.A. executive member to replace the vacancy left by the retirement of Bill Kay from Peterboro, the matter of a schedule for the coming season, umpires and the possible returning to the old neutral umpiring system, the matter of guarantees and many other minor suggestions that naturally will be brought forward by the various team delegates. Incidentally invitations have been forwarded to Napanee Gibbards and Cobourg Ponies, requesting them to send delegates and sit in on the proceedings.

In the matter of the question of the expansion of the league leads one to cast glances towards Napanee, where the intermediate champion Gibbards are biding their time and saying very little. Incidentally we were favored with a personal visit from a member of the O.B.A.A. executive the other day. During the course of the conversation the question of where the Napanee Gibbards would play this coming year, intermediate or senior. "Well I can honestly say this, Mr. Gibbard does not want to be too cock sure that his champions will remain in intermediate circles," was the reply received from the O.B.A.A. executive member to a question we fired at him relating to the much discussed question. On the other hand the Gibbard-Gerow aggregation are in a rather peculiar position, they have an out and out senior team, now in the intermediate "A" ranks with no club to compete against in this part of the province. On paper it looks as though the Gibbards have only one of two choices in the matter, they must step up and play senior ball or take a bye in the intermediate "A" ranks and with a modern up-to-date baseball park and plant on their hands it looks as though the Napaneers have no other choice than to toss their lot in with the C. O. B. L.

Congratulations to Jack Wickware, inside wing of Sarnia Imperials, the 1934 Canadian senior football champion, born in Toronto 22 years ago today. He played minor under with Malvern Collegiate and Malvern Grads in Toronto before joining Sarnia in 1934. Also to Bill Miller, Philadelphia sculler, born in Brooklyn, N.Y., thirty years ago. Miller was amateur singles sculls champion of the United States from 1930 to 1933 and unsuccessfully challenged Bobby Pearce for the world's pro title last year.

Promoter Clem Allen and his local contingent of boxers, who appeared at the Airport on Thursday night, returned to town shouting "we were robbed" in a manner that would put Jumping Joe Jacobs to shame. Allen says, that both Fisher and Wheeler hit the cleaner punches and should have been given the nod. On the other hand, however, some spectators seem to think that the decisions were all o.k., which simply means that it depends solely on which side of the bread your butter is on, in the matter of how the decisions were rendered. At any rate some of the bouts would be well worth repeating in a local ring later this month. A boxing bout staged in the near future might create interest in the fight game before the staging of the proposed Silver Gloves tournament early in April.

"Warpy" Phillips, ex-Picton and Meaford port-side hurler, was in town yesterday renewing old acquaintances. "Warpy" would like nothing better than to turn out with the Belleville seniors in 1935, and is at present gracing the doorsteps in and around Picton. Whether or not he will return to Meaford later is problematic, he says. Incidentally while strolling down "the main stem" last night we bumped into Oscar McIlroy of Toronto. "What are you doing around these parts, Osc?" we asked. "Oh, I've been working here for some time and like the place fine, there's little chance of employment in Toronto so I struck out looking for work and procured a job here in Belleville, and I'll say you've got a nice little city here," came back Oscar. "Do you intend playing any baseball?" we wise cracked. "Well I'd like to try out with your local club if possible," calmly came back a reply. For the general information of the layman fan it might be stated that Oscar McIlroy is reputed to be the best third baseman to cavort at the hot corner in Toronto sandlot ball. He led the "hot corner" participants in the Western City League last year and batted .315 with hte fast Kruschen Salts team. Incidentally he would be a welcomed addition to the ranks of the local senior club, at that.

All checker players throughout the district should start practising up for the monster Eastern Ontario checker tournament, slated to be played at the local Y.M.C.A. on March 25th next. The best players from Oshawa in the west to the Quebec boundary in the east will be invited to participate.

Shibe Park, the home of the Philadelphia Athletics, won't serve beer with its baseball. The Pennsylvania supreme court has ruled Shibe Park could not have a beer license, because then every theatre, moving picture show, skating rink and place of amusement in the state would want to sell beer.

Playing on a rather sticky ice surface at Kingston last night the Belleville Collegiate interscholastic hockey team qualified for the provincial Secondary School Association finals, when they downed the Chatham Vocational School 3 to 2 in a hard fought affair. The Ottawa C.I. downed Hamilton 12 to 0 in the evening game of a twin bill to also qualify for the finals and tonight at Kingston Belleville C.I. and Ottawa clash in the provincial interscholastic hockey final game for the championship. Not since 1931 has the Sheils-coached aggregation advanced to such a prominent position in collegiate hockey circles. Before leaving for Kingston today Coach Shiels stated, that the Ottawa squad looked like tough opposition "They have everything, size, speed and general hockey ability, but our boys are far from beaten yet and we are hoping for the best and a provincial interscholastic title", optimistically stated Coach Shiels. Incidentally the locals all turned in stellar efforts last night with "Bud" Johnson bulging the hemp for all B.C.I. goals.

"Bud" Murray, ex-Peterboro keystone sacker, brought into the limelight yesterday by trying to duplicate an old baseball feat established by Joe Jackson years ago with the "White Sox". Murray appeared in the outfield and chased the spheriod minus his shoes and is now known as "Bootless Bud."

Carnera Stops Impellittiere In Nine Rounds at Garden

Bout is Stopped in Ninth Round By The Referee

(By Herbert W. Barker

New York, March 16—(CP)—The "old guard" of heavyweight contenders stands fast.

On the heels of Max Schmeling's decisive victories over such rising stars as Walter Neusel and Steve Hamas, another former world's champion, Primo Carnera, has hit the comeback trail with a technical knockout in nine rounds over fistiana's now-exploded "mystery man," Ray Impellittiere, taller than Primo but not quite so heavy .

This succession of events has cut the field of possible challengers to Max Baer's reign as heavyweight champion to five — Carnera, Schmeling, Art Lasky, Jimmy Braddock and Joe Louis, Detroit negro slugger.

Lasky and Braddock will settle their personal differences in Madison Square Garden next Friday night; cutting another member off the list. Carnera is slated to meet the winner and if the Garden can swing it, Schmeling will take on the ultimate survivor. There is no place for Louis in this program but the negro may make one with his fists before the summer is out.

Carnera, relieved of the world title and stopped in 11 rounds by Baer last June, fought a well-planned battle against Impellittiere, finally cutting down the Cold Springs N. Y., giant after 38 seconds of fighting in the ninth.

Referee Jack Dempsey stepped in to halt the bout just as Harry Lenny, the "Imp's" manager, rushed into the ring to save his charge from further punishment.

Although Lenny charged after the bout Dempsey had permitted Carnera to get away with practically every foul in the book, it appeared to most ringside critics Ray's own lack of condition and cautious style of fighting had contributed mainly to his own defeat.

Allan Cup Playdowns

By The Canadian Press

Advancing along the Allan Cup trail, Edmonton Superiors prepared today to meet North Battleford Beavers, Saskatchewan titlists, in the Western Canada Senior Amateur Hockey championship semi-finals series.

They won that right last night by turning back British Columbia's bid for the title. Kimberley Dynamites, after being taken to the third game. The Alberta champions took the victory 4-0 after losing the first game 3-1 and winning the second by the same score.

While they were eliminating Dynamiters in Edmonton, another team with Olympic aspirations moved up a notch in the elimination. Toronto All-Stars defeated the highly-regarded Hamilton Tigers 4-1, taking the best of three series with two wins after two tie games.

Their next step is a meeting with either Sudbury Wolves or Brockville Magedomas, who finish their two-game series Monday at Hamilton. After the Northern Ontario champions had gained a 4-0 lead last night at Toronto, Brockville crashed through with three counters in the third period to keep them in the running.

Quebec declared intermediate champions in St. Jerome, who defeated Three Rivers 6-1 last night and took the round 10-1. They clash in the next round with either Ottawa Senators or Montreal Royals who meet in their fifth game Sunday. Royals are leading in games 2-1 aftertwo ties.

At Port Arthur tonight, Ports and Winnipeg Falcons meet in the second game of their series to determine a winner for the Mannitoba and Northern Ontario district. Port Arthur won the first tussle 3-0.

Moncton Wins

Moncton juniors will represent the Maritime Provinces in the Memorial cup playdowns, meeting Ottawa Rideaus in the Eastern Canada semifinals. Last night they were held to a 5-5 tie by Truro but had enough advantage in the first game of the series to take the round 20-6.

The Western junior situation probably will be clarified tonight in the meeting between Saskatoon Wesleys and Edmonton Canadians at Edmonton. Wesleys won the first game of the total-goal affair 6-2.

Down in Ontario, Toronto St. Michaels and Niagara Falls play the second game of their Ontario Hockey Association Junior "B" series. The Falls team have the advantage of a 3-1 win in the first encounter.

At Oshawa, Kitchener and Oshawa meet in the second game of their Junior "A" series. Oshawa won the first encounter at Kitchener 4-1.

Toronto Rated Champions Despite Tough Opposition

By FRANK FREDRICKSON

Princeton Hockey Coach

Toronto should displace the Chicago Black Hawks as world champions.

Frank Fredrickson

The Maple Leafs boast a combination of speed and power that is rarely found on any hockey club. When they want to turn on the heat, few opponents can withstand their high-pressure attacks. But the Leafs, in my opinion, made a strategic blunder once they assumed their commanding lead this season. It appeared that they began to ease up. Their brand of competition seemed to say, "Well, we're too far ahead to worry. We can mark time until the playoffs". A hockey club that is setting a fancy pace should never slow down. The Leafs may discover that their fine edge of the early season has vanished for good. They may be unable to reclaim it when the playoff chips are on the table.

When playing with Boston during the 1927-28 season, I had it brought home to me how dangerous a letdown can be. The Bruins coasted home at the top of the American division. But they couldn't snap back into their one-time stride, and the Rangers walloped them in the playoffs.

Personally, I regard the Rangers and Bruins as the outstanding dark horses of the present race. I say this because I believe capable leadership plays a tremendous role in any club's success. It is equally important with player ability. Both Lester and Frank Patrick are born leaders. Lester's Rangers responded to their coach's psychology and startled the league with the prize comeback of the campaign. I believe they can duplicate their midseason feats wi'h the Stanley Cup at stake.

The dynamic punch and skating ability of both Chicago and the Maroons cannot be overlooked. Of the two, I look for the Maroons to go the farther. Tommy Gorman is another pilot who knows how to handle men, even though he employs a system somewhat foreign to the general practise.

Tom German

Any hockey manager will tell you it's tempting fate to attempt to decipher the crystal globe concerning playoffs and Sanley Cup winners. I agree. Speed and breaks, injuries and fluke goals mean so much that frequently the better team is walloped.

All things being equal, however, I look for Toronto to come through with colors flying. Conny Smythe and Dick Irvin should be able to whip their team into its fighting prime when the need arises.

CHOSEN TO DEFEND NETS ON N. H. L. ALL-STAR SQUADBROOKLYN HOPE

Don't Laugh! Tietje is Going to be Fine Pitcher

LESTER TIETJE

Leslie William Tietje's pitching average for 1934, his first year in the major leagues, was not impressive. He was forty-sixth in American league rankings. He won only five games while losing 14.

But he was pitching for the Chicago White Sox and that's something.

The fact is, the slim Scandinavian from Waverley, Ia., is a much better pitcher than his earned run average indicates, and is counted upon as one of the regular starting pitchers for 1935.

"He may win 20 games," Manager Jimmy Dykes said recently. "I could have used him in a couple of trades during the winter, but I don't want to let him get away. He has the makings of a great pitcher, and great pitchers are what we need."

Gets Bad Start

Many of Tietje's defeats last year were sustained when three or four of the White Sox regulars were out of the game, and drives that should have been easy outs went for base hits. Handicapped by a shoulder injury, Tietje did not round into shape until the season was well under way. But even with that handicap and the terrible support he received, he showed the stuff that makes winning pitchers under more favorable conditions.

He has had the advantage of expert coaching. Ted Lyons taught Les his slow curve. Sam Jones showed him how to watch the bases. He has learned rapidly, and is regarded as one of the most improved pitchers in the American league.

Tietje started his pitching career in his native Iowa. He was born in Sunner, Sept. 11, 1911. Four years ago he made his first professional venture, trying out with the Dubuque team in the Mississippi Valley league. Released, he went to Waterloo and was given a chance to pitch against Keokuk, rewarding Manager Dick Manchester by blanking his oppontnts.

Revenge Over Dubuque

Manchester later sent him against Dubuque. He won every game he pitched that season against the club which had released him in spring.

The White Sox bought him from Waterloo at the end of the 1932 season and sent him to Dallas in the Texas league, where he won 14 games. Joining the White Sox in September, 1933, he beat the Yankees and Browns in his only two starts.

And, oh yes, about that shoulder injury—it was nothing permanent. Just a strain resulting from lifting 65-pound egg cases during the winter in his father's store.

AN ARMFUL OF PITTSBURG PIRATES

Here's an example of how well Big Jim Weaver plans to hold up the Pittsburg Pirates when he toes the slab in league games this summer. The fellow Buccaneers who have commandeered seats on Pitcher Jim's shoulders are Paul and Lloyd Waner, the outfielding brothers, and consistent enemies of all opposing National league hurlers. Weaver stands six feet six inches high and is storing up steam to put behind the ball.

Green Mountain Boy in Yankees' First Line This Year

ROBERT (RED) ROLFE

Dartmouth's gift to the major leagues, Robert Abial (Red) Rolfe, begins his sophomore year as a Yankee with chances for a first line third base position all in his favor. Ability to stand up under the ordeal of being shifted from shortstop to bench to third as a yearling marks him as a stayer.

Rolfe came up from the Yankee farm at Newark last year to face a definite handicap. The training camp was full of infielders, and Manager Joe McCarthy liked them all, though each had definite weaknesses. It was necessary to experiment at different positions with each candidate, and this process doesn't help a ball player's averages.

Keeps Batting Eye

Shifted from short to third, Rolfe appeared finally to have found his job. Though he appeared in only 89 games, his batting eye remained sharp enough to sustain a 287 average. Considering weeks he spent on the bench, his play was remarkable.

The redhead, native of Penacook, N.H., will be 27 years old next Oct. 17. He played at Phillips-Exeter before entering Dartmouth where he was a Phi Sigma Kappa. At Dartmouth, Big Jeff Tesreau, former pitcher for the Giants, coached him.

Signing with the Yankees in 1931, Rolfe was optioned to Albany and spent the next two years at Newark where a committee of sports writers voted him the most valuable player in the International league in 1933.

GREAT TROTTER STEPS ALONG FOR JUST ANOTHER WORK-OUT

Equivalent in age to a man 7? years old, Peter Manning 1.56¾, fastest trotter the world has ever seen, steps out like a youngster although he has just rounded his nineteenth birthday. At a full trot, the greatest harness horse of all time, covers a speedy mile over the frost encrusted ring at Hanover Farms, Hanover, Pa., where he is pensioned forever from tracks over which he won his world's title. While many attacks have been made against Peter's great mark, no horse, has ever cracked it.

SPORT FLASHES

BY HARRY "S" FOSTER

MASTER OF THE MIDIRON

C. Ross "Sandy" Somerville of London, Ontario on whom Canada is pinning her hopes of capturing the British amateur title, has been the outstanding Canadian amateur golfer for the past eight years. Eight years is a long time to wear a golf crown, yet this quiet, unassuming Londoner does it with utmost grace and modesty. The champion's career dates back to 1926, when a mere lad in his early twenties he annexed the Dominion amateur championship. In 1928 he again outplayed all competitors for the same honors. Then two years in succession, 1930 and 1931 he demonstrated that "champions can come back" by again capturing the highest honors in the gift of the Canadian Amateur Golf Association. In 1932 he decided to invade the United States field, and startled readers of United States newspaper sports pages learned with amazement that the "Silent Sandy" from London, Ontario, had been in their midst. He annexed the United States amateur golf championship from Johnny Goodman of Baltimore. This was the second time that a foreigner had accomplished this feat, the first time being when H. H. Hilton of the Royal Liverpool club of England won it in 1911. The brilliant young Canadian will captain 10 of the outstanding amateurs, selected from all parts of the Dominion, who will go to England late this month in an effort to annex the British amateur title.

The team will represent the Royal Canadian Golf Association, and while there, they will play several matches, there is a possibility that through these matches Canada may, in the future, be included in the Walker cup matches, now played between the United States and Great Britain.

Those who know "Sandy" Somerville best, expect great things from him during this trip to England; his failure to do anything spectacular last year doesn't discourage them, because they know that the dour, unsmiling Scot is made of "championship stuff."

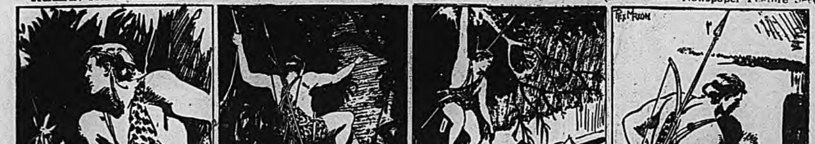
TARZAN THE UNTAMED—

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)



REX MAXON
T-97

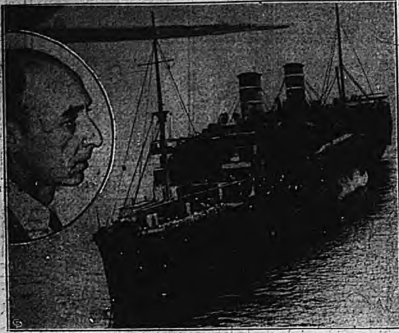
Instead of sleep only the vision of the captured Olga came to Tarzan's brain. He fancied he saw her at the mercy of the warriors somewhere in that dark, forbidding jungle. He growled in anger and self-contempt at what he considered his weakness.

The ape-man arose, shook himself and swung from his tree to that adjoining. Thus, through the lower terraces he followed the still fresh trail of Usanga's party. Toward midnight the stench of a native village assailed his nostrils.

He guessed that in the village he would soon find her whom he sought. As though stalking a wary prey, Tarzan moved noiselessly about the palisade, listening and sniffing. From an overhanging tree he dropped into the village.

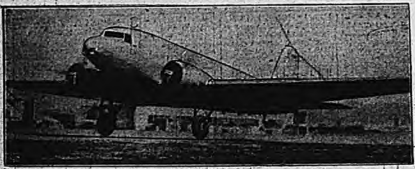
From hut to hut he went, searching. The warriors lay all about, in drunken stupor. At last, faintly, he found the delicate scent he sought, hanging over a small hut. No sound came from within.

MORRO CASTLE, "GHOST SHIP" FLOATS AGAIN



Morro Castle, liner upon which flames killed 134, is afloat again, after months of effort to drag her off beach at Ashbury Park, N. J., upon which she drifted after the catastrophe. Meanwhile, her skipper, Acting Captain W. F. Warms (inset), is grounded himself, having been deprived of his license as a shipmaster by U.S. authorities. The hulk is seen at anchor off Coney Island, New York, as naval experts examine her and decide her fate.

U. S ROBOT MYSTERY AEROPLANE MAKES TEST FLIGHT



A mystery aeroplane, robot-controlled, aroused considerable interest when it flew out over the Pacific Ocean from Oakland, Cal. The aeroplane, owned by the U. S. government, was in charge of Capt. Albert H. Hegenberger and carried four men. Great secrecy surrounded the flight and no details of the aeroplane's construction have been made public. Photo shows new robot-plane taking off in test flight.

MORE QUINTUPLET KIDS!

Minnie was just another goat, moving around in the confines of her cramped shed in her own quiet way. Of course, she was expecting a blessed event, but that was not unusual, as her life was bound to be wrapped up in the production of "kids".

Then within half an hour, she broke into the news. She had one, then another, and another. They totalled five, sufficient to place her on the goat pedestal for the rapid production of a family.

Shown ABOVE is Minnie's family as they appeared shortly after the event took place.

"Yesterday I had one goat," Frankie explained. "Today I have a whole bunch."

And everyone is doing nicely, thank you, despite the lack of a separate hospital. Quarters are even more cramped with Minnie now.

LAST OF THE U.S. DIRIGIBLES

Out into th eopen comes the Los Angeles, last of the U.S. dirigibles, from the retirement of the huge hangar at Lakehurst, N.J. They will get experience not possible in a wind tunnel. Food is stored aboard in the event that she should break loose with her crew.

The idea works, the fishermen say.

How much will it cost to send this to Cleveland by wire?"

"That's funny," she said. "I've sent money orders by wire lots of times and I always thought I could send packages."

British War Official Urges Coastal Defences; Note Hint at Security?

British War Office Issues Statement Sent to Germany

NATIONS CONSULTATED

German Reply May Determine Whether Protest be Made

London, March 18—(CP)— Great Britain called on Reichsfuehrer Hitler in a note today to explain, authoritative sources said, the meaning and extent of Germany's conscription move and to state the Reich's future policy toward the proposed European security system.

Great Britain was understood to have made it clear the scheduled visit of Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, to Berlin all depends on whether Hitler wants to enter the system on the full basis of the original proposals including mutual peace guarantees and a return to the League of Nations.

The note expressed Britain's regret Hitler saw fit to take unilateral action for which regret already had been expressed here unofficially through the press.

Protest Angle Minor Matter

Adolf Hitler

An official, asked if the note were tantamount to a protest said:

"The protest angle necessarily is a minor matter at this time. The primary matter is obtaining information as to what Hitler is going to do regarding the proposed peace system and whether Sir John's trip can take place as scheduled.

"This important information is necessary to govern our other signatories' future action in this situation.

Even as Europe speculated over the contents of the note, not immediately divulged, a war office official asked the House of Commons to look after the defence preparedness of Great Britain.

Contents of Note

London, March 18—(AP)— Great Britain tonight informed Germany Reichsfuehrer Hitler's announcement of the formation of a conscript army was seriously calculated to increase the uneasiness of Europe.

The note, delivered in Berlin by Sir Eric Phipps, British Ambassador, expressed the British government's regret at Germany's action.

The text follows:

His Majesty's government feel bound to convey to the German government their protest against the announcement made by the latter March 16 of a decision to adopt conscription and to increase the peace basis of the German army to 35 divisions.

Following upon the announcement of a German air force, such a declaration is a further example of unilateral action which, apart from the issue of principle, is calculated seriously to increase the uneasiness of Europe.

The proposals for an Anglo-German meeting arose out of the terms of the Anglo-French communique of Feb. 3 and the German reply of Feb. 14, supplemented by further communications between His Majesty's government and the German government.

His Majesty's government consider it necessary to call the specific attention of the German government to the effect of those documents.

Communique of Feb. 3

The London communique of Feb. 3, while noting that the armaments limited by treaty could not be modified by unilateral antion, declared the British and French governments favored a general settlement freely negotiated between Germany and other powers which would make pro-

FINE TRIBUTE TO R. B. HARRISON

"De Lawd" of Green Pastures to be Buried in Chicago

New York, March 18 (AP)—Accorded one of the most remarkable tributes ever paid an actor in death, the body of Richard Berry Harrison, "de Lawd" of "The Green Pastures," was taken to Chicago today for burial. The body will lie in state there this afternoon and tomorrow morning and tomorrow afternoon will be interred in Lincoln cemetery.

Seven thousand persons, white and colored, filled the great Episcopal Cathedral of St. John the Divine yesterday in services for the 70-year-old negro, whose benevolent characterization of "de Lawd" won the love of countless audiences in the five years he played the role.

"His life and example reflect honor and credit upon his race," said Bishop William T. Manning, "and upon all of us alike."

He raised "the truly religious spirit" of the actor and said that Harrison, born at London, Ontario, of runaway slaves, had climbed from "the humblest beginnings to a place unique in the history of dramatic art."

The coffin was covered with a blanket of 1,658 flowers—a flower for each performance.

It was carried from the church by fellow actors—"Moses", "Noah", "Gabriel" and other characters of "The Green Pastures."

EX-CROWN PRINCE FEELS PROUD JOY IN HITLER'S ACT

Warlike Thoughts Far From Germany, He Says

MISERY OF WAR

School of Training of Youth Pleases Son of Ex-Kaiser

Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Germany today wrote for the Associated Press his reaction to Reichsfuehrer Hitler's declaration of last Saturday, declaring Germany again would have a conscript army. It is as follows:

(By Former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Germany)
Copyright, 1935 by the Asso. Press.

Berlin, March 18—You the Associated Press) have asked me to make a statement concerning the most recent government declaration which Der Fuehrer and Chancellor issued concerning the re-introduction of the general obligation for military service.

I can only say I know myself to be at one with the entire German people in the proud joy that by this declaration of our Fuehrer and Chancellor, Adolf Hitler, the honor and independence of our Fatherland has been recovered.

Reich Needs Peace

Out of the mouth of our Fuehrer and from the different utterances by the leading men in the government all foreign countries know that nothing is farther from Germany's thoughts than warlike intentions, that on the contrary the Third Reich unconditionally needs peace for the completion of its great cultural and economic questions.

Our Fuehrer, who, as a simple soldier, always fought in the front line during the war, who, like all us veteran soldiers knows what a fathomless misery accrues to every people through the loss of human life, will do everything to prevent another catastrophe such as the last world war was.

In consequence of the rearrangements of relative power which took place during recent years on our old planet—the development of the Soviet Union, the great changes ensuing in East Asia of such nature that nobody can fully envisage their final consequences as well as on account of the difficulty which all colonial powers experience because of the efforts at self-determination of their colonial populations, all responsible European governments must, in my estimation, more and more come around to the viewpoint that old Europe simply cannot afford another war but that, on the contrary, its future depends solely upon the closest co-operation of all its nations and the defence of European cultural achievements.

What we old soldiers especially rejoice at is the re-introduction of the general obligation for military service and I believe there can really be no genuine soldier anywhere in the entire world who, if he is honest, will not understand this viewpoint.

For, our underlying thought is that the great school for training of youth, which the Prussian-German army had been for our people for centuries, is again being set in motion.

Only he who experienced the period after the revolution of 1918 here in Germany can grasp that many extremely vexatious manifestations among a certain portion of our youth can be explained only on the grounds that these young people until now, had to do without the strict and severe but just schooling of the army.

My great wish is that you (American) compatriots, who so frequently evidenced a most comprehensive understanding of our German Fatherland, may, with reference to this question, also judge us fairly and justly.

Martin Insull Looks for Job

Chicago, March 18 (AP)—Martin Insull—a free man again—looked for a job today.

The state, failing in its strongest case to prove that criminal intent contributed to the downfall of the Insull utilities, has washed its hands of further attempts to convict the Insulls.

Martin, banished from the United States as an alien, must, under terms of his extradition, return to Canada, where, his counsel John Northrup says, he will seek employment. He said as far as he knew, Insull had received no definite business offer.

Arrow indicates broken levee.

HYDRO MOTIONS TO BE CONSIDERED

Both Will Arouse Contention in The Legislature

Toronto, March 18—(AP)—Possibility of renewed discussion of Hydro loomed today as Ontario's legislators returned to Queen's Park to start their fifth week of deliberations.

Announcement has been placed on the order paper of two Hydro motions, both of which are expected to arouse contention. One is by Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck and the other by George H. Challies (Cons., Grenville-Dundas).

Mr. Roebuck plans an amendment to the Power Commission Act with the reported intention of confirming appointments made by the government to local commissions. Two of these appointments were Kenneth Christie to the Toronto Commission and John Newlands to a similar post in Hamilton.

Christie, prominent Liberal, was named in place of Loftus Reid but a Supreme Court judgment ruled Reid could not be displaced until his term had expired. Newlands succeeded Willoughby Ellis.

Effect of Mr. Challies' motion is to obtain representation of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association on the Commission. A delegation from the organization made such an appeal to the government recently but Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn refused it.

Although Mr. Hepburn last week reported progress in the matter of Quebec power contracts there has been no official announcement, whether the government contemplates repudiation or revision of these agreements.

Mr. Roebuck's police centralization bill may come up again today for second reading. Introduced two weeks ago for second reading it has yet to receive it. Conservatives have opposed the measure on the grounds it would interfere with municipal autonomy.

The Throne Speech debate will resume tomorrow and is not expected to wind up this week. T. A. Kidd (Cons., Kingston) who adjourned the debate Thursday will be the first speaker.

$4,000 ASKED FOR APPEARANCE

Halifax, March 18—(CP)—Giant Bobby Pearce, world champion sculler, will come from Hamilton, Ont., to compete in an exhibition race here this summer if suitable financial terms are arranged, it was learned today. If the regatta's promoters want him to defend his title, Pearce wrote, it will cost $4,000 Whether this proposal would be accepted was not indicated.

PREMIER'S NEIGHBOR DIES

St. Thomas, Ont., March 18—(CP) —Rock Bailey, leading Elgin County agriculturist and close friend and neighbor of Ontario's Premier, Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, died at his home, Sparta Road, Sunday evening. He was a native of New York State, coming to Elgin with his parents, who were Quakers, when three years of age. He was 94 years of age. Mrs. Bailey survives.

Ontario Intelligencer Cooking School Will Open On Tuesday, March 26th

Miss Andree of De Both Homemakers School, in Charge

UP-TO-DATE IDEAS

For the fourth time, the Ontario Intelligencer has arranged to give the women of Belleville and outlying districts the opportunity to enjoy the combined instruction and entertainment offered by Miss Claire Andree of the De Both Home Makers Schools.

The event, is scheduled to open next Tuesday at the Capitol Theatre. The opening class as well as the three following on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, will be held in the afternoon at 2.00.

As in the past there will be the distribution of brimming baskets and other household gifts at each session. The history of the De Both Schools in Belleville has been a history of crowded houses, happy audiences and the gaining of household knowledge that is authentic, up-to-date, and novel enough to make anyone yearn for a fling at household management.

The Ontario Intelligencer has secured the services of Miss Andree, not merely because of her wide reputation as cuisine expert and entertainer, but because she has endeared herself to the housewives of every city she has visited. Everyone who has seen and heard her will remember the contagious friendliness, the sparkle and gaiety she lends to the stage the moment she appears. And they'll also remember that from right then until the very end of the session, that sparkle never grows dim amidst the steady flow of instruction. She has the knack of teaching her art in such a humorous and yet masterful way that actually the audience is learning all kinds of things about this and that in the kitchen and all over the house, when it thinks it is only being entertained!

Miss Claire Andree is one of nature's born cooks. Her enthusiasm for her profession never dwindles, and she inspires everyone who hears her to hurry home and get into that intensely fascinating cooking game at once. For years she has been conducting schools, and for years before that—studying and experimenting. She knows the chemical make-up of foods and their assimilation in the body. Also she knows about schools—what her audience wants and how she can make this complicated problem of cookery simple and clear.

Alternating with her cooking instructions, Miss Andree calls attention to her kitchen equipment, shows exactly why she prefers to use this and that, and why she has them so arranged. Likewise she calls attention to the correctly set dining table and gives invaluable hints about this often neglected room. She talks about the laundry too, and may be counted upon to know and to tell her audience the very newest and best labor saying devices for this important part of the home. She tells the safest and best way to remove stains, shows how it is done, and, well, no woman can afford to miss it.

Plan now to accept the Ontario Intelligencer invitation to the Cooking and Home Making School next week. No one will regret the new things they'll learn, and no one but will be thrilled by the cakes and pies, baked before them and given away along with all the other gifts. Printed programs containing the day's recipes will be distributed daily.

BLACK LETTER 'E'

Fabric Will be Inspected by Lt. Col. R. Royce

Leamington, March 18.—(CP)— A piece of airplane fabric, picked up by a troop of Scout Cubs after it had been washed ashore, has led to the belief here Cadet Milton A. Lampl, 23, United States Army flier, perished in Lake Erie, while enroute from Cleveland to Selfridge Field more than a week ago.

The fabric in excellent condition, was silver colored and bore a black letter "E". It could not have been in the water for more than a few days and was found 100 yards west of the Government dock. It is being forwarded to Lieut.-Col. Ralph Royce, Commandant at Selfridge, for his inspection.

STREET SWEEPER IS READY FOR SERVICE

Starting its ninth year of service, with a total of some 25,000 miles to its credit, and completely overhauled, repainted and renovated, the city sweeper emerged, glistening in its new paint, from the sweeper barns today to tackle the first of the spring cleaning of city streets.

Alderman Benjamin Safe, Chairman of Public Works, and city engineer Mott made a complete inspection of the machine before Mr. Fred Ely, sweeper-driver let in the clutch and prepared to clean the market square as the first move.

From now until the snow flies in the fall the machine will average some thirty miles per day on city streets on its regular route of cleaning, starting at midnight on the downtown section and finishing on the east hill in the late morning.

CITY STREETS ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

With the recession of frost from the ground gradual and slow, and conditions for the spring breakup declared ideal by the department, roads throughout the city have come through the winter in good shape, it was reported by the department of public works today. Instead of needing scores of workers to remove the winter debris from the streets, this year it is expected the city sweeper will be able to handle the major portion of the work.

FRACTURES SKULL FALLS OF VERANDAH

Apparently losing her balance and falling backwards off the verandah of her parents' home on Queen Alexandra Drive, Little Jean Marie, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Trudeau, fractured her skull on Sunday. The injured child was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where she was attended by Dr. J. J. Robertson. According to the anxious parents little Jean Marie was playing on the verandah at their home and undoubtedly lost her balance close to the rail and fell some seven feet onto the cement sidewalk below, striking her head on the edge of the cement. The skull was fractured at the base. According to information given out today the little girl is resting quietly and hopes are held for her recovery.

POLICE COURT

The city's coffers were enriched some twenty dollars in local police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today, when two local motorists were assessed the minimum fine imposed under the H.T.A. No costs were included in the matters. One driver was charged with operating a motor vehicle with defective brakes, while the second was charged with reckless driving, arising out of an accident on West Bridge Street yesterday, that resulted in a telephone pole being damaged, when the motor car in question got beyond control.

Poll tax delinquents occupied the limelight during today's police court proceedings, some thirty-three informations being read. Of this number ten had paid their tax, seven failed to answer to their names, while the remaining 16 were on hand to inform the court they were unable to "pay up". After hearing many different stories and excuses His Worship gave all concerned until March 29th next to settle their debts with the city treasurer.

His Worship intimated that ways and means would be brought forth to confiscate goods and chattels where possible to meet the requirements of the poll tax city bylaw. A number of the delinquents to fail answering to their names today were reported to be at present employed at government relief camps. The matter is to be finally cleared up and taken from the court records on March 29th, His Worship pointed out.

Florence Babcock Shows Improvement

Steady improvement in the condition of little Miss Florence Babcock of this city, at present in the Belleville General Hospital awaiting an operation for diaphragmatic hernia, through which it is hoped to restore her misplaced stomach and other internal organs to their normal positions, may result in an earlier operation date than at first believed, it was intimated today by Dr. Geo. Stobie, in charge of the case, which is said to be one of the strangest in medical annals.

"The little girl is coming along fine under the treatment she is getting," said Dr. Stobie today.

No actual date for the operation has yet been set, it was added by him.

40 Hours Devotions Begun In St. Michael's Parish Church

Rev. Fr. Meehan Speaks on Life of St. Patrick

Exercises of the Forty Hours' Devotion began yesterday morning in St. Michael's Church with great solemnity in the presence of a large congregation. On the main altar of the church adorned with masses of cala lilies, daffodils and tulips, brilliant with candles, and flickering altar lights, the Blessed Sacrament was exposed during the day.

Solemn High Mass was celebrated at ten-thirty by Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., assisted by Rev. C. E. Baker as deacon and Rev J. J. Colling as sub-deacon. A choir of students of St. Michael's High School sang very sweetly the "Missa Angelis." At the conclusion of Mass a procession of the Blessed Sacrament took place. The procession was led by four tiny girls with arms full of flowers. Officers of the Sodality of the Holy Angels, the Children of Mary and the Holy Name Society followed, the president of each organization carrying the banner of the society. The girls of the Sodalities were attired in white and wore white veils and satin sashes of the color of their Sodality. Sanctuary boys followed and members of the Fourth Degree Assembly, Knights of Columbus, acted as guard of honor to the Blessed Sacrament. While the procession was in progress the High School choir sang the "Pange Lingua" and also chanted the responses to the Litany of the Saints, which was sung by Mr. E. Brown, Mr. L. Shiels and Mr. J. Fahey.

A large number of the faithful visited the church during the day. At devotions in the evening the Rosary was recited by Rev. J. Cann, St. Petersburg, Florida. An eloquent sermon was delivered by Rev. Father J. Meehan of Picton. Referring to the fact that the opening of the period of parochial tribute to the Blessed Sacrament occurred on the day when the church celebrates the feast of Ireland's patron saint, Father Meehan spoke on the life and work of this man of renown, of the faith that he enkindled in the heart of Ireland, faith that has remained ardent under adversity. The speaker urged his hearers to emulate the virtues of St. Patrick and the devout practices of the Irish people.

Solemn Benediction was celebrated by Rev. C. P. O'Gorman, Marysville, with Rev. E. M. Leacy as deacon and Rev. Father Cann as sub-deacon. Rev. W. Buckley of Trenton, was also present in the sanctuary.

Special music in honor of St. Patrick's Day was played by the organist, Miss Dorothy Grant during the services of the day, and soloists at Benediction were Miss Grant who sang a hymn in honor of the Blessed Sacrament; Mrs. G. Clapp, "O Salutaris," and Mr. E. Brown, "Panis Angelicus."

After devotions last evening confessions were heard until a late hour. This morning masses were celebrated at six, seven and eight o'clock, the last being a High Mass. Great numbers were present at all masses and received the Blessed Eucharist. Tonight devotions will be held at seven-thirty after which confessions will be heard.

Obituary

MRS. NETTIE ETHEL CONLEY

Mrs. Nettie Ethel Conley, resident of Thurlow Township for the past twenty-two years, died at her home on the Sixth Concession on Sunday after an illness, which had extended for some time. The late Mrs. Conley was born in Madoc Township 57 years ago. She was a member of the United Church and an active worker in all branches. Her husband, the late Willard Conley, predeceased her 18 years ago. Left to mourn are two sons, Oran and Ross at home, three daughters, Mrs. Evelyn Lamont of Lindsay, Mrs. Dorland Ross of Tyendinaga, Mrs. Luther West of Madoc, three brothers, Arron Robbins of Madoc, Serene Robbins of Moose Hill, Ont., Elijah Robbins of Edmonton, Alta., and one sister, Miss Minnie Robbins, of Fort William.

MRS. MARIA G. VINCELLI

After a brief illness Mrs. Maria G. Vincelli passed away Saturday evening at the home of her son, N. Lapore, 6 Bettes St.

The late Mrs. Vincelli was born in Italy 77 years ago. For six years she had been a resident of Belleville and was highly respected by those who knew her.

The funeral took place this Monday afternoon from her late residence to St. Michael's Church. Interment was made in St. James' Cemetery.

LATE GEORGE BIRD

Sunday afternoon the funeral of George Bird took place from his late residence in the 7th. concession of Sidney to the United Church at Marsh Hill where an impressive service was conducted by the Rev. H. N. Mutton, the pastor of the church, who officiated also at the graveside in Sine cemetery. Many friends were present to pay their last tribute of respect.

The bearers were Messrs. J. Connor, E. Spencer, D. Carl, C. Vanderwater, J. Marshall and A. Park.

Appeal Date Limit Nears

The last hope that any further legal steps would be taken to save him from the gallows seemed to be fading for the imperturbable Harold W. Vermilyea today.

Sentenced to die for the slaying of his aged mother, Aurelia Vermilyea, in this city on October 4 last, by Mr. Justice Jeffery, on the morning of February 26 at the conclusion of one of the lengthiest murder trials in the history of Canadian courts, twenty days had been allowed defence counsel in which to lodge an appeal. This period is about expired.

Questioned at his office regarding the probability of such a move, this morning, Mr. C. A. Payne, K.C. associate defence counsel of this city stated: "I have heard nothing yet."

It is understood, that the first move in the appeal would be taken by Col. R. H. Greer, K.C., chief counsel for the defence. No word had yet been received from him.

Harold Vermilyea ticking off the days in his condemned cell at the Hastings County jail, in spite of the fact, that the appeal limit had expired today showed little concern, according to officials. He slumbered untroubled during the night and spent the major portion of the day today as he has done since sentence was pronounced working his interminable cross word puzzles, and playing solitaire.

HEAVY SNOW IN NORTH ONTARIO

Drifts Six Feet Deep And Traffic is Suspended

(By The Canadian Press)

Northern Ontario lay snug beneath the winter's heaviest blanket of snow today, while swollen rivers in the southern part of the Province receded slowly from flood proportions.

Sudbury reported drifts six feet deep, streets blocked, traffic suspended until almost noon yesterday. Automobiles of more than 40 mine workers, coming off their shift during the height of the snow storm, were stalled along the road outside the city. Some were left by their drivers, who preferred not to take chances with bad visibility.

Haileybury, North Bay and Cobalt experienced similar conditions, with the dimensions of the storm reaching as far north as Swastika, near Kirkland Lake. The emergency fire department at Cobalt responded to an alarm, put out the fire, and when the time came to leave, had to dig their horses and apparatus out of the snow.

High winds blew the roof off Fort Erie Baseball Stadium, depositing it in Niagara Boulevard. Broke windows, and tore limbs from trees. Ice was blown over to the United States shore of the Niagara River, blocking the eastern channel and cutting off ferry service to Grand Island.

The remaining ice in the Grand River, in Western Ontario, went out quietly last night, but rains over the week end swelled the stream until the banks were overflowed at two low points between Caledonia and York. Cellars of houses in the river valley were filled with three and four feet of water.

CHAPTER ONE

Already it was nearing midnight.

Throughout the long, heavily curtained room, festooned with tinsel and made gay with spirals of brightly colored ribbons, the din of upraised voices redoubled. Laughter filled the air. At crowded tables the full-dress uniforms of many a European nation stood out in dazzling contrast to formal evening clothes, and about the necks of some hung the jeweled orders of foreign governments. Everywhere the white shoulders of women, the sound of voices calling gayly to adjoining tables, amid quick, eager glances that held a challenge and an invitation.

Waiters hurried down narrow aisles, refilling glasses, distributing toy balloons, streamers, and paper hats, responding to a very bedlam of calls in a dozen tongues. Exotic perfume and a blue haze of cigarette smoke hung heavy over the room where, at the farther end, a tall Christmas tree blazed and sparkled with innumerable lights and glass-ball decorations. Everywhere gaiety and warmth and the exhilaration that attended the passing of another year.

But in all this the two men at a corner table took no part.

Something sinister yet indefinable marked them as alien to the scene about them. They were not part of it; they had no place in the atmosphere of that glittering night club where Washington's officialdom were gathered to hold high festival at the coming of New Year.

It was as if, like migrant birds, these two had suddenly emerged from the blackness outside to meet in secret council, then quietly to be gone again into the frozen immensity of that December night.

At a near-by table the wife of a Belgian diplomat watched them curiously, and at last shrugged plump shoulders. After all, this was America—why be surprised?

An oddly assorted pair. About the younger man lurked something of the lithe gracefulness of a great cat and in his tawny eyes the lights caused little golden flecks to glint as he looked slowly and incuriously about him. The well-modeled head and fine, almost sensitive features contrasted strangely with the powerful columnar neck. The hands, long, white and tapering, seemed strangely predatory in their very gracefulness. In some vague way he resembled an animal crouching, unhurried, calculating, and ever wary.

The other might have been more easily placed. Nothing elusive there. The thick, squat nose had been flattened against his face, as if from the impact of some terrific blow, and his right ear stood out, thickened and misshapen, like the ear of a boxer. Deep pock marks scarred his heavy face, and when he spoke the close-set eyes remained fixed on the empty demi-tasse before him, as if unwilling to meet the other's gaze. The tone, when he spoke, was low, almost guttural.

"Chief, I got one thing on my mind, now that you talk about sending me back to the Coast".

He hesitated, then lighted a cigarette, while his companion smiled, revealing strong white teeth beneath the black, short-cropped mustache.

"Shoot."

"Well, it's this: I'm finding it hard to believe that you called me East just to blow me to a lot of good whiskey and send me up to the Washington Monument. Now, I'm not trying to force your hand, and I know that when it comes to brains I don't figger jack-high in them deep plans of yours, but—what's behind it?"

Again he hesitated. Again he inhaled deeply on his cigarette, then leaning forward, asked quickly, "Give us the low-down, Sari. What's it all about?"

The man addressed as Sari nodded and the smile on his thin lips deepened, but his voice still held an overtone of indolent contempt. "Always after action, eh Steve? Always yearning to wash up one little job and get going on the next. Ever realize that this passion for quick action has landed you into more than one nasty mess?"

Sari's catlike eyes rested for a moment on the pock-marked face, and fleetingly a look of amused derision passed over them. Then again they were veiled behind that eternal mask of quiet watchfulness.

"Well, it happens," the guarded voice went on, "that I called you East to look at something that's going on here tonight. I may have a job for you, Steve."

A grin wrinkled the other's face, and his thick, twisted ear seemed to flatten. "Ever put me on a job that didn't come off right, Chief? Where do we start?"

For answer Sari's eyes rose and, sweeping the crowded room, rested at last on the central table, where a party of New Year celebrants was jubilantly adding its own generous quota of hilarity to the general clamor.

"We start over there." The lips scarcely moved as he spoke the words, and Steve, crushing the cigarette on a plate before him, turned to follow the direction of Sari's gaze

Eight young men sat at that central table, and in all the gay room of midnight revellers, none were so whole-heartedly devoted to the pleasure of the passing moment. All were about the same age—perhaps twenty-five, perhaps a year or two older—flushed and jovial with the contents of many silver flasks that from time to time emerged above the table. Their heads surmounted with fantastic paper caps, their evening clothes trailing long paper streamers, they threw themselves, joyous and unrestrained into the congenial task of showing the nation's capital how New Year's Eve really should be celebrated.

At that particular instant two of their party had just concluded a spirited pantomime of a bullfight, enacted with the aid of sundry knives and forks borrowed from surrounding tables, and a piece of tapestry taken from the opposite wall. Nearby, three Central American diplomats cheered the spectacle with frenzied gusto.

But now the call rose for Dick Lowell, and seized by a dozen eager hands, a man was lifted bodily upon the table amid a thunder of applause from his little group. Tall and very straight and slim he was, his thick brown hair a little disheveled as he stood looking with a quiet smile at the shouting, up-turned faces. Beyond their own circle men and women, had paused to watch him with a kind of expectancy. It may have been the poise of head, a certain assurance, or something untamed and untameable in the man's eyes that invested him with the air of one who games with life for the sheer love of the game. It was an attitude that had brought him sudden peril in times past but also had evoked the adulation of more than one woman.

As he stood there smiling down, a companion handed him a toy pea pistol—one of the night club favors—and the shouts redoubled as he held the ridiculous weapon loosely in his hand, his blue eyes, still puckered in amusement, roaming the room for a suitable target. Then suddenly, although the hand had scarcely moved, his finger pressed the trigger, and at the farther end of the room a toy balloon exploded with a loud report. A chorus of cheers followed the shot, and the man bowed ironically, then, again raising his weapon, methodically dispatched three glass balls that served to ornament the Christmas tree.

Through it all the two men had been silently watching, and now with half reluctant admiration Steve exclaimed, "That bird can shoot, drunk or sober."

"Shoot!" Sari barked a short laugh of irritation. "You fool, he's the best shot on the Southwest border. And, incidentally, he's the man I wanted you to see."

With new interest Steve again sought the tall, straight figure on the table. A powerful form. Beneath the well-cut evening clothes so negligently worn, one sensed the easy play of long, powerful muscles. The lean, tanned face spoke of wind and sun, and the eyes, never quite at rest, were the eyes of on who had known the world's lonely places. But something about the men puzzled Steve. He seemed somehow apart from the friends who thronged so noisily about him, and as his eyes moved unhurriedly over the room, he might have been considering something quite remote from the gaiety and colour of this midnight gathering. It was as if a part of him were here, carefree and frolicking with his fellows, while another part—perhaps the only part that really mattered —maintained unceasingly an attitude of quiet detachment that even such surroundings as these could not relax.

So for a time Steve watched him. "That's your man, is it?"

Sari nodded.

"Who is he?"

"Dick Lowell."

A low whistle of surprise burst from the other's lips. "Solon Lowell's son?"

Another nod, then silence, while across Steve's face gathered a look of sullen uncertainty.

"Won't be no soft job to handle the son of Big Boss Lowell," he said at last. Then beneath Sari's cold, contemptuous scrutiny he shifted uneasily. "I'll do anything you want, Chief."

"Who is asking you to do anything, you idiot? I told you to look at the man and remember him."

Again that smile twisted Steve's face unpleasantly, and his voice held a covert threat. "I'll remember him, all right. My old bean remembers lots of things. Right now I'm remembering certain orders you sent out to Bull Pablo just before I came East." Then, still smiling, but with eyes drilled relentlessly across the table until Steve lowered his head.

"Let me in on it, Chief," Steve urged at last. "You know I'm here to help."

CHAPTER TWO

Slowly the tenseness of Sari's posture softened. "Men get hurt from having too good a memory," he murmured after a short pause, and his fingers moved restlessly over the table. "But about that fellow over there. For five months I've been trying to decide whether he is just an adventure-loving fool or——" Again he hesitated, "Or up to some game that may not fit in with my plans. I'd like to know, in the first place, why he left his ranch and came here to Washington. He hates the East, and in a few short months he's raised enough Hell to bring joy to every scandal sheet in the country."

"I've heard he always makes a specialty of raising Hell in one way or another."

Sari smiled thinly. "So his father thinks. A few years ago he was kicked out of college for leading a student riot. Then he nearly lost his citizenship by throwing in with the revolution over in Mexico. It took all of Solon Lowell's influence to patch that up. Later he disappeared for a year, while tales drifted back about him from Central America. Nobody knows just what happened there, but he joined up with the Liberal party in one of those joke republics, and in the next nine months they had put the dictator out of office. The two of them shot it out in the streets one afternoon, and after they buried the dictator Lowell become a kind of patron saint among that vermin. Meanwhile whether out on the desert or here, women have a way of throwing themselves at him, Heaven knows why."

Sari hesitated. "Six months ago, when Hell broke loose back in Verde over that land deal of mine, I came East, and a week later Lowell showed up. He's been here ever since."

"What's all that to you?"

"Plenty. I've got my own game to play, and I don't want any prying eyes at this end. The old man's not always easy to manage, and the ranchers in Verde are suspicious of every step. It will bolster up appearances if Solon Lowell's eldest son is out there to give our work the sanction of his father's name."

A sudden spasm of distrust passed over Sari's face. "I don't want him around. I don't feel—damn it, I can't tell what he's up to. At any time of the day or night he turns up at my desk with that silent walk and that look of his that may mean anything or nothing. I want him back in Verde where Bull and the boys can keep an eye on him.

"Right here's where you feature. Old Lowell is fed up with his son's little pranks, and all I need now is a nice quiet brawl where every paper will headline it. I want the old man to see it, too, and I want it to happen here—tonight. There'll be plenty chance for you to start a row before this party's over. Not too rough unless you have to, and when things are going lively, I'll break it up."

Steve grinned. "Wouldn't that toss the boys a laugh! Good old Nick Sari, big-hearted peacemaker — strengthen your hand with papa and put the skids under sonny boy. Not bad—not bad at all—but you oughtn't to be sitting with me. Looks framed."

"I'll take care of that." Sari rose and sauntering across the room, entered a telephone booth, then called a private number.

Meanwhile, Steve's gaze again sought the centre table, where to the great delight of that cosmopolitan gathering, an impromptu scene from William Tell was being enacted. For the moment laughter and the hum of conversation had ceased, and every eye had turned expectantly toward the little group that by this time dominated all attention. Busy at their tasks, even the tired faces of the waiters lighted with a momentary interest.

For across the room from where Lowell stood and directly beneath the great illuminated Christmas tree a member of the party had poised upon his head one of the glass ball decorations. Carefully Lowell leveled his toy weapon. A crack, a tinkle of shattered glass, and a burst of applause from the room. Another ball, and then a third—each demolished in the same fashion, and each followed by a crescendo of approving shouts. William Tell was going famously.

Amid the cheers and laughter that followed, Sari returned to his table, and suddenly Lowell's eyes caught sight of him. Had one looked closely, he might have seen that for a fleeting second the man's eyes hardened to points of steel.

But all unconscious of those following eyes, Sari sat comfortably back and lighted another cigarette. "I just phoned Solon Lowell that his son was making a public ass of himself." He leaned forward. "Now we're set. In a few minutes I'll take you over and join their party". His smile was as one well satisfied. "Considering your charming nature, that will be the easiest way."

But Fate was to provide them with still an easier way.

Lowell's eyes had already passed from Sari to his companion, idly fingering the empty demi-tasse before him. A smile touched Lowell's lips. Impulsively he raised the toy pistol, and instantly the thin, musical tinkle of china told the room that his markmanship had not failed. But this time the laughter and applause were quickly stilled. Steve half risen, was looking down at the overturned cup, while a slow flush mounted to his pockmarked face and the veins on his thick neck stood out like knotted cords. His chance! The grin had set in a snarl Thursting back the chair, he glowered angrily toward the table where Lowell stood watching him.

A deathly stillness fell across the room. The rattle of plates had stopped, all voices ceased, and only the soft music of a violin came from somewhere beyond the closed door, while, hushed with the expectancy of approaching conflict, the eyes of all were fixed steadily on the two men.

No mistaking the menace in Steve's attitude, as with head thrust forward and hands half clenched, he advanced across the floor. Lowell himself, a cigarette still between his lips, stepped down from the table and waited in an attitude of quiet watchfulness until now they were standing face to face in that strange tense silence of the crowded room. Steve's close-set eyes gleamed up into the other's, and a baffled look gathered as he found there was no sign of apprehension, no least vestige of fear. He slid his tongue slowly between thick lips and his voice had become a sneering growl.

"I'm wondering just how it would be to spend New Year's Day in the hospital."

Lowell smiled "Feeling sick?"

"Feeling fine, myself. But how long do you think it would take me to make you so sick that your boy friends might have to call the gong-wagon?"

His own words and the quiet attitude of the man before him stung Steve to sudden fury. His voice tightened. "I'll tell you. It would take just two minutes."

Deliberately Lowell drew a watch from his pocket and laid it on the table. "Two minutes scarcely seems long enough for a very thorough job," he answered thoughtfully. "Still—when do we begin?"

It was a coldly flung challenge that could not be denied. For an instant a red film gathered before Steve's eyes, then almost instinctively he struck, lashing out with a powerful left arm that carried behind it the full force of his shoulder and the weight of his short, stocky body. It was a blow that, had it landed, might easily have made good his angry boast.

But it didn't quite land. Never afterward could Steve explain what happened. He only know that Lowell seemed to glide a few imperceptible inches to the left, and as the force of that lunge swept Steve past him, Lowell leaned forward, and grasping the man's coat with both hands, jerked it up and over his head. For a frenzied instant Steve found himself blinded and powerless in the bear-like hug of his opponent. With a muffled curse he leaped back, and as the coat tore open with the force of that convulsive effort, Lowell ripped the tablecloth from his table, and throwing it over Steve's head, wound it like an enveloping, restraining shroud about the raging man's body. In another instant Lowell had raised his helpless victim, still struggling, carried him the length of the room and hurled him bodily through the half open door.

Absolute silence followed. No one moved throughout the room, but as Lowell stood there, flushed and disheveled from his effort, the door swung back and a tall man with grizzled hair stepped inside. His eyes were ominously quiet, and his strong, almost cruel jaw tightened as he took in the scene before him. Only once did he glance at the man sitting almost directly at his feet, tearing to shreds the restraining cloth still bound about him ,then again those steel grey eyes burned directly into Lowell's. And even beneath the shaded lights, despite the disparity of years, one was struck with the strong resemblance between these two, while at a nearby table a western senator leaned forward and whispered excitedly to his companion, "Now there'll be fireworks' It's old Boss Lowell himself!"

CHAPTER THREE

So for a long moment father and son stood at gaze, without a word, without a movement, in a kind of silent duel of two strong men's wills. Yet in the son's eyes there was no defiance—only quiet understanding, perhaps even a little of compassion for this man, stern, silent and aging, whom all official Washington knew as the maker and breaker of political destinies.

A light footfall sounded, and Sari stepped quickly to the older man's side. Then only did Dick Lowell's lips tighten, and beneath the narrowed lids his brown eyes glowed like burning coals. Solon Lowell was first to break the silence.

With his cane he pointed to the prostrate man. "Are you responsible for this, Dick?"

Half nodding, Dick Lowell answered, "I'm responsible for his present position. He seemed bent on making an emergency case out of me."

Again silence, while those piercing grey eyes searched the younger man's face, but found there only that quiet half careless smile.

"If you've done enough damage to satisfy you for one night," the cold. insistent voice resumed, "meet me at the car". Then indicating with a nod that Sari was to follow, Solon Lowell turned on his heel.

Outside the clouds had broken and a few stars gleamed coldly down upon a long, dark car parked before the night club. Within it Sari was giving Solon Lowell a rapid resume of the encounter. Once Lowell nodded grimly. "Darned comforting New Year's reading," he murmured bitterly, then beckoned Sari to silence as his son came swinging across the pavement and took a seat beside him.

Swiftly the car bore south, along Sixteenth Street, and skirting Lafayette Square, snow covered and deserted, drew up before a low brick building. A night watchman saluted.

With a curt nod the older man passed inside, but Dick stopped to shake hands.

"Happy New Year, Sam." And his smile had never seemed more carefree nor his voice more friendly as he turned to follow his father and Sari back into the carefully secluded office where for twenty years men of all political creeds and stations had come to humbly lay their plans before Big Boss Lowell. The very ghosts of troubled destinies seemed to hove here. For within this dim office at the end of the long corridor senators and cabinet members had held hurried council in times past, and once even a harried vice-president had saved his renomination here—at a price. Here for twenty years Boss Lowell's grip over men and affairs had steadily tightened, but now, as his brooding eyes raised, there came to him almost like a physical pain the bitter knowledge that before him stood one he could neither dominate nor bend to his will. Flesh of his flesh, yet always beyond his reach. He shook his head.

Silently two men removed their coats and remained standing until the older Lowell took his accustomed seat behind the desk.

Dick meanwhile busied himself with a cigarette, and as he snuffed the match between his fingers, glanced with a twinkle of amusement at Sari.

"Why didn't you come over and help your tough friend old dear?" He laughed outright at a sudden recollection. "Dad, you should have been there when our dance of the seven tablecloths was at its height." Again he turned to Sari. "But where did the fellow ever learn to swear? I thought our boys out on the ranch made a life study of plain and fancy profanity, but this chap——" Dick sighed. "It was pure genius."

Impatiently Solon Lowell's open hand struck the desk, causing the long, empty corridors to re-echo, while angrily the steel grey eyes burned up his son. Then very slowly he said, "Dick, you and I are through."

Deliberately the words fell away to silence. Outside a clock struck one. The din of New Year's Eve had ceased and the world at last was given over to repose, but in that room itself brooded the hush of coming conflict. Discreetly leaving father and son to themselves, Sari entered an inner office and closed the glass door between.

Again the older man raised his voice. "For six months I have tolerated your presence here in Washington. They have been months of systematically making a fool of yourself, furnishing copy for every scandal-mongering publication and every gossiper in political circles. Life for you has been a mad search for thrills, an adventurous spree. Well, that's finished. Your place is on the ranch."

Solon Lowell opened and closed his hand. "I had hoped for a son I might be proud of, one who would help me build up the work I began in Arizona forty years ago. I even hoped your love for Nora might steady you."

At the mention of that name the elder man's features softened and his eyes fell to the desk where, from a small oval frame, the face of a girl smiled up at him.

Drearily Solon Lowell shook his head. "Even the loveliest girl in the Southwest couldn't keep you on the ranch." Again his eyes sought the picture. "For twenty years I've watched her—watched her breaking the wildest colts on her brother's ranch, watched her out on the roundup and later nursing those poor fever-stricken devils down in the Mexican Quarter." He shrugged his spare shoulders. "The only thing I could never understand was her loyalty to you. Well, even Nora hasn't been able to make you take life seriously."

Dick smiled. "I never take life at all, Dad—unless it's necessary." His eyes passed to the glass door, through which he could see his father's satellite bent over a desk, and he added, "Our good friend Sari would hardly subscribe to that humane doctrine, would he?"

"Why bring Sari in?"

"When you speak of taking life I naturally think of your pet killer."

Quick anger darkened the face of the older Lowell. "I admire strong men." The tone held its unmistakable implication.

"So do I. But does the fact that he's the most hated man in the Southwest prove his strength?"

"Men hate Sari because they fear him."

"And they fear him because he's a killer. Brother and I know that. Why Dad, everyone knows it but you. You made Nick Sari. You stubbornly stood between him and justice when he killed George Warner. You backed him blindly in his dirty land grab." Dick shrugged. "Well, after all, that's your affair, but why wonder that the Verde ranchers remember you as a hard, unyielding man."

As if considering his son's words, Solon Lowell sat motionless, his square shoulders hunched forward, then slowly and with visible effort they straightened. "If Bruce and you had gone the way I laid out for you," he answered bitterly, "there would have been no need to raise Nick Sari from a desert waif to become a power in the border country. But that time is past—Sari is my creation, and I am content." Again his eyes dropped in an attitude of thought and his voice was a little gentler. "Yes, the world calls me a hard man, Dick. Perhaps I am. I've cared more about getting things done than what the world thinks about me. Some day you may learn that when you choose your own way you can't be too squeamish about the human obstacles you find in your path. I have made many men, just as I have made Sari, and I have broken men, just as I will break you and your brother if you continue to oppose me."

"How has Bruce opposed you?"

"Sari tells me he is hindering the new irrigation work. That I will not tolerate".

For a moment Dick's eyes lighted dangerously, then he asked quietly, "What do you want me to do in the West?"

"I want you first to set Bruce straight—you always had more influence with him than I. Next I want you to help handle the ranchers. They've already given us trouble—a testy, truculent lot."

Dick laughed outright. "Aren't they! Why they even object to being robbed by dear old Sari."

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holidays excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

A CONQUERING PRINCIPLE

Belleville district is now known all over Wales, because of the Belleville Trade Trade Group movement. It will soon be known all over Britain.

So potent has been the appeal that a Welsh M.P. will bring up in the British Commons the question of exchange trade with Belleville Trade Group as soon as he is armed with complete data which the members of the executive of that body are forwarding him.

For a group of business men to have attracted the business world and world of affairs and to win the unstinted praise of leaders of the Empire, is an achievement which is beyond the fondest hopes of the most enthusiastic worker in the group.

This body has won the endorsation of the Development Council of Wales and from that point will be brought to the attention of the the British legislators in the Imperial House of Commons.

In a world anxious to discover ways out of the present economic situation, the Belleville Trade Group movement to build up an exchange of trade between Wales in particular and the Old Country in general with this portion of the Province of Ontario has found a practical method to set the world aright, its members believe.

Trade, trade, trade—that the world believes is the cure for the depression and yet the world seems loath to take that step.

Belleville Trade Group caught the glimpse of an expansion of trade. If every part of the country, every industry in every land did likewise, the depression would no doubt begin to melt away like last winter's snow.

The very proof of the value of the trade group policy must be realized by those who have noticed the readiness with which the Welsh traders and business organizations have taken up the plan.

One of the most potent facts of course is that last year Captain W. E. Schuster was in Wales on a visit. The personal contact then as always has figured large in all history, in trade as in politics.

END MIGHT HAVE BEEN DIFFERENT

The other day an incident was noted which is but one of many which might be cited to show the risks that children run on the highways and city streets. By good fortune this incident did not have a painful consequence except for a bump as the boy landed on the roadway.

At the corner of James and Bridge West, a truck or transport was throbbing as the driver waited for a chance to make the turn eastward onto Bridge Street. Holding on to a rod on the back of the transport the boy was swung as the vehicle started. Driven westward was a car and eastbound was a car coming down the hill. The boy could not maintain his grip and was flung out on the pavement at least one third of the way across the roadway. The drivers of the cars saw him and as they were not moving rapidly it was easy enough to avoid the child. He jumped to his feet.

Had the cars not been so much under control and had the boy been hurled farther out into the road, probably a different story would have to be told. Almost all the elements of a serious accident were present.

Holding on to trucks is too dangerous for boys. Drivers of the vehicles cannot see them. If they could they would put the boys off.

Parents and teachers have a duty to impress upon the children that they should under no circumstances try to get a ride by seizing the rear of a motor vehicle. Such an attempt might lead to temporary or permanent injury or even death.

SPRING EVIDENCES

With the return of the desirable robins and the quiet annual breakup of the Moira River, city-dwellers know that the end of winter is about assured and are getting ready to welcome the skipping springtime.

Heralds of that day, however, have not been the birds but the coming events which cast their shadows before—the skipping ropes at work on every street, and the games of marbles. Between merchants and the juveniles these preliminaries to springtime are always in evidence.

The orderly breakup of the river was satisfactory to those Bellevillians who have houses or stores along the banks of the stream. There are memories of disastrous floods, the very thought of which conjures up scenes of loss. Fortunately there was nothing of that this year.

HITLER'S SENSATION

The Hitler conscription announced on Saturday has stirred world talk again. Since the fatal early summer of 1914 the people of every nation have had startling news brought to their attention. That over the week-end was not the least of such.

Keyed up for almost a quarter of a century the nerves of the world are on edge. For years the delicate situation of the aftermath of the Great War has been felt while efforts towards international agreements were pressed in the hope of disarmament. But the sense of insecurity remains, as the British White Paper, now Hitler's conscription measure and the general undertone of Europe clearly indicate.

The British press even in the presence of the latest revelations does not lose hope that efforts towards agreements and disarmament should be continued.

THE PRINCE IN HUNGARY

The Prince of Wales, visiting Austria incognito, was reported recently as suffering some annoyance from curious crowds in Vienna, to the extent that he was unable to continue shopping, and the goverment had to issue a warning to the public. Hungary, which he visited later, was equally excited, it seems, but according to a Budapest newspaper received in this office, the people restrained themselves nobly. The newspaper, Pesti Hirlap, has a small supplement devoted to street pictures of the Prince and party, somewhat discounting an announcement that the police of the Hungarian capital "decided to restrict to the utmost the taking of photographs during the Prince's stay." It is explained, however, that the Hungarian authorities "made full arrangements to protect the enthusiastically expected guest's stay in every possible manner from the troublesome curiosity and inconvenient tokens of overmuch affection which are so difficult to fend off from the person of the Prince in every part of the world."

The Prince who arrived on February 20, registered at the Danube Palace Hotel as the Earl of Chester. The hotel has a so-called royal suite which recently was occupied by the King of Siam and 12 rooms of this suite were opened for the Prince and his followers. The whole second floor was closed to outsiders. The newspaper records that "since the Prince and his following had already dined on the train, only sandwiches and beer were served to them in their rooms."

Several pages are thus devoted to the movements of the distinguished visitor, who could scarcely have received more attention had there been a state reception. One article purports to explain why H.R.H. is such an attraction to Hungarians.

"The pleasant and light informality which characterizes the Prince makes a great appeal to Hungarian taste. Besides, we found that the Prince of Wales, however much he may try to merge with his surroundings and disappear in the crowd, is not for a moment able to free himself from the distinction of historical weight which belongs to the first of the youth of the most powerful country of the world. Even on his tourist visits the power and glory of the British nation surrounds him and this is what the Budapest public also recognized....We know that in the struggle for existence among the races it wask the British who could best harmonize their own interests with the requirements of Christianity and humanity......The British have an incomparable ability for human sympathy with geographically and racially remote nations. In their soul all humanity's sense of justice finds expression. It is our conviction that this is the quality which is the real moral basis of the British Empire."—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

DR. DOUGHTY RETIRES

Dr. Arthur G. Doughty, Federal Archivist for more than thirty years past, is to retire at the end of this month. Dr. Doughty's name is known to every historian and worker in history on this continent for he has made the Public Archives not only a great treasure house of this country's records, but he has also shown how to make these accumulated records of the greatest possible use.

In the Archives of Ottawa there is to be found today the story of this country's development in manuscripts, books, pictures, maps, prints and historical objects. Available for the use of investigators are copies or originals of the correspondence of French kings with their representatives in Canada, of English governments wth their representatives at a later date, papers of such personages as Sir John Macdonald, official records of the constitutional developments, together with papers dealing with thousands of topics relating to Canada.

Students and writers accustomed to the red tape that surrounds the use of such material in England and European countries are surprised when they seek to use the Canadian Archives. The building is open twenty-four hours a day for workers. A man may work as late in the night as he pleases. The whole year through there are people working in the Archives, many, of late years, from the United States.

Dr. Doughty has shown just what a civil servant may be in public usefulness. His place will not be an easy one to fill.—London Free Press.

More than half the difficulties of the world would be allayed or removed by the exhibition of good temper.—Arthur Helps.

Good temper, like a Sunny day, shed a brightness over everything; it is the sweetener of toil and the soother of disquietude.—Washington Irving.

A FABLE

There is a fable of a hound so swift
No prey can distance its pursuing feet,
And of a fox with lightning speed for gift
And how the two one morning chanced to meet,
The hunter whose poor quarry was foredoomed,
The hunted, destined never to be caught;
And how they ran while day by bright day bloomed,
How night on night they fled, as swift as thought.

Perhaps the hound is each man's ardent hope;
The fox, perhaps, perfection he would gain;
Forever racing up time's viewless slope
By day, by night, through rapture and through pain.
Look in your life! The lean-flanked hound goes by Behind the fox, like lightning in the sky!
—Aline Michaelis.

AN IMPORTANT INTERNATIONAL FOOTBALL GAME between Wales and Scotland, won by Wales by a fluke-dropped goal, was reported in the London Times in less than a column, a very readable report. The teams were tied with two tries each with Scotland pressing and apparently bound to win, when one of the Welsh players in a tough spot with the ball kicked the pigskin out of danger and made a goal, much to his own surprise and that of the two teams and spectators. Old Country sporting scribes have not learned the art of spreading a game all over the page with many feet of wordage—or perhaps they have unlearned it.

John Porarito was accused at New Orleans of escaping from gaol, but he complained that he had been "kicked out." A warder was turning out tramps who had had a night's free lodging, when he came to Porarito asleep in his cell.

"Come on," said the warder, prodding him, "beat it."

"But—I—" John protested. "Don't but me," said the warder, and kicked him out into the street.

Later he discovered that the man was a Federal prisoner charged with unloading alcohol from a ship.

THOUGHTS MAY CREATE STATE UNHAPPINESS

Help Your Mind to Fight Off Unpleasant Thoughts

By Louis E. Bisch, M. D., Ph. D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

Copyright 1935
King Features Syndicate, Inc.

We all tend to flee from reality—that is, we try to run away from any unpleasant actuality. But running away from one's unpleasant thoughts and experiences has never yet wiped them out nor has it deprived them of a possibly harmful effect. When we successfully try to forget, we only succed in pushing the unpleasantness into another part of the mind — into that deeper part known as the "sub-conscious.

Fooling ourselves with the idea that things are not what our common sense dictates may give temporary relief, but what is thus forced aside and repressed continually tries to reassert itself.

Repressions always attempt to force themselves back into conscious recognition. Often, too, when such outlawed ideas finally do succeed, the individual becomes subject to nervousness or even more serious detriments.

Therefore, do not flee from reality! Face facts squarely! Be honest with yourself Don't run away! Fight back! Remember that every time you run away you increase the tendency on your part to run away again. Thus you make weakness a habit ..

The world is full of such people-people who go on repeating the same mistakes over and over because they run away from the facts that cause the errors.

Few people, unless they have studied psychology, realize that thoughts — especially those suppressed — have the power to create in the body symptoms that may correspond in number and variety to every known organic disease.

Even blindness and paralysis may be caused by thoughts — thoughts that were originally suppressed, and which, because they were suppressed, were out of tune with the rest of the mind.

Thoughts can play frightful havoc. Thoughts can undermine happiness, thwart ambition and ruin an otherwise prosperous and hopeful career!

In the same way, thoughts can cloud your imaginative ability, curtain your self-reliance, make devitalizing inroads upon your energy.

We all know that regular hours, good food suitable exercise, especially in the open air, and a sanely planned life help to keep body and mind physically fit to carry the strain of every-day work. But too few perceive that the mind, the controlling mechanism of everything, is in the last analysis, the absolute dictator of the individual's destiny.

Therefore, watch your mind! Don't let it make you run away!

Dr. Bisch's Daily Diet Hint

It is a mistake to eat a large quantity of pickles or other condiments in order to promote appetite. Small amounts, however, stimulate the flow of gastric juice, and, therefore, are valuable. The food value of condiments is, as a rule, low. Cucumber pickles, for instance, consist of 92.9 per cent water.

CO-DISCOVERER OF INSULIN IS DEAD

Prof. J. J. Rickard MacLeod Passes at Aberdeen

Aberdeen, Scotland, March 18 — (AP)—Prof. John James Rickard MacLeod, co-discoverer of insulin who spent a number of years teaching at the University of Toronto and the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, O., died Saturday. He was 58 years old.

Aberdeen Graduate

Born the son of the manse in the little town of Cluny, Scotland. Professor MacLeod was educated at Aberdeen Grammar School, and Mariscal College, Aberdeen. After a short period of post-graduate study on the Continent and in London, like many another Scot, he migrated to the United States. At the early age of 27 years he was appointed Professor of Physiology at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.

Here he established for himself a reputation of a teacher of physiology, and an investigator in the field of carbohydrate metabolism, which attracted the attention of the authorities in Toronto. In 1918, Professor MacLeod was appointed to the chair of Physiology at the University of Toronto, where he remained till 1927. He took a keen and deep interest in medical education and was instrumental in the establishment of the six-year course in medicine at the University here.

Soon, his laboratory attracted a group of young workers in physiology. Amongst these was Professor Best, his successor. It was due to Prof. MacLeod's established reputation as an authority in carbohydrate metabolism that Dr. Banting, now Sir Frederick, came to Toronto to consult him, and to pursue his investigations on the pancreas, with the assistance of Dr. Best. These investigations led to the brilliant and important discovery of insulin by Drs. Banting and Best.

Within a short period, the product was purified with the co-operation of Dr. Collip, and made available for the treatment of patients suffering from diabetes mellitus.

In recognition of this very important discovery, Sir Frederick Banting and Professor MacLeod were awarded jointly the Nobel Prize, the former sharing the award with Dr. Best, the latter with Dr. Collip.

In 1927, Professor MacLeod returned to his Alma Mater as Regis Professor of Physiology, an honor which he himself valued greatly.

9 U. S. SENATORS ARE MENTIONED

Said to Have Had Past Affiliations With Communist Party

Washington, March 16—(AP) — An assertion by William B. Shearer, big navy advocate, nine Senators were "recorded in the Department of Justice records with past affiliations with the Communist party" was read today into the record of the United States Senate Munitions Committee.

His reference to Senators on the Communist list was in a letter written by Shearer to Homer L. Ferguson, President of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, March 27, 1929, in an effort to justify his claims for further compensation.

He recited his activities in favor of further naval appropriation for cruisers.

"Twelve Senators only opposed the cruiser bill," he wrote, "of which nine are recorded in the Department of Justice records with past affiliations with the Communist party."

Shearer referred to a publication entitled "Redsin America", published in 1924 under editorial direction of R. M. Whitney, director of the Washington Bureau of the National Defence Society.

This list contained 14 Senators.

Named were Senators Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, Lynn Frazier of North Dakota, Henry Ashurst of Arizona, the late Senator Kendrick of Wyoming, the late Senator Howell of Nebraska, the late Senator Ralston of Indiana, former Senator C. C. Dill of Washington, Burton Wheeler of Montana, the late Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, former Senator Brookhart of Iowa, George Norris of Nebraska, Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, former Senator Johnson of Minnesota, and former Senator Claude Swanson of Virginia, now Secretary of the Navy.

OPEN PLAY-OFF FOR HILL TROPHY

Zion's Hill Defeats West Huntingdon 4-3

Stirling—Zion's Hill took the first game of a two game series with goals to count, against the flashy West Huntingdon team, on Thursday March 14th., by a score of 4-3. The winners of the series take possession of the Hill Cup. The game was fast and thrilling, with the teams very evenly matched. In spite of the fact that W. Huntingdon have been idle for nearly three weeks, they showed no signs of staleness. Zions, on the other hand, have just emerged from a real series with Glen Ross, but they appeared as fresh as daisies.

From the face off West Huntingdon had a distinct margin on the play, with Wright going throught to take the first shot at Seeley. In the first few minutes of the game Seeley staved off a severe attack of fine combined rushes by Wright, Kerby and Mott. West Huntingdon secured at least seven shots before Sarles was called upon to stop one. Townsend made a fine rush, but was checked by Mott, who went through the Zion's defence to bury one deep into Seeley's pads. At this point, referee Burt of Trenton displayed his authority by not only making them play hockey, but he made them forget the rough stuff by handing out five penalties in quick succession. G. McGowan took the first trip, followed closely by Hay, Kirby, Sills and Judd McGowan. By that time the boys realized that hockey was the game, and that Burt was able to catch everything. From then on the game was remarkably clean. Townsend, the flashy wing man of Zions proved himself a real hockey player, capable of playing good clean hockey. He remained on the ice throughout the entire game. His speed was necessary to hold Mott in check, and this made him the most valuable man on his team. Playing a bang-up game, he was responsible for two of the counters. The period ended with the honors about even on the play which raced from end to end with remarkable speed. The ice was fast, and the players retired from a scoreless, period, fagged out by the sizzling speed.

Penalties—McGowan, Hay Kerby, Sills and Judd McGowan.

With the start of the second period, Zions took complete control, when in less than ten minutes they ran in four fast goals. Parks got the first one from a scramble in front of the net, in a minute and a half of play. Before West Huntingdon could get organized, Townsend flipped another past Sarles from the corner, and to prove that it wasn't just a bit of luck, he repeated on a lone rush, making the score 3-0, for Zions. Caverly then came across for Zions with their final tally for the game, making Zions look like a safe bet. But West Huntingdon asserted themselves and for the balance of the period they had the best of the play, being finally rewarded when Wright scored on a pass from Mott. With his team putting forth a great effort, Mott tallied again just before the bell went to end the period 4-2 for Zions.

Penalties—Chapelle and McGowan.

From the face off Mott sailed through, but Seeley turned it away. W. Huntingdon pressed hard, and at last Kerby scored to leave his team only one goal down. From then on to the end of the game, speed was on the increase, with great rushes from end to end, and both goalies working hard. Townsend got through several times but failed to beat Sarles. In the last ten minutes West Huntingdon had a slight edge in their desperate attempt to pull down that one goal lead. The bell went to end the game, with Mott, Kirby and Wright banging the rubber at Seeley, who was called upon to make many sensational stops. Zions have a great team, and go into the final game on Saturday night with a one goal lead. Townsend, who was responsible for two of the four counters displayed the brand of hockey he is capable of playing, and turned in his best performance of the year.

The Line-up.

Zion's Hill — Goal, Seeley. Defence, Sills and Hay. Wings, Townsend and Parks. Centre, Caverly. Alternates — Fargey, Brough and Chapelle.

West Huntingdon — Goal, Sarles. Defence, Judd McGowan and C. McGowan. Wings, Wright and Kerby. Centre, Mott. Alternates — Thompson, Cook and Bray.

Referee — Ross Burt, Trenton.

How a Pale, Run-down Girl Became Positively PRETTY

In a Canadian city a certain girl consulted an authority who examined her, weighed her and tested a sample of her blood. The test showed the haemoglobin in her blood to be only 68% instead of the normal 90% to 95% for a woman. Her weight was 91½ pounds. With her blood testing only 68% haemoglobin, it was only natural for this young woman to be pale and colorless, and lacking in pep and energy, because haemoglobin is not only the coloring material in the blood, it is also the precious element that carries the vitalizing, energizing oxygen from the lungs to every organ and tissue of the body.

What Her Advisor Told Her To Do

The authority instructed the girl to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (called pink because they have a pink sugar coating) three times a day for a month and return for another blood test. He knew the formula for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and recognized their value and safety.

One month later this patient's blood had been so greatly enriched that the haemoglobin had increased 20%. Her weight had increased to 100½ pounds —a nine-pound gain. In the words of her advisor, "She had a lot more color, her face had rounded out and she was positively pretty". Her complexion had the glow caused by rich, red, healthy blood. She was revitalized and strengthened with new stores of vigor and energy, and appeared just as fresh and attractive as the girl whose photo is shown above.

Try This Beauty and Health Treatment Yourself

If your face is thin and haggard, your complexion pale, sallow and old-looking, your body underweight, your digestion poor, your nerves bad, your blood thin, your energy below par, take the tried and proven blood builder, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. It's a genuine complexion beautifier and a builder of health and vigor. Your druggist has it—50c a package. 36H

Our King and Queen on their Silver Jubilee

Prince George and Princess May on their wedding day.

THE recent wedding in London of the Duke of Kent (youngest son of the King and Queen) to Princess Marina of Greece was a quiet affair compared to the lavish wedding on July 6, 1893, of Prince George, heir to the throne and Princess May of Teck.

All the crowned heads of Europe, including the aged Queen Victoria, attended and in those days royalty flourished in Europe. The marriage took place in Chapel Royal, St. James.

It was a gorgeous scene; color and pomp and ceremony thrilled countless thousands who came from all part of the world.

Our picture to-day shows the bride and groom in their wedding dress. Note the change in the young prince — he was 28 when married — from the last picture shown of him as a naval lieutenant of 22. In those six years, much happentd to completely reshape the world for him; chief among them was the thrusting upon him of an eventual kingship and the loss of a beloved brother.

Princess May made a beautiful bride; tall, stately, assured she made an admirable and dignified consort for the heir to the throne. She also made a successful housewife and personally attended to the affairs of her house, taking pride in managing it economically and efficiently.

Soon added to her cares was that of motherhood. On June 23, 1894, Prince Edward was born. (He is to-day the Prince of Wales) from the first, she showed herself as capable of motherhood, in all that the word implies, as she was of managing a household or being the leader of Britain's social world.

STIRLING MASONS HEAR ADDRESS ON "IRELAND"

Dr. James Semple, Belleville, Guest Speaker at Banquet

Stirling, March 18 (Special) — An overwhelming crowd of visitors and friends gathered in the Masonic banquet hall on Friday evening, March 15th, when Rev. Dr. Semple was guest speaker, and Holloway Street United Church orchestra, under the direction of Mr. G. Hobbs rendered special music. The visitors congregated in the lodge room where a feeling of social hospitality was displayed by the hosts, especially to the ladies, as this was ladies night. Later, the guests were conducted by members of the committee to the large, beautifully decorated banquet room, arrayed in the colors of St. Patrick. The tables arranged in a biased formation presented a fine appearance in their gaily decorative color scheme. The stage at one end of the room was occupied by a twelve piece orchestra that throughout the evening delighted the gathering with selections such as "Hearts and Flowers," "Humoresque," "Echoes of Erin," and many other fine numbers. There was no confusion in spite of the large gathering, and as they took their places at the tables, W. M. Haggerty called them to order and after a brief address of welcome, he gave the meeting over to Dr. E. A. Carleton who acted as chairman After a short address he called on the orchestra for their first selection, "Gilt Edge Overture.' This was followed by a trio, "Ida and Dottie," by F. H. Losey, with Miss Ridley at the piano, Albert Branscombe (cornet) and Reg. Wardle (trombone). Community singing, led by Bob Patterson was heartily enjoyed by all. Mr. Wardle then offered a trombone solo, "Old Black Joe," with Miss Ridley at the piano. Mr. Owen Herity of Belleville was then called on to introduce the guest speaker. First emphasizing the fact that Dr. Semple was a product of the Emerald Isle. He then spoke of his academic training received at the University of Belfast, and at McGill University in Montreal, where he took a post graduate course before entering the ministry. After serving in various parts of the country he was called to Belleville.

Dr. Semple began his address on St. Patrick, with the telling of a few numerous Irish tales which sparkled with fun and merriment, and in the short time at his disposal he gave one of the most educational talks on the subject ever heard in this part of the country. Speaking of the pride with which the Irish survey the shamrock, he said that this pride was justified as one surveys the fields in parts of Ireland which were green with shamrocks the year round and no where in the world is this to be found in such profusion. The enthusiasm of the Irish which centered around St. Patrick's Day was healthy, and it was too bad that it was not contagious. Enthusiasm turns the wheels to success in any enterprise, church, politics or business.

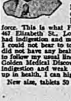
When one travels to Europe it is necessary, to detour in order to view the many beauties of Ireland, and therefore few people include it in their tours, but it is really worth the extra mileage to see. When one speakes of Ireland, there is immediately coupled with it the famous name of St. Patrick, but there are other names too, for this patch of green has contributed man power into every phase of life. Into the military sphere come the names of such men as Wellington, Roberts and Kitchener. And naval men such as David Beatty. To the world of music omes John MacCormick. In literature, Sir Richard Steele and John Smith. Poets such as Moore and Drummond were also products of Ireland. Politicians like D'Arcy Mcgee, Dr. David Tracy and Sheridan, all outstanding figures in world history. They all come from the isle that holds high the name of St. Patrick. Speaking directly about St. Patrick, Dr. Semple unfolded before his audience a vivid picture of his historic background, the good he had done, and the doctrines to which he adhered. He was truly the apostle of the poor. History reveals in a sense however, that he was born in Scotland and taken to Ireland as a slave, returning home after six years in slavery. The call of the Irish was too much for him and he returned to Ireland where he remained until the time of his death in 473. St. Patrick like all great men of the present day accomplished thnigs in the face of opposition. All good is forever opposed.

The entire gathering was greatly benefited by this fine address which doubtless required a great deal of study to prepare. Rising to congratulate and thank the Doctor for his splendid address, Rev. A. S. MacConnell regretted the necessity of his early departure because of another engagement, but thanked one and all for the privilege of being present to hear at least the main portion of the fine program.

Mr. R. G. Lawlor then spoke briefly of the manner in which the address had been received. Those present were aware of the treat which had been theirs. An instrumental duet with Miss Ridley at the piano was greatly enjoyed at this time. It was that ever popular "Moonlight and Roses," with Albert Branscombe playing the cornet and Reg Wardel the trombone. The orchestra then rendered several musical gems as the gathering partook of a dainty lunch. The original menu was made up of combination and chicken salads with individual moulds of ice cream symbolic of St. Patrick tokens served with water ice wafers and lady fingers. After the lunch, Mr. Tom Solmes proposed a toast to the ladies, which was responded to in a fine manner by Mrs. J. Wilson. Mr. Herity completed the program with a fine address, sprinkled with humor and sound philosophy. Mr. James Haggerty of Belleville also made a few appropriate remarks at this time.

The committee in charge, headed by C. N. Baker and Dr. Carleton, have the gratitude of all those present for the fine type of talent secured for the program, and the excellent manner in which it was carried through. The event was truly a credit to the community.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?



YOU lose vital nerve force if you allow your stomach to distress you. Acid stomach, indigestion, gas or biliousness and "costiveness" cause the blood to be poisoned and will eventually destroy health and nerve force. This is what Francis Henry Cook of 467 Elizabeth St., London, Ont., said: "I had indigestion and my stomach was so sore I could not bear to touch it. I got where I did not have any health at all, was not able to follow my usual line of work. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery relieved me of the indigestion and weak stomach and built me up in health. I can highly recommend it."

DESIRED BURIAL WITHOUT CLERGY

Undertaker of 50 Years' Experience Declined 'Gabbled' Services

London, March 16—(CP)—Alfred Edward Leggatt, an undertaker of Fulham who had had 50 years experience of conducting funerals, left instructions in his will that no religious service whatever was to be held at his funeral. He made this stiuplation because he believed "the clergy always hastily gabbled these services."

The Rev. H. H. Lowe, Rural Dean of Kensington, regretfully finds himself in agreement with Mr. Leggatt's statement.

"Unfortunately, this is often the case with chaplains whose duties hardly ever vary," Prebendary Lowe says. "It is only natural that they do gabble hastily. Only recently we considered appointing chaplain in Kensington, but then decided not to, because we believed that the burial services would be conducted with very little reverence and sympathy. A chaplain takes too many services. It is too much to expect him to conduct so many and yet remain in sympathy."

FLOOD WATERS SURGE TO CREST

Some Levees Can Stand No More Buffeting, Engineers Say

Chicago, March 16—(CP)— Flood waters of Mississippi tributaries apparently were surging to a crest today as thousands of refugees fled rising water in Missouri, southern Illinois and Arkansas. Battered levees were eyed anxiously in the stricken areas. In southeastern Missouri and Arkansas the Red Cross estimated 13,000 would be counted homeless. Three negroes were drowned when their rowboat capsized near Sikeston, Mo.

Engineers warned levees could withstand no further buffeting near Kennett, O., and an area, inhabited by 9,000 persons, was gravely threatened. Poplar bluff was a sanctuary for 3,000 refuges as the St. Francis and Black Rivers swept livestock and property in their murky tide.

A levee crumbled at Moark, Ark., forcing 650 to evacuate the area, and officials warned the New Port levee would probably go out.

PRAYER MEETING WELL ATTENDED

A real old-fashioned prayer meeting was held this week at Mrs. Alice Kellar's, Mizpah Cottage, on Boswell Street, where about thirty people of different denominations met for prayer.

GARDEN PLOTS MAY AGAIN BE OPERATED

Unemployed garden plots which gave those on relief in this city a chance last year to exercise their muscles and knowledge of gardening, as well as an opportunity to stock up their cellars with welcome produce for the winter months will again come to the attention of city council within the next few weeks, it was intimated at the city hall today. No registration has yet been started in connection with the plots, it was stated by city engineer Chas. Mott. This will not be undertaken until orders are given by council.

Building Up Defenses in Youth

Teach Responsibility at an Early Age, Expert Advocates

By LISA GRENELLE

It is very charming to find something of the small boy in every grown man. But there must not be too much of it. A small boy is not equipped for the responsibility of citizenship. Likewise it is very appealing to discover the little girl still alive in the grown woman. But the child must not dominate; for a little girl is in no way fit to be trusted with the important office of motherhood.

Unfortunately, there are many grown people who never have matured, mentally or emotionally. They remain dependent through the years, irresponsible, dominated by childish emotions, jealousy, prejudice, personal feuds, intolerance and indecision. Brilliant and able though they may be, they never can adjust themselves to a normal, happy adult life because they are still children at heart. The child in them remains dominant.

Past Responsible

Why at seventy, say, are these grown men and women still children? Is it an unfortunate inheritance? Were they, perhaps, spoiled, over-indulged, when they were small? Not to inheritance, but to their past, their present state of immaturity is due. The past is always responsible for the present. "Till death do us part," the past, present and future are bound in indissoluble wedlock for better or for worse, independent whether or not the union is congenial or helpful.

To insure your child's future you must look to his present. You cannot save him trouble or insure him riches, but through early, conscientious and consistent training you can insure him some measure of success. You can build in him valuable defenses; you can form in him constructive habits, both of mind, body and heart. You can erect day by day a progressive development that will arrive at a timely maturity, the best possible weapon for any adult life.

Not Automatic

Maturity doesn't just happen. When Janie and Jimmie arrive at the ages of eighteen and twenty-one, respectively, they do not automatically become adults, any more than a child is really one year older on his birthday.

Maturity is a natural complexion of a normal development, a balancing of the scales, an establishment of values, a discovery of direction, a concentration of defenses. A child, although still a long way to go, has gotten himself sufficiently under control, sufficiently directed to stand on his own feet, to make his own decisions. He has beocme, whether talented much or little, a responsible adult.

But no child becomes responsible automatically. He becomes responsible only if he has formed the habit in early childhood of being responsible.

GRADUATE'S THANKS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How should "thanks" be given to persons after having received a graduation gift from them? Should it be written? Should it be written in a formal or informal style? Would you send it by means of card or letter?

D.

It is most important that a graduate should write an especially fine letter of thanks for every gift received as a compliment to graduation. A card of thanks won't do — a card of thanks will never do for thanking for a gift. The letter of thanks should be written on good-looking letter paper. Every detail of its form should be perfect — to show that the High School education has "taken root" properly. And the words of the letter should be happily chosen. First it is natural, in such a letter of appreciation, that we thank for the kindness and thoughtfulness of the giver. Then we chat, informally of course, about the beauty of the gift, its usefulness, if that is the kind of gift it is, or both its beauty and usefulness if that is the kind of gift it is. We should be proud of the letters of thanks that we send.

GIRL TAKES LEAD

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Who should speak first, a boy to a girl, or a girl to a boy? 2. When it comes to shaking hands, who should shake hands first..I mean, who should put out his hand first, the boy or the girl?

K.

1. It is the girl's privilege to speak or bow first. 2. And it is the girl's privilege to indicate that she wishes to shake hands. The boy waits for the girl to extend her hand for a handshake.

INVITATION TO A DANCE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to attend an annual benefit ball to be held at a hotel next month. Now I am not a good dancer, and go to very few dances. Shall I tell the person who asks me to dance that I cannot dance very well, or should I say nothing and dance as best I can? I don't want to be clumsy and at the same time I don't want to be a wall flower.

K.

I wish that it would be possible for you to have some dancing lessons before you go to this dance. Would it be? If this isn't possible and you still decide to go to this dance, do the best you can about your dancing. And don't make any comments about your dancing. This is not good psychology, for if you are conscious about your dancing, if you constantly talk about it, these words will "go to your feet" and will make you even more self-conscious about your dancing,

BRIDE'S PLANS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married this Spring and don't know exactly how to go about planning my wedding. Here's my problem; I will have enough money to have a wedding at Mass, but not enough to have a wedding breakfast for all of our relatives and friends. I have worked out a plan and wonder what you think of it. Here it is:.

Wedding Mass — nine or ten o'clock. Wedding breakfast for immediate family and bridal party at eleven-thirty or twelve noon; Reception for all our friends and relatives at four p. m.

Would it be all right not to have a reception if money should run low?

2. I do not know my employer's wife, so in sending out invitations to the wedding, should I address it to him alone and send it to the office, or should I address it to him and his wife and send it to their home?

H.

1. It is not at all necessary to have a wedding reception. To have your wedding Mass, followed by the wedding breakfast for the relatives and bridal party will be enough and correct. 2. The wedding invitation should be addressed to Mr. and Mrs., even if you do not know your employer's wife. And the invitations should be sent to the home address.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

He Thinks She Is Too Old-Fashioned

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I gave my boy friend the "gate" because he drank too much, was terribly jealous, and didn't like to walk, swim, or dance, all of which I love to do.

He thought I was foolish and old-fashioned because I wouldn't drink with him, but liquor doesn't agree with me, and I know it's not necessary to popularity, because I have plenty of men friends to go out with, and they never insist on my drinking. They know I don't like it.

I hope to go to Scotland this spring and visit my mother. I've been away for three years. He has asked someone to try and patch up things between us. I like him, but I think a girl makes a mistake to marry a heavy drinker, don't you?

Lassie

You're very level-headed, my dear Lassie, to see that a young man who for your tastes for the out-of-doors, would make a very unsympathetic husband. Let me congratulate you on your good, hard common-sense.

Presents Not Acknowledged

Dear Miss Fairfax:

This summer I went to Canada on my vacation. On the trip I met a lovely girl and we took a great liking to each other. I had my camera along and took a great many photographs. The girl's family didn't seem much pleased at this. When I got home I sent her the photographs, developed and mounted. She wrote me a rather prim little letter of thanks.

I sent her flowers and the acknowledgement was even more formal. I called two or three times, but she was never at home. I'm rather good at wrought-iron work and made her a jardiniere stand. It was never acknowledged. I sent her a Christmas present, and have had no word about this.

Would you try to discover what the trouble is, or forget about this young lady

Job, for Patience

The latter course would seem more desirable, considering she has not acknowledged your presents or been at home when you called. From the full text of your letter, which is too long to print, the girl seemed to like you, but her family did not. I hope you're not going to let this discourage you, but try and take an interest in someone else.

Are They Old Enough to Have Dates.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We are three girls who read your column every evening. Two of us are 17 years old and one is -9. We should like to have your opinion on the subject: Are we old enough to invite boys to call at our houses, if they go home at a decent time?

Also, we'd like to know if we are old enough to have dates with them? Our father disagrees with us about this, but younger girls have dates. We should appreciate your advice very much, as we have no mother to advise us.

Three girls

All things considered, girls are supposed to have dates with "nice" boys, approved of by their families, when they are 16 years of age. But I can very well understand the questioning of a widower father, before coming to this decision.

If the boys are old schoolmates, or friends of your family, I think Dad might relent, especially if all three of you went out together.

Gay Colors Add To Beauty of White Hair

By HELEN FOLLETT

White hair is a quality of beauty that is dimmed by drab attire which robs it of its silvery luster. It comes to life, looks its prettiest when there is a bit of gay color near at hand. She of the snowy crown should avoid colors that lack character.

Only the young and the beautiful can wear black with stunning results. It takes freshness of skin, brightness of eye, to offset funeral draperies. Every snowy-topped lady should have a bit of red in her hat or a cardinal bow at her throat. It will do wonders for her put ginger in her heels.

A suggestion of jade green or rich royal blue is flattering to the woman with the frosted crown. We said suggestion, smarty. Don't think we believe that the grandmas should flaunt all the colors of the rainbow. But we do know that there's no reason why they should suffer color fear, eternally to black, gray, dismal browns. That's our idea; we're glued to it, won't give it up.

Rapid reducing is senseless and dangerous. No need of it anyway. If the heavyweight loses three or four pounds a month, she is progressing well enough.

All that is necessary is to cut down on fats, starches and sweets, those busy old fat cell builders. Stick to lean meats, fish, poultry, vegetables that grow above ground, green salads, fresh fruits, buttermilk, fruit juices. Freak diets are bad because they delete many food elements that are necessary for well being.

Rapid reducing may create a slim, young looking body, but it also puts on an old, wrinkled face. Bad business.

Physicians who specialize in diseases of the skin and scalp remove moles by means of carbon dioxide now. The electric needle is sometimes employed for the purpose, also the X-ray.

As a rule, moles are harmless. Now and then one may develop into a malignant growth but even that is nothing to worry about since it can be annihilated. A mole or wart that is constantly kept irritated by the friction of clothing should be removed. May cause trouble.

Try a dry cleansing treatment for blackheads. Dip a cloth in alcohol, skim over the skin surface. You'll be surprised.

After the nightly face scouring and drying, apply ordinary baking soda with a clean powder pad. It combines chemically with the dust-tipped fatty substance that clogs the pores, tends to loosen disfiguring plugs.

Narcissus is a delightful perfume. It has a sweet and subtle effect, is quite the right choice for the blond darling who has a retiring nature —if darlings of any color at all are like that these days.

Our old friend vanishing cream is now known as a foundation cosmetic, though modern products are vastly better and easier to handle than those brought out some years ago by cosmetic chemists.

They come in colors to match the complexion. That, too, was a step forward. The white cream made the feminine nose resemble a marshmallow. Spooky.

COMMUNITY CLUB HOLDS MEETING

West Huntingdon—On Friday evening, March 15th, 1935, the West Huntingdon United Church Community Club met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. R. J. Merriams in a St. Patrick's party. Mr. Jack Pitman acted as chairman in the absence of our President Miss Evelyn McInroy.

The Devotional Program included a hymn, Prayer by Eva Merriam and Mrs. James Wilson; Keith Bray read the 23rd Psalm; Leah Carr gave a very helpful reading on the 23rd Psalm. Ruby Bray and Leah Bray sang "There is a Green Hill Far Away." May Merriam gave a reading "Ministries of Mercy". A hymn was sung.

The business included reading of minutes by Ruby Merriam.

Devotional Committee for next meeting was appointed; Vera Wilson, Annie Cook, Keith Bray. Recreational Committee; Arthur Wilson, Mrs. Albert Ashley, Eva Merriam. Refreshment Committee; Mrs. Frank Ashley, Mrs. Melvin Reid and Mrs. John Morecroft.

The Recreation Program was arranged by Robert Merriam and Annie Scott.

R. J. Merriam gave a brief history of the Life of St. Patrick, Ireland's Patron Saint.

The Potato Golf game played on the parlor floor was very amusing and resulted in Elvin Carr winning.

The Potato relay race caused considerable excitement.

R. J. Merriam gave an amusing reading "Tit for Tat".

Elvin Carr led the community singing while Leah Carr presided at the piano.

The Geography match found many of the company rusty on that subject.

Eva Merriam put on two very amusing and interesting contests, "Bird Guessing Contest and String Contest.

A dainty lunch was served by Mrs. Merriam and daughters.

Mr. Charles Morne and Keith Bray moved a vote of appreciation to our host and hostess which was heartily approved.

R. J. Merriam in replying said it was always a pleasure to have the young people of the Circuit at their home.

There were thirty one present and all enjoyed the fine fellowship.

EWE GIVES BIRTH TO QUINTUPLETS

Campbellford, March 18—Things are looking up on the farm of Thomas Bright of Godolphin, Percy Township. News that Farmer Bright's pet ewe gave birth to quintuplets the other day just came through.

The mother and four of the newborns are all doing well. The smallest of the quintupiets died, however, two hours after birth. The mother is feeding two and two are being bottle fed. Needless to say, the delighted children of the neighborhood have already nicknamed the proud mother "Mrs. Dionne."

Twins and triplets are not uncommon in lamb circles, but quintuplets are a decided rarity.

FLOODED RIVERS RECEDE SLIGHTLY

Chicago, March 18 (UP)—Flood waters pouring down the St. Francis, the White and the Black Rivers in Southeast Missouri and Northeast Arkansas Sunday night began to drop slightly, relief officials stated.

The St. Francis River at Kenneth, Mo., had dropped nearly a foot in the last twenty-four hours after sweeping away five levees on each side of its course during the past two days.

It was feared that another levee might go out in the vicinity of Kennett as the waters recede.

Red Cross workers brought in nearly 200 new families from the inundated areas in the last two days and last night nearly 250 persons were being wholly cared for by the Red Cross.

HITLER'S DECREE DRAWS COMMENT

Official quarters prior to the Cabinet session gave no hint as to what steps Britain would take. The main point at issue was whether the projected visit to Berlin scheduled for next week would be any use. Sir John Simon, Foreign Secretary, and Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, were due there a week from today to discuss a wide-scale security plan for Europe which included acknowledgment of German equality and abrogation of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty.

(The Havas News Agency said it had learned authoritatively the Cabinet would be asked to cancel the Berlin trip unless Germany supplied new reasons for the visit).

Government Heads Confer

Government heads conferred Sunday over the new situation. Besides Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, Sir John, Capt. Eden and Sir Robert Vansittart, permanent under-secretary for foreign affairs, also attended the conferences.

Frequent communication was being maintained between London, Paris and Rome.

Few of the morning papers expressed signs of alarm in their comment. The question of whether the Berlin visit of Sir John should be postponed was debated by some.

Much prominence was given to the statement of General Werner Von Blomberg, Minister of the German Reichswehr. At yesterday's military exercises in Berlin, that Europe was "too small for a second battlefield" and that war would be "self-laceration."

The Times said: "If Hitler's move is simply a rather crude method of asserting equality, then there is no irreparable harm done. The negotiations can go forward. The visit to Berlin should be paid, according to plan.

Policy Not to Fluctuate

"British policy does not fluctuate from week to week. Its purpose is to organize a collective system of security for Europe and it will not flinch from the task as long as hope remains. But it becomes more urgent than ever to know from Hitler himself, whether Germany intends sincerely and whole-heartedly to play her part in the system and join an equitable plan for general limitation of armaments."

The Morning Post said "We believe in establishing a new order in Europe and the world by peaceful means. The events of the week-end suggest again the futility of depending upon paper guarantees.

"There is little difference between the Hitler Brown and the shining uniforms of the Kaiser. Both embody the principle of German might. While there is no longer hope for the limitation of armaments, this should not preclude co-operation in pursuit of peace."

The Daily Herald said: "The declaration should be taken as a challenge, Not to further rearmament, but to a new serious effort to secure all-round disarmament. If peace is to be assured it must not be competitive armaments but by collective guarantee."

"There is no reason for hysteria or panic," said The Daily Mail, "Hitler's action is little more than a change of levels."

The Daily Express said: "By this Act Nazi Germany declares she will regain the rights and territories she lost and will reconquer by means of the sword. Britain in the face of a threatened war should withdraw from ruinous pacts and equip herself with aerial, naval and military strength equal to the strongest power in the world, barring only the United States."

"There can surely be no thought of sending Sir John Simon to Berlin until the German government suggests a new basis for negotiations." said the Daily Telegraph.

Not Fatal Blow

"Since they have wilfully destroyed the old, it is obvious that if Germany claims an absolute minimum of 36 divisions there is no hope whatever for an arms agreement between France and Germany and security vanishes in the mists."

"We need not regard conscription in Germany a fatal and final blow," said the Daily Mirror. "We cannot see Hitler or any other dictator engaging light-heartedly in a new armageddon."

The News-Chronicle said: "The issue of the new law at this moment is most ill-timed. There is sufficient hope to justify a resumption of the Berlin negotiations. However, what is ultimately necessary is a conference of the responsible heads of all states chiefly concerned."

A decision and immediate action on the Conscription question will probably be undertaken, it was indicated, after France learns the attitude adopted by the British Government at today's Cabinet meeting in London.

It was expected in some quarters France will press for a revamped eastern European security pact allying France with Russia, the Little Entente and Baltic countries, as well as a treaty among France, England and Italy for immediate aid by armed forces in the event of an attack.

Former Premier Edouard Herriot, Minister of State without portfolio in the Cabinet of Premier Pierre Etienne Flandin, in a speech on "Foreign Peril" last night at Tourcoing asserted the "Government won't lose its calm in handling the problem raised for all Europe.

"It will be said falsely France is embarking upon an armed race. No, she wants simply to assure herself of a minimum of troops necessary for the defense of the country without the least idea of attack."

The press talked of "patriotic vigilance" a veritable act of provocation" and "a menacing attitude" but remarked Germany's action failed to be "a threat" without the terms of the League of Nations covenant, which consequently it becomes difficult to invoke.

"Germany herself tears the veil, which hid her rearmament and resolves to show herself as she really is, in helmets and boots, ready for adventure as she was in 1914," was a typical newspaper comment.

"France needs a perfectly efficient war machine," the Nationalists asserted. "Nothing must be neglected in fortifications, arms, airplanes, training and the formation of military spirit to raise our forces to the maximum of mechanical preparation and moral resistance."

Ludendorff in Limelight

Newspapers, meanwhile, gave nearly all their space to accounts of the demonstrations which greeted the rearmament announcement and the foreign reactions.

The carefully expurgated dispatches from foreign capitals gave a uniform impression elsewhere in Europe Germany is regarded as having finally loosened the Versailles shackles.

The official Foreign Office comment was Saturday's decree is "a healthy development which will overcome the unwise and dangerous situation of which Europe has been sick for 15 years. One also which forms the natural point of departure for coming discussions and one which must be regarded in the light of realities."

Wilhelmstrasse circles frequently expressed the view France and Russia were likely to conclude a military alliance to offset Germany's reasserted armed power.

Quartermaster-General Erich Ludendorff, almost forgotten by the German people despite his war services, was unexpectedly projected into the limelight today as a result of a tribute by General Werner Von Blomberg, Minister of Defense, in yesterday's Memorial Day ceremonies.

Von Blomberg's references to the veteran strategist set tongues wagging everywhere.

Venerable generals bearing their spiked helmets and coats glittering with highest decorations looked at each other with pleased surprise on hearing their former comrade and superior officer mentioned in so flattering a manner by the Nazi leader.

"Field Marshal Von Hindenburg has gone home," said Von Blomberg in his address honoring Germany's war dead, "but many of his companions in arms still live.

"We think also of the man who from the glorious beginning at Tannenberg through the heroic course of the Great War stood at his side, the man whose powers were like those of Atlas who carried the world on his shoulders.

"We bow our heads in reverence to General Ludendorff."

Soldiers Goosestep

The services, held in the State opera house, were attended by a striking demonstration of the Reich's military formations. Eleven regiments of goose-stepping Reichswehrmen headed a colorful parade in which 14,000 uniformed men were estimated to have marched.

The air corps appeared in its new grey helmets. There were also a company of sailors, six companies of cavalry, a motorcycle corps with machine guns, Berlin police with rifles, armed storm troops and black shirts and a small detachment of artillery.

A high Reichswehr officer, asked for an explanation of the occasion for Von Blomberg's surprising interpolation, said:

"On April 6 Ludendorff will be 70. It is simply unbearable for us army men to think this famous man, who during the war proved almost a superman for capacity to work and for masterly strategy, should be forgotten by the German people."

Meanwhile men, women and children today gathered about posters put up throughout the city by the police department containing strict injunctions as to what the citizens must do when units of Germany's newly-proclaimed air-fleet wheel and circle to test the capital's vulnerability and air defenses tomorrow night.

From 10 to 11 p.m. the whole city will be plunged in half-darkness. At the stroke of 11 Berlin's myriad lights will be put out, the voice of its four million inhabitants practically silenced.

Shields of metal or cloth will top all street lights and lights outside buildings. Electric signs and other illumination in store windows must be switched off.

Tugs or canal barges must put shields over their port and starboard running-lights to prevent them being seen by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering's birdmen "attacking" as if in war. Vehicles are permitted only to use their parking lights.

Orders from the police forbid all persons attending theatres or movies from leaving between 10 p.m and midnight.

"The Silver Streak"

Streamlined Thrilling Railroad Drama

The hair raising thrills of the Pearl White and Helen Holmes era pale into insignificance when compared to the modern thriller of the rails, "The Silver Streak", coming to the Belle Tomorrow (Tuesday) and Wednesday, matinee and evening.

It shows a train going at an incredible speed with the engineer at death grips in the cab. Around curves it goes, and through switches that open just in time, missing freight trains by an eye lash, over drawbridges that close in the nick of time.

The relief from the thrills, aside from a strong love interest between Sally Blane and Charles Starrett as the romantic leads, is the comedy provided by an able team of funny men, Edgar Kennedy, Arthur Lake and Glinn "Big Boy" Williams.

The picture features the new streamline train of the Burlington Railroad which, together with Boulder Dam, comes to the screen for the first time in "The Silver Streak".

Also in the cast are Hardie Albright, William Farnum, Theodore von Eltz and Doris Dawson.

Raft-Lombard, Return

With a rhythmic under-tone of jungle tom-toms, Paramount's "Rumba", the second feature hit on the same program, brings George Raft and Carole Lombard back to the screen in an even greater success than their first co-starring effort, "Bolero".

Filled with elaborate and fascinating rhythms, some of LeRoy Prinz's most successful chorus routines, sparkling photography and costuming, it tells the vivid, poignant and human love story of a tempestuous dancer and a fascinating beauty.

Raft and Miss Lombard are the principals in this drama which carries its people from Havana to New York through dancing, gaiety and what at times seems like inevitable heartbreak.

A series of carefully planned minor climaxes brings the picture to its major climax when Raft dances on the stage with Carole Lombard in defiance of gangster's threats and guns.

The Belle Latest News of the Week will be exhibited on the same program.

Will Rogers' funniest picture "Life Begins at 40" closes a highly successful entertainment at the Belle Tonight, Mickey Mouse in Technicolor, a Musical Comedy and News.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Enter Madame"

Delights with Singing and Comedy

One of the year's most entertaining, interesting and colorful films, a picture that marks an epoch in movie-making, came today to the Capitol Theatre. It is "Enter Madame," which features Elissa Landi and Cary Grant in the principal featured roles.

Into what might have been merely a diverting and pleasant comedy, Paramount has introduced a series of elaborately dressed and mounted opera scenes, scenes of a type never before seen in the films. And they, plus the delicious comedy, make "Enter Madame" a picture of first rank and considerable importance.

The plot, essentially, is the amusing story of the man who marries a beautiful opera singer and becomes a mere adjunct to his wife's career. Then, when on the spur of a sudden impulse, he leaves her and threatens to get a divorce, the situation is completely reversed. And through a series of highly diverting well paced scenes, the wife wins the husband back to her side and happiness.

Elissa Landi and Cary Grant in the principal roles prove more than equal to the tasks imposed upon them. Grant, continuing the type of characterization which he has assumed in recent pictures, evinces more and more of his inimitable comedy talent.

Aside from the excellent singing of Richard Bonelli, Metropolitan star, and Nina Koshetz, featured in the film, some of the best scenes are based on the comedy antics of Miss Landi and Grant, and of the entourage of characters surrounding them.

You'll chortle at the pathos of the crestfallen Grant, when, in the early part of the picture, he becomes nursemaid for his wife's fluffy dog, and you'll probably roar in glee at the climatic dinner scenes. It is a dinner given by Miss Landi in an effort to effect a reconciliation, and ends in riotous merriment.

The supporting cast boasts such capable actors as Lynne Overman, Sharon Lynne, Adrian Rosley, Paul Porcasi and Michelette Burani, who recreates the role she played when "Enter Madame" was a Broadway success.

An excellent big Vitaphone comedy, "Salted Sea Nuts," in addition to a British Miniature entitled "Mother of Parliament" will be shown at each performance.

"Du Barry" Bread and Butter Plates will be given away today and Tuesday. Complete shows at 2.30: 7.15 and 9.15. Feature presentation at 3.05: 7.50 and 9.50.

FINANCIAL MARKETS
NEW YORK - TORONTO - WINNIPEG

WALL STREET FINANCIAL

New York, Mar. 18 (AP)—Securities markets were depressed by the militaristic week-end news from Europe and the slump in several of the leading commodity markets today. Stocks slid off 1 to 2 points in several leading issues.

Armament activities in Europe failed to give birth to any "war babies" for the campaign to take the profit out of war has dampened hopes that another conflagration in Europe would make a new crop of millionaires.

Merchandisers, however, thought the best Easter trade in recent years was in sight.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone and several others touched new low levels since 1933.

Among Canadian stocks, Dome, McIntyre and International Nickel got down small fractions. On the curb Lake Shore and Hiram Walker ruled easier. Dominion Government Bonds were quiet and narrow.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Mar. 18 (CP)—The industrial share market of Toronto Exchange was a bit feeble today, lacking buying pep and prices holding barely firm. Nickel recorded a concession of ¼ to 23. A mild spell off on the New York Board carried C.P.R., Ford "A", Brazilian and Distillery shares to lower levels. Losses in these were limited to ⅜ except in Walkers Common which slipped a full point to 27. Consolidated Smelters opposed the trend, adding three points to sell at 129.

A few of the foods were soft, including Westons and Maple Leaf, and in the construction group Cement Preferred, Canada Dredge and Dominion Tar sold off narrowly. Page Hersey recovered a morning dip and Steel of Canada took a small loss. Utilities and oils had no price changes of importance.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, Mar. 18 (CP)—Disregarding the sharp advance in the price of gold bars in London, the mining section of Toronto Exchange sold lower today in sympathy with the New York Board.

Selling off 9 cents to 1.70 McWatters was again the volume leader. It partly recovered this afternoon. God's Lake touched its low for many months at 1.34 and Pickle at 2.78 had a drop of 8 cents. Both did better this afternoon. Sylvanite lost 9 cents while recessions of 2 to 5 cents appeared for Buffalo-Ankerite, San Antonio, Macassa, Beattie and Sheep Creek. Coniaurum was off 9 points.

Wright Hargreaves weakened 20 cents and slightly lower prices were boarded for Pioneer, Teck Hughes and Dome. Lake Shore and Hollinger failed to retain small first hour gains. Little Long Lac slipped 10 cents. Noranda lost 50 cents to 33.75 and narrow losses came out for Mining Corporation, Hudson Bay, Eldorado, Castle and Bear. Eldorado was off 7 cents.

Oils were slow with Ajax down 2 cents to $1.00.

OTTAWA GROUP WINS 1ST PLACE

Local Young Thespians Win Applause From Large Audience

The Young Thespians— that ambitious dramatic group from the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School—stepped onto the stage in Convocation Hall, Queen's University, Kingston, on Saturday afternoon and repeated the fine performance of the one-act play "Lucrezia Borgia's Little Party" which they presented here last Thursday evening. They were competing for the third time in the third annual Eastern Ontario Dramatic Festival. Mr. Malcolm Morley, eminent English actor and author, was adjudicator for the occasion.

Although Mr. Morley did not award the Young Thespians a place in the competition, he commented lengthily on their play and commended the young actors for their courage in competing with older and more experienced players. His criticism was constructive and encouraging. He thought the play was well chosen the actors being appropriately cast. The dialogue did not seem brilliant to him and the conversation he felt was flat—a fault which he attributed to the author, A. J. Talbot. He believed that the actors made the most of their lines under this handicap.

The setting of the stage and the effect of the costumes were praised as "picturesque." Mr. Morley questioned that the candles and wine bottles belonged to the Renaissance period in which the play was set. He suggested that the stage might have been more equally balanced by placing the dinner-table to one side instead of in the centre, which, he thought, would have caused less crowding at the window and bad grouping of the players. The lack of stage space forced the players to appear a little awkward.

"I liked the party because the ladies looked so lovely," said Mr. Morley. He added that the spirit of the party might have been more "animate". The men seemed "a little slow" to him. He said they should have "swashbuckled" more. He considered Cesare (Douglas Frink), and Leonardo (Harold Carruthers) —"convincing". Lucrezia, (Rose Lazier), was complimented upon her poise and diction. "She presided at the table with a dignity that transcended the text," he said. Isabella, Fiammetta, Macchiavelli and Ridolfi— respectively played by Barbara Parker, Nellie Maraskas, James Moon, and Douglas Newby, were given honourable mention. Tessa (Mary Forster) and Baldassare (Bill Logie), the two servants, were singled out for their support to the rest of the cast. The dog (Rex Logie) behaved well and begged for a bone from his mistress in a most becoming manner.

The reaction of the audience to the play was sympathetic. They applauded enthusiastically at the end The comedy, coming as it did at an appropriate time in the programme, relieved the tension of the two tragedies which preceded it. The action was well-timed, twenty minutes under the forty-five minute limit. And the crescendo to the romantic climax was created with a spontaneous effect.

Miss N. P. Merry, the director, and her troupe of Young Thespians received congratulations for their popular success. One prominent patron of the drama in Kingston was overheard to remark — "They deserve a special prize."

The Ottawa Drama League was the most outstanding group at the festival. They entered four plays, two of which placed in the competition. "Rizzio's Boots" by Hal D. Stewart, directed by Dorothy White was the adjudicator's choice for first place. It will represent the Eastern Ontario Region at the Dominion Drama Festival which will be held in Ottawa, April 22-27. The Cobourg Dramatic Club placed second with "Smoke Screens" by Harold Brighouse, directed by Margery Pewtress. Another Ottawa play, "Fantastic Flight" by Sidney Box, directed by Tom Palmer, was tied for third place with "Nerves", a Queen's production directed by Arthur Sutherland. The Prince Edward Dramatic Study Group from Picton, competing in the festival for the first time, presented "The Wasp", directed by Reginald Abraham, who also acted as the Russian general and was given special praise by the adjudicator. Eight dramatic groups entered the festival, some presenting several productions. It began on March 14th and ended on Saturday night.—E. F. H.

PEARL IS LIKELY SPOILED BY COOKING

Professional pearl divers from the South Sea Islands have nothing on Mr. Henry Duggan, a commercial traveller of Ottawa.

Last Friday, Mr. Duggan had luncheon at the New Queen's Hotel His bill of fare consisted of fried oysters. With a dextrous sweep the member of the Ostreidae family was laid open. A sudden instinct caused Mr. Duggan to take a look at the oyster. He discovered to his amazement a pearl embedded in it.

Mr. Duggan gave the pearl to Miss Bernadette Finn of the Queen's Hotel. Miss Finn informed the representative of the Ontario Intelligencer this morning, that as yet she had not taken the pearl to a jeweller's to be analyzed as to its perfection. It is more than likely, that the pearl is spoiled on account of its having been cooked.

RIVER ICE MOVES OUT QUITE EASILY

No Danger of Flood in This City For Present Season

With a movement almost imperceptible at first, then gathering momentum and piling the cakes in high formation as it swept along, the major portion of the ice in the Moira River grumbled its way to the still ice-locked Bay of Quinte early Saturday evening. Spectators gathered on the bridges across the river watched the impressive motion of the ice mass grind and roar toward the lower car bridge where the cement piers halted the movement, piling the cakes almost half way up their height. The first flood of the ice this year, which is just two weeks later than last year was one of the quietest in memory of oldest residents. Little water in the river it is believed will assist in averting any flood danger. Scattered patches of ice still remain in the lower section of the river, while above Cannifton the river is still ice covered.

FIREMEN BUSY OVER WEEKEND

Three Calls on Sunday And One Saturday Answered

Made more alert by the strong wind which whipped the city during the day and on the stand-to in both halls since early morning, Sunday, ready to answer the first tinkle of an alarm, firemen of the local department answered three calls on Sunday, the windiest day of the season. The three calls, fortunately, were minor alarms.

A chimney fire at 48 Gordon St. at 8.20 a.m., the first call answered, was extinguished without damage. At 10.25 a second call to 150 Foster Avenue was prompted by overheated pipes, and a third call to 70 Station Street at 1.20 p.m. was of similar nature

At seven o'clock on Saturday evening the reels and trucks of the department clanged to a stop in front of a home on Starling Street. But instead of the fire department, a doctor and ambulance had been needed. An emergency call sent in to the police station was reported misinterpreted as a fire alarm. Both companies were despatched to the scene. The call was for an acute illness which attacked a resident of the home. An ambulance was summoned.

WRECKAGE LEFT IN STORM'S WAKE

Branches Litter Streets Signs Fall Prey to Heavy Gale

The heaviest gale of the season which reached an estimated velocity of forty-five miles per hour for short periods on Sunday, whipped the city and district during the greater part of the day and swept off to the east late in the afternoon leaving a trail of wreckage and damage behind.

Tree branches littered the streets in the city, sections of roofing were wrenched from their moorings and tossed to the ground. Signs in the downtown section whipped and swung wildly and in some cases were torn from their fastenings. In the country flying shingles were tossed on the wind after being lifted in whole sections and carried aloft. One fishing shanty on the ice covered Bay of Quinte was bowled over and over along the ice.

On the barn of No. 2 Firehall at the upper end of the city a large square of metal roof was loosened and tossed to the ground. On the police station verandah other sections of corrugated iron were loosened from their fastenings. One large sign in the downtown section in front of an oil station was shattered, when it fell through the force of the gale.

Although older residents of the city confidently predicted, that the blow would break up the ice in the Bay of Quinte, already opened at at the bay bridge, the two-foot thickness withstood the blast and was still in one solid piece today.

Police News

Police yesterday were searching for a 'hit and run' driver who caused some little damage to the property of Baker's service station and no end of excitement at the lower end of Front Street. According to the witnesses the motorist, driving a sedan, failed to make the left hand turn at the lower end of Front Street, when attempting to turn east on Dundas Street. Eye witnesses stated to police, that the automobile crossed the curb in front of Baker's service station colliding with four old tires, used for decorating purposes. The tires were unearthed from their moorings and strewn about. The motorist continued his journey easterly on Dundas Street without stopping. Police allege the license number of the vehicle was procured and a summons will be issued.

A rather peculiar accident happened at the upper end of Front Street late Saturday night at what is known as the boulevard. A car driven by Leslie Ashler, Madoc, was about to make a "U" turn when the motor car following him collided with the rear end of the Ashler vehicle. Fender damage only resulted and the matter was amicably settled upon the arrival of police. The second automobile was driven by Rocco Campoli of Point Anne.

A Pinnacle Street resident came to the police station on Sunday complaining, that a woman had entered his home and was causing a disturbance. Upon investigation by police it was disclosed, that the woman was a native of Kingston and had been sleeping in box cars at the southern extremity of the city. The woman was remoevd to the police station and subsequently informed to "vacate the city."

A new high record for transients being accommodated at the police station this year was established on Sunday night, when 28 "weary travellers" jammed their way into the cell block and at least were afforded quarters for the night. On Saturday night only six transients stept in the cell block, bringing the total to 24 for the week end.

WHY WE RECOMMEND CORECTAL LENSES

Ordinary lenses give blurred and indistinct vision.

"Corectal" Lenses give clear vision to the very edge.

The one is the old-fashioned ordinary toric lens, which has one side ground to a standard curve.

The other is a CORECTAL Lens, which has special curves ground on both sides. Only in this way can you obtain maximum vision and eye-comfort.

DEVIL CHALLENGED BY SALVATIONISTS

Large Audience Attends at Citadel For Services

The Blood and Fire Cadets of the Salvation Army caused an unprecedented stir in the city over the week-end. Quite five hundred people massed around Front Street on Saturday evening during the open-air meeting where the impersonated "devil" was held in captive. He was led to the Citadel where a capacity audience awaited his trial. He was found guilty and fled in a cowardly manner at the sight of his last victim, kneeling in prayer to the singing of "Sweet Hour of Prayer." From his tool box he had displayed some of his star tactics, including "Hypocrisy", "Slander", "Discontent", "Vile Reading" and as a last resort, the most recent blight on Ontario and other provinces—"The Beer Barrel." To this he was vigorously challenged by the Salvationist with sword in hand showing that the Salvation Army will do everything in its power to drive it out again.

Stern denunciations of "Ontario Beer and Wine" were made in the late evening open airs on Front Street. One convert was influenced by a cadet from a city beer parlour and taken to his home and prayed with.

All day Sunday the Cadets were alive with the old-time Army spirit, that dares and wins. Large congregations were present and at the evening service, every available seat in the building was in demand. Captain E. S. Payne, the Campaign leader, delivered the Bible address and its influence brought deep conviction upon the people, and twenty persons knelt at the altar, the prayer meeting continuing to a late hour.

During the services the quartette party and instrumental party rendered unstinted service and generous co-operation was also given by the local Citadel Band and Songster Brigade.

The Cadets are today preparing for their grand finale this evening which will be of a spectacular nature, closing with a scene depicting "The Lame Man at the Temple."

The communique went on to state it would be part of a general settlement by which it was contemplated Germany would resume her active membership in the League of Nations and proceeded to sketch out the terms of an air pact between the Locarno powers to operate as a deterrent to aggression and to ensure immunity from sudden attacks from the air.

The Germany government's reply ten days later welcomed the spirit of friendly confidence which the Anglo-French communique had expressed and undertook the German government would submit to exhaustive examination the questions raised in the first part of the London communique.

It agreed the spirit expressed in the communique of free negotiations between sovereign states could alone lead to lasting international settlements in the sphere of armaments.

Daily Short Story

A Strange Visitor

By Julian Dana

(Copyright 1933 King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Marta Lou breathed deep against the freshness of the April air. The tang, the serenity, the caress of it held her in thrall like a sweet dream. This magic Oregon country, day or night —starlit, moon-ridden snow-blanketed, sunkist — she loved every move and every change of it. Her sudden laughter leaped out to the curving, rocky trail that climbed the long hill, to the trees that guarded the little homestead with their pluming wands of fragrant tapestry, to the lushness of new life all about her. Marta did not know why she laughed.

A shower had come with the dawn, washed all the forest faces clean, painted a deeper emerald on the land. Now the warmth of the afternoon sun was a shimmering softness on green traceries, a softness that held indolence and inspiration in the moment. Once more Marta Lou tilted her young body; it was good to be alive — to know there were so many wonderful things to do!

In just a little while David would come down the furrowed hill-trail — David of the strong arms and the brown face and the shadowless blue eyes, David whom she loved so much that sometimes, deep inside her, there was a beating throb that was almost a pain. How brave he was, dear David. And kind. Marta Lou knew his love was a white shining blade that would guard her always. The memory of the long winter was an evanescent memory; and she was happy.

Lithely she turned from the little porch, hurried back to the kitchen. David would be hungry when he got back. It was a day's journey to Reno and return. He had been gone since early dawn; and now the sun was leaning to the misty mountains of the west. . . And she did hope President Lincoln would free the slaves. David was vitally interested in that and he said it was the only thing to do. David was always right, too . . .

The cabbage and ham were cooking beautifully. she glanced at the other big kettle and saw its sizzling contents would soon allow the dropping of doughnuts into the cavernous interior. But before the serious businers of doughnut creation came another rite. Marta Lou tiptoed out of the kitchen, through the door on the left, stole into the tiny bedroom and looked down on the rough pine crib.

A two-year sleeping boy lay there blonde tousled hair lying in close ringlets, a dimpled hand thrust placidly outside the coverlet. How very like the absent one, this sleeping David. Marta Lou could never quite overcome the awe that welled within her whenever she gazed on this slumbering wonder. For was he not her very own — her's and David's? She stooped and suddenly kissed the soft whitness of his face. Then she went back to the kitchen.

Her deft hands began to roll strips of dough into figure eights, drop them carefully in the simmering cauldron of "drippings". An appetizing aroma of cooking doughnuts competed with the odor of the "boiled" dinner. Marta Lou sang as she worked. David would soon be home, strong David, dear David who worshipped this little house and everything in it.

A sound above her lilting song and the kitchen clatter crept into her consiousness. It sounded like a footstep.

"Oh David," She was darting forward now to the front door, her loveliness all flushed and vibrant.

But it wasn't David. A great, dark man with a straggly beard stood glowering on the threshold, a sinster air about him. She had never seen him before. Her heart beat faster; there was a dread, stark primitiveness about this man that reached out and chilled her warmness.

"I'm hungry," said the stranger. "I want something to eat."

His nostrils were trembling with alert prescience of an animal that scents food and his voice was a rumbing command filled with a harsh insistence. It seemed to Marta Lou that it came out of his thick chest like thunder out of a darkling sky. Her gaze went up to the hill trail. It was desolately empty.

"I — I can give you something— I — " Her voice was curiously firm, but vague.

The man walked through the door, straight through the little living room into the kitchen. He sat his huge bulk down into the home-made pine chair, eyed the top of the stove inquiringly. Marta Lou followed him, filled as she was with fear.

"I'm ready," said the man.

Silently Marta Lou took down one of the precious plates, picked up her large spoon. The stranger watched her every move in sombre facination, his eyes feverishly intent. Her white arm trembled as she heaped the plate high with cabbage and slabs of ham. She placed it before him.

"I want lot's o' them there dough nuts," said the big man in his harsh voice, picking up knife and fork from the table.

She set a dish of warm doughnuts — the first of the batch, before him. The stranager waved a huge paw. "Keep on cookin'. I kin eat more."

Marta Lou kept on making figures of eight and her young lips moved in a speechless prayer. Oh if only David would come. There was so much about this uncouth being that terrified her . . .

"More cabbage," ordered the man.

The first edge of his hunger was gone. He was eyeing her now in a different way. His were the predatory eyes of a man who has not looked on a woman for a long time She shrank back after she set his second helping in front of him

Once more he began to eat.

But his gaze was wandering — Mostly towards Marta Lou, yet with time enough to dart about the kitchen, too. Those bright, black eyes roamed out through the door to the left, and finally they were fixed on the rough pine crib. The stranger rose. He started toward the bedroom door.

Fear — blind, horrible, devasting fear — came to Marta Lou . . .

The giant moved like a great cat ... Yes, he moved like the cougar David had shot — was it only a week ago? Marta Lou's confused mind conjured resemblance between them — beast of prey, those two. . . She followed the dark man to the side of the crib as if pulled by a magnet. There was no strength in her. She thought of pleading with the dark man — if only — he wouldn't go near the sleeper . . What was hidden in his mind, this creature that moved like a forest thing?

The stranger gazed at the sleeping child looked up suddenly at the girl. If she had read danger in the man's eyes before now she read a fathomless madness.

Swiftly she felt herself backing away from the crib. And the man was following her. Her hand was over her heart that was chill as an ageless Artic dawn; her bosom rose and fell in gusts of anguish.

They were near the door of the bedroom now. The man's staring eyes seemed to be driving her backward. She felt the rough pine siding against her slender back.

He thrust his hand into his pocket.

The hand came out again. marta Lou's agonized eyes caught a green color in the stranger's fist. He stripped off a bill from th esheaf he held and set it down on the table.

"I ain't never had — no kid," said the harsh voice awkardly. Without another word the giant turned and went toward the front door.

Her gaze focused unbelieving on the broad back, tried to understand this mysterious move. . .

He was at the door now, had turned. Fear lashed her stunned mind anew.

"Thet was the best meal I ever et," said the big fellow gruffly, and went out the door.

With a little cry Maira Lou dartforward. The bearded man was walking steadily away down the roadway. She leaned against the sturdy, sweet-smelling, pine door, breathed deep in the April air. Her eyes fled up the trail . . .

BUTTERFLIES

Butterflies are too bewtiful to last, and they prove it by ony living one day, proberly seeming longer to them than what it would to us on account of them not expecting any more. This proves people would be more unsattisfied with life if they expected to live about 300 years and then found out what was happening.

Most butterflies look so much like a lot of other butterflies that even a detecktive would have a hard time following one to see if it was really going to die the same day, especially if it was a little yellow one.

The most unpopular butterflies are moths, lots of moths not even living a day if there are any ladies around.

Some people collect butterflies instead of stamps, usually feeling as sad about the kinds they haven't got yet as what they feel glad about the ones they have. This proves the people that have the best time are the ones that go around enjoying other peoples things.

The thawt of being a butterfly some day proberly makes a catterpiller feel better, but it dont make a person feel any better when you suddenly tell them there's a catterpiller on them. ony they would proberly feel flattered if a butterfly got them mixed up with a flower and lit on them, wich they never do.

This proves most people have to be sattisfied with small favors.

Laval Plans Visit To Moscow Shortly

Paris, March 16—(AP)—Foreign Minister Pierre Laval proposes going to Moscow shortly, it was said in informed quarters today, to tighten up Franco-Soviet relations in view of Hitler's hostility to an Eastern European Mutual Assistance Pact.

Mussolini's assurance of a hands-off policy toward Yugo-Slavia was understood to have precipitated Laval's plans to confer with foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff on how to hasten pact negotiations.

Sure that the girl had been here, Tarzan silently entered the hut. Presently, in the gloom he saw an object outlined upon the floor. Stepping closer he leaned over to examine it—the dead body of a warrior, from whose chest protruded a spear.

Then he searched carefully the rest of the hut, returned to the body, stooped, and smelled of the weapon's shaft. A slow smile touched his lips—Tarzan understood what had happened in the hut before his arrival.

A rapid search of the village assured him the girl had escaped. He was again outside the palisade when faintly he heard an old, familiar sound. Balancing lightly upon a swaying branch he stood for a moment, a graceful statue of a forest god.

Tarzan listened intently. Then there broke from his lips the long, weird cry of ape calling to ape, and he was away through the jungle toward the sound of the booming drum of the anthropoids, whom he knew were dancing the Dum-Dum.

Black Hawks Play Maroons Canadiens Meet the Rangers Leafs the Bruins in Playoffs

Only Three Games Left to Complete N. H. L. Schedule

CANADIENS BEATEN

Leafs Simply Coast to 5-3 Win on Saturday Night

(By The Canadian Press)

Chicago Black Hawks, world Champions last season, have picked their opponents for the 1935 Stanley Cup playoffs. Defeating Boston and New York Rangers over the week end they chose to clash with Montreal Maroons in the first of their fight to retain their title.

The last uncertainty in the National Hockey League's 1934-35 schedule was brushed aside Saturday night, when Hawks beat Bruins at Boston, giving them second place in the American Section over Rangers and the right to meet the team managed by Tommy Gorman who piloted Hawks to the Stanley Cup last year.

They emphasized their decision last night with a victory by the same score over the New Yorkers, who have no choice but to meet Montreal Canadiens in the series between third-place teams.

The Hawk-Bruin game was really the only one of the five played this week-end that mattered but wide-open play made interesting games of most of the rest. Canadiens lost two battles, dropping Saturday's game 5-3 to Toronto and Sunday's 6-3 to Detroit. Americans and Maroons played a scoreless tie in Montreal Saturday.

Two Games to Play

Rangers, Detroit and Americans have completed their 48 games but the other six teams have to go through the motions again Tuesday before the schedule is closed. St. Louis play in Toronto, Maroons at Boston and Chicago at Canadiens.

Little Mush March was the big noise at Boston when Hawks clinched second place, scoring three of the Chicago goals. He got two of them and Louis Trudel another in the first before Bruins could get started. Art Coulter scored the other Hawk counter and Nels Stewart and Dit Clapper counted for Boston.

Bruins lost the services of Paul Haynes, third line centre for the N.H.L. title series with Toronto, when he suppered a deep gash on the left instep when tripped by Art Wiebe.

Howie Morenz was prominent in the Hawk win at New York making the plays for goals by March and Johnny Gottselig in the second period after Paul Thompson had scored for Hawks and Earl Seibert for Rangers in the first. Bert Connolly brought Rangers nearer with his goal in the second but counters by "Mac" McFadyen and Louis Trudell in the third gave Hawks the game.

Conacher Stole Show

Any hockey game in Toronto around St. Patrick's Day is considered Francis Michael Clancy's particular night to howl but Charlie Conacher, who says he is just as Irish as King stole the show Saturday.

The big right winger scored three goals to bring his season's scoring total to 56. He has scored 35 goals, better than anyone has done since Cooney Weiland got 43 in 1927, when the rules permitted players going in the defence zone before the puck carrier.

Not content with that Conacher played the nets for three minutes in the third period, while George Hainsworth was treated for a cut. Canadiens put on five forwards but Conacher, armed with Hainsworth's stick but no pads, turned everything they had aside.

Hec Kilrea and Bill Thoms joined Conacher as the Leaf goal-getters and Leroy Goldsworthy, Wilder Larochelle and Jack McGill tallied for the Habitants.

Canadiens played listlessly at Detroit and Red Wings were on top at all stages. Young Syd Howe was their leading scorer with two goals and an assist and Johnny Sorrell, Doug Young, Ebbie Goodfellow and Laurie Aurie got the others. Goldsworthy and McGill again were Habitant scorers.

Americans might be said to have won the scoreless roughhouse at Montreal by a broken thumb and a strained shoulder. Hooley Smith may be out of some of the playoff games with the broken thumb and Baldy Northcott will miss Tuesday's game while he nurses a sprained shoulder.

WHITE SOX ROOKIE

Another of the lads who hope to hold regular jobs with the Chicago White Sox is Lee Stine, the grim-looking lad shown above. Stine is a pitcher and Manager Jimmy Dykes could use him to advantage.

B. C. I. Easily Defeated by Ottawa in Finals by 6-2 Score

Kingston, March 18 (CP)—Ottawa High School of Commerce won the Ontario secondary schools hockey championship at the Harty Arena Saturday night when they defeated Belleville Collegiate Institute by 6 to 2. The Capital players were always ahead and were never in danger of losing, though they failed to show the brilliant hockey they displayed against Westdale secondary school of Hamilton the night previous. The consolation game, scheduled between the losers and the semi-finalists Chatham Vocational School and Westdale, was not played.

Patsy Guzzo, clever centre player of the Ottawa team, was again the star in the final. He scored four of the six goals and was always a thorn in the side of the Belleville team. His tricky stick-handling and deadly shooting gave Ottawa a two-goal lead in the first period and after Logie had banged in a pair from McElrath, Seymour made the score 3 to 0 at the end of the period.

Ottawa was held to a single goal in the second period, Wimperis driving home Dick's pass, while in the last period it was the nine-minute mark before Guzzo started to find the nets again. He cashed a pass from Kiske from close in and eight minutes later went through the entire Belleville team to score the first Ottawa goal. In the last minute of the game, McElrath netted a tally on a rush from his own defence.

The Ottawa team richly deserved the championship, for in both the semi-final and final games, they were far superior to their opponents. On Saturday the forward line of Guzzo, Seymour and Kiske worked like a machine, while the sturdy defence of Wilson and Wimperis used their weight with telling effect. Dascovitch did not have a difficult evening in the nets and had no chance on the two that beat him.

Johnston, McElrath and Logie were the standouts for Belleville team, and showed great pluck by their continual fighting for goals. In the face of almost certain defeat, they never let up and for the full 60 minutes struggled for counters.

Ottawa — Goal, Dascovitch; defence, Wilson, Wimperis; centre, Guzzo; wings, Seymour, Kiske; subs, Dick, Charron, Wiggett and Armstrong.

Students Win First Game in Loop Finals from the 'Platers'

Trenton High School Most Likely Will Win Honors

Trenton, March 18 (Special) — The Trenton high school defeated the Benedict-Proctor in the first game of the final series for the championship of the Trenton and District Hockey League on Friday night by a 6-0 score. The series will be the best two out of three games with the second staged tonight. The game was fast considering that the ice was water covered. The Benedict-Proctor have been the wonder team of the series. They ended the regular schedule in a fourth place tie with Carrying Place. They won the play-off position and then put the league-leading Wooler team out with two straight victories. The High School vanished the Brighton squad and now they look like the Courier-Advocate cup winners. The runners up will each be presented with medals, while the winners will each be presented with individual replicas of the cup.

Gray, the scholars net guardian, had his first shut-out of the season, while his team scored six against the silver-platers. Cain scored the only counter in the opener. Heaney carried the puck in and passed from the corner to Cain, who registered. The kids from the knowledge house skated the Benedicts off their feet in the water. The players from both teams were well soaked as they fell and slid on the ice. The second stanza was the bad one for the Benedicts as the students netted four goals. Heaney went in and shot high but his rebound came back in front and he drilled it past Cotterell. Blakeley, Wells and Miller, who have been the big threats during the last series, were almost helpless as the scholars back-checked and Gray was tending a superb game between the posts. Kerr counted the next. He came in and shot with Cain getting the rebound and he returned it to Kerr, who scored. Kerr figured in the next also when he passed to Dadswell at the blue line and he went in to score. Staples, Cain and Dadswell combined on the next with Staples getting credit for the goal. The last stanza was tighter but the silver plate boys could not get in a scoring point, while the students netted the sixth when Mitchell scored on Staple's pass.

Goal Tenders Injured

Both goal tenders were struck during the game. Gray was taken in for repairs, when his toe was cut in a collision. The player's skate pierced his shoe and numbed his foot but he returned to get the shut-out honors.

Cotterell was cut badly over the eye when he stopped a hot drive off Beale's stick in the second period but he also returned to be the star of his team. The silver platers had bad luck when they were forced to play the last three games without the services of their leading goal-getter, Sim Mattis, who fractured a rib while playing in Frankford a week ago. He will be out during the entire play-offs. The High School were minus the services of Allan Lamore, centre ace who was practising for a play at St. Peter's School. Gray, Heaney, Kerr, Kidd, Cain and Dadswell were the best of the students. Blakeley, Wells, Beale, Miller and Cotterell in the net, were the pick of the losers.

High School—Goal, Gray; defence Mitchell and Heaney; centre, Kidd; wings, Derry and P. Beale. subs. Kerr, Staples, Dadswell, Cain and MacMillan.

Benedict-Proctor — Goal B. Cotterell; defence, S. Cotterell and E. Beale; centre, Blakeley; wings, Miller and Vandervoort, subs. Parks, Wallace and Wells.

Referee—Ross Burt.

Summary:

1st period:
High School—Cain (Heaney) 12.05

2nd period:
High School—Heaney 4.01
High School—Kerr (Cain) .. 2.11
High School—Dadswell (Kerr) 3.37
High School—Staples (Cain Dadswell) 7.20

3rd period:

George Kelly

London, March 18—Over forty years of age and still able to play a good game at right wing—that is George Kelly, one of the real veterans of English football and one of the best. Kelly started his football career before the outbreak of the great war lining up with Burnley, and since then has been around a bit among different clubs. Sunderland had his services for a time, and Huddersfield also saw the veteran, until now he lines up with Preston North End. The years have taken little from the great forward and have added materially to his stock of knowledge of the science of football. He is working wonders at Preston in coaching the younger players in the fine points of the game. He is one of the greatest strategists in football and has the ability to impart his knowledge to up-and-coming players. At either inside right or out side right, Kelly has been a star, and he seems to go on season after season untouched by time, even through the strenuous campaigns of league play.

C.O.B.L. to Ask O.B.A.A. Napanee Gibbards be Elevated To Senior Rating in League

If Favorable Action Received Would Become C.O.B.L. Member

MEET AT OSHAWA

Max Swanston Nominated For Vacant Eastern O.B.A.A. Post

The C.O.B.L. went on record to recommend to the O.B.A.A. at that organization's annual meeting next month, that the Napanee Gibbards be elevated to a senior rating in the O.B.A.A. and included in the roster of the C.O.B.L. was the resolution passed at the semi-annual meeting of the Central Ontario Baseball League during their semi-annual meeting held in Oshawa on Saturday. Included in the resolution were inferences relating to agreements made at the 1934 annual meeting by Manager Gibbard to the affect, that his club would definitely play in the senior ranks in 1935, if his intermediate O.B.A.A., "A" team were successful in winning the championship in their category in 1934, which incidently was accomplished by that organization. The secretary of the C.O.B.L. was instructed by the meeting to forward the recommendation or resolution to the O.B.A.A. for their careful persual at the annual meeting in Kitchener on April 6th next.

The C.O.B.L. will not place any amendments to the O.B.A.A. constitution or by-laws in 1935, it was decided, while President Swanston and Secretary Newton Thompson were named as the C.O.B.L. official delegates to attend the seventeenth annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. at Kitchener. During Saturday's meeting Wm. Kay of Peterboro, for many years Eastern Ontario O.B.A.A. executive member for this district, officially announced, that he had resigned from office and would not stand for re-election in 1935. After voicing their appreciation to Mr. Kay for his many years of faithful duties on the provincial executive, Vice-president Art Casterson, moved into the chair and the meeting moved, that President Max Swanston be nominated by the C.O.B.L. as O.B.A.A. executive member in place of the retiring Mr. Kay and that he stand for election in Kitchener. The motion was carried unanimously with President Swanston tendering his thanks. The league went on record to support Ernie Gibbard at Napanee to the position of second vice-president on the O.B.A.A. and also moved that in case of defeat in election, that Mr. Gibbard be appointed to the executive body as in former years.

Four Clubs Represented

All four clubs composing the C. O. B. L. were officially represented Kingston, Belleville, Peterboro and Oshawa all sending voting delegates while Cobourg applied for another year's leave of absence by letter, the request was granted. Correspondence from Napanee was read by the Secretary to the affect that that club would not attend, although an invitation had been tendered.

During the general discussion the meeting went on record as being adverse to the proposal recently made by the T.A.B.A. relative to that organization sending out one winner from Toronto and directly into the O.B.A.A. senior final series. The C.O.B.L. delegates were of the opinion, that the Toronto entry would have to enter the senior O. B. A. A. play-downs on an equal footing with other senior league winners throughout the province, or remain out of the O.B.A.A. competition. William Kay addressed the meeting officially and advocated, that the eastern delegates should band together and fight for their rights. "All clubs, leagues and baseball associations from Gananoque to Oshawa should send as many delegates as possible to the annual meeting of the provincial body and see that the best for baseball in the east be upheld," stated Mr. Kay.

April 13th was named as the last date, when the clubs in the C. O. B. L. could submit their desired playing dates for home games or suggested double-headers. Secretary Newton Thompson was asked to arrange a tentative playing schedule to be presented at the next league meeting late in April. The schedule will not be drafted until after the provincial O.B.A.A. conclave, when the question of whether Napanee Gibbards will be a member of the C.O.B.L. or not will be finally decided. Secretary Thompson reminded the various clubs, that all transfers of players taking up new residence should be in the hands of the provincial secretary not later than March 22nd for approval. Some controversy was heard between the Oshawa and Kingston delegates in relationship to possible double headers being played between those clubs, Oshawa desiring double headers at Kingston, while the Ponies were not in favor of such a move. The meeting adjourned at the call of the president.

The delegates present, besides President Swanston, vicepresident Art Casterson of Kingston and Secretary Newton Thompson were — Belleville, Art Young and W. H. Mills; Oshawa, G. H. Campbell, Hugh Brown, Art Gates; Peterboro, Hugh Campbell, Pet Lang, and Vic Hamilton; Kingston, Hewitt Smith.

THE BABY-FACE TERROR

"Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown," goes the old adage, and none take the saying more to heart than the wearers of world's boxing crowns when word spreads around the halls of fistiana that Jimmy McLarnin, the battling Irishman from Vancouver, has cast a covetous eye upon their title. Welterweight and lightweight champions have trembled in the past when the lambasting leather-pusher went on the loose, but soon according to blue-eyed Jimmy, the middleweight throne may be his goal. The smiling pleasant-faced Celt with the load of lethal dynamite packed in his fists, has been a battling terror over the years, and it has become legend, deeply retrenched, that he never loses a return bout on a decision given against him.

Grim-faced, silent, taciturn Pop Foster, his mentor, guide and friend since the days he roamed the streets of Vancouver, has been a big factor in McLarnin's meteoric rise. He made a point of studying opponents, learning their weaknesses, and then—zowie!—when that deadly right lashed out for the vulnerable spot, it generally was curtains, and a new monarch.

When the gong sounds the end of the last round and before the decision is given, Jimmy turns a cartwheel in the ring—he did it once with hands so badly battered from pounding at tough Sammy Fuller—that it was agony.

Jimmy is not always the baby-face—see that fighting scowl above—but victorious or defeated he has been a source of pride to Canada, a great fighter, but one unspoiled by victory.

DAY BY DAY

Although the Belleville Collegiate interscholastic pucksters lost out in the provincial interscholastic finals to Ottawa Glebe by the score of 6 to 2 at Kingston Saturday night the Shiels-coached aggregation were in no way disgraced. Previous to playing in the final game against Ottawa the local "collegians" had played exactly three interscholastic hockey matches, two against Tweed and one versus Chatham in the Provincial semi-finals on Friday. Taking this all into consideration and also the fact, that Coach Shiels has a young squad the locals did marvelously well under the circumstances, the Ottawa team having competed in some 18 interscholastic games before entering the semi-finals. Undoubtedly another season will see the B.C.I. pucksters at a much better advantage, lathough they did themselves creditable in the provincial finals to hold the older and more experienced Ottawa squad to six goals. The winners led throughout 3 to 1 the first period, 4 to 1 the second frame with final count being 6 to 2.

The Kitchener-Waterloo juniors surely won a place in the hearts of some 5,000 fans, who saw them battle gamely back against great odds and overcome a three goal lead, rolled up by the Oshawa juniors in the Motor City on Saturday night. The Kitchener victory forces the series to three games. Incidently from a spectacular view-point there would have been a much different story to tell had the two clubs exchanged goalkeepers, as Behling completely overshadowed Peterson all evening with his miraculous saves as the Hancock juniors swept in upon him repeatedly. In Dumart, the Kitchener squad has a mighty smart and clever defenceman while Bauer and Lorentz showed class on the front line. Barnes and Chisholm stood out for Oshawa as did Gamble with Graboski and Maundrell turning in splendid efforts. Judging from the general consensus of opinion around the Oshawa Arena after the game the fans seemed to believe, that the Oshawa squad were not really trying any too hard, gambling on a possible third game at Toronto where there would be assured of at least a twelve to fifteen thousand gate attendance. Incidently personal feeling ran high in Oshawa on Friday last, when it was learned that the game was scheduled to be played in Toronto. A last minute switch on the part of the Oshawa executive saved considerable trouble, we understand.

With the exception of the adoption of a schedule all business of the C.O.B.L. was cleaned up at Oshawa turning the semi-annual meeting of the loop on Saturday. Every club was represented and it was clearly demonstrated that the competition in baseball will be keen next summer, that is if one was to believe all the rumors heard floating around during the afternoon session. Incidently nearly all of the delegates took in the Kitchener-Oshawa Junior O. H. A. final game at night. Perhaps the most important news to come out of the meeting was the resolution passed to recommend to the O.B.A.A. that the Napanee Gibbards be elevated to a senior rating and play in the C.O.B.L. next summer.

Although all present regretted the retirement of Bill Kay of Peterboro from his present position on the O. B. A. A. executive, the meeting went on record as tendering him a vote of thanks and then immediately, and without a dissenting voice, moved that President Max Swanston's name be placed on the O. B. A. A. ballot next month for election to the vacancy left by the resignation of Mr. Kay. Incidently President Swanston commented on the recent amalgamation of the two local baseball organizations. "With the new baseball association in full swing in Belleville, that club will no doubt be real contenders in the C.O.B.L. this year," stated Prexy Swanston as he congratulated the local baseball moguls upon the present local movement relating to the fostering of minor league baseball in Belleville.

During the conclave we learned, that Carman Bush, who tried to catch on with the local senior club, is angling around with the Oshawa team and may yet be seen in the C.O.B.L. next summer. Judging from the general conversation floating around the Genosha Hotel during the conclave there will be anywhere from three to five new faces on each C.O.B.L. club when they face the barrier on the 24th of May. Although the matter of the playing schedule was left in abeyance, it is believed that a quadruple schedule will again be adopted if only Kingston, Oshawa, Peterboro and Belleville face the barrier, while if the Gibbards are included in the set-up then a triple schedule may result. At any rate all seemed quite optimistic over the success of the summer pastime in 1935.

United States Preserves Extreme Caution; Russia and France Attack British 'Weakness'; France Favors Joint Anglo-Italo-French Reply

Berlin Doubts United States Will Follow British Protest Step

GERMAN-JAP RUMOR

Aerial Bombardment of Berlin Staged For 'Experience'

By MELVIN K WHITELEATHER
Copyright 1935,
By The Associated Press

Berlin, March 19—Unofficial reports the United States would follow Britain and others in protest against the violation of the peace treaties and rumors of a German-Japanese military alliance circulated simultaneously here today.

The foreign office vigorously denied the German-Japanese alliance rumors while an influential official said:

"Nonsense. Solid friendship with America means more to Germany strategically and morally than any alliance with Japan, the success of which would be highly problematical."

Extreme Caution in U. S.

Washington, March 19—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration today adopted an attitude of extreme caution in its consideration of the European situation growing out of Germany's abrogation of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty and of its separate pact with the United States.

President Roosevelt was represented at the White House as intending to take time to assay the developments fully.

The President had a luncheon talk today with William C. Bullett, Ambassador to Russia, but it was emphasized this engagement, made several days ago, had no relation to the German armament move.

French Protest Weakness.

London, Mar. 19 (CP)—A new element in the uncertain European arms situation was injected today with French protests over the "weak tone" of the British note to Berlin yesterday over Germany's abrupt announcement of conscription and repudiation of the military clauses of the Versailles Treaty.

The British note, which said Germany's move was seriously calculated to increase uneasiness in Europe, brought angry protests from across the channel. The French press today was bitterly criticizing Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon's intention to carry out the British mission to Berlin as originally scheduled.

Today both Sir George Clerk, the British Ambassador to Paris, and Charles Corbin, French Ambassador to London, were in conference with Sir John at the Foreign Office here. The French wanted a joint protest to Germany by Britain, France and Italy, followed possibly by recourse to the League of Nations.

French Security Shaken (?)

By acting alone in querying Berlin, said the French comment, the British have imperilled the whole Anglo-French understanding. France sees her security system for Europe crumbling with nothing ahead for France but a return to the old alliances.

Whether Great Britain will ask the United States to take steps in connection with Germany's newly announced military might depended it was learned authoritatively, on the forthcoming Berlin conversations.

Sir John, accompanied by Captain Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, will go to Berlin Sunday and talk with the German leader next Monday and Tuesday.

Criticism is Better

Paris, March 19—(CP-Havas) — "The journey of Sir John Simon to Berlin next week means the legalization of German re-armament," the Socialist newspaper Le Populaire declared today in its editorial comment on the British note to Berlin.

Le Populaire added the British mission may be interpreted to reflect London's toleration of the open violation of Germany of the Versailles Treaty.

The British note is criticized bitterly in most of today's newspapers, editors taking the view England should have waited and sent a protest jointly with France and Italy.

"There is no longer any advantage in a visit by Sir John Simon to Berlin", says Le Journal, "under conditions exactly opposite to those previously laid down by France and Great Britain," referring to the Anglo-French memorandum of Feb. 3 which declared against unilateral rearmament by any nation.

Probe of Air Defences Promised by MacDonald

Ramsay MacDonald

LONDON, Mar. 19. (CP) — Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told the House of Commons today the Government would appoint a special subcommittee to investigate Britain's defences against aerial attacks.

The committee to be chosen will serve under the committee of Imperial defence. It will be especially concerned with bombing attacks.

The question was raised today in the House by Sir Austen Chamberlain.

The Prime Minister told him the Government was not content to assume there could be no protection against bombing except counter-bombing.

The new subcommittee of the Imperial Defence Committee, the status of the Air Defence body, will direct the whole enquiry into search on Air Defence and advance the necessary funds, said the Prime Minister.

First Expansion Stage

This reflects the first stage in the great expansion program for the Royal Air Force which will add forty-one squadrons within three years.

Prime Minister MacDonald said a small committee of eminent scientists previously appointed had already made promising concrete proposals for research and preliminary experiments have already started.

The new sub-committee will coordinate all Defence departments and Civil departments as regards work on Aerial Defence.

Sir Philip Sassoon, Under-Secretary for Air, led off the debate by detailing a great scheme for linking the Empire by air. The Air Ministry, the British Postoffice, and Imperial Airways, were cooperating in this scheme with a three-fold aim, he said, this being a great increase on the existing frequency of service, a striking acceleration of the existing time schedules, and the carriage of all first-class mail matter by air.

"There are to be four or five services weekly to India, three to Singapore and East Africa, two to South Africa and Australia; seven or eight to Egypt," Sir Philip promised.

"We hope to bring the time schedule to India down to just over two days; to Africa, to four days; to Australia, to seven days. Later we may even better these figures.

Cause of Peace Supported

"No other country in the world has yet formulated plans for the carriage of the bulk of its first-class mail by air without some surcharge."

Sir Philip said Great Britain's defence weakness was not only "a danger to ourselves but to the cause of peace."

"We are not warmongers," declared Sir Philip, "and neither are we influenced by the warmongers," he said.

Air Ministry Offers Prize

To encourage the British manufacturer to produce a medium-sized commercial transport machine of high speed and economic operation, the Air Ministry is offering a prize of £25,000, the Under-Secretary announced. This amount ($121,500 at par) will go for the best machine produced by any United Kingdom manufacturer within a stated period, complying with broad requirements formulated by the Ministry.

Sir Philip also indicated Britain was not content to leave the long-distance non-stop and altitude records in foreign countries (France and the United States.)

Two Experimental Aircraft

"We have decided to construct two experimental aircraft, one with a view to high altitude and one for long-range flying," he said. "If their development is successful we shall probably at some suitable time make an attempt on the existing world's records for heights and distance.

"We do not intend to build aircraft solely for the sake of achieving records but where in meeting the general requirements of aeronautical research and development an assault on some records can be undertaken in our stride, the attempt will be made."

Of the first-class air mail scheme he said it was hoped to set a rate of about three cents a half-ounce for Empire mail posted in the United Kingdom. The scheme will entail £2,000,000 of new capital, the bulk of which will be for new machines. He expected it would come into operation in 1937.

EXCHANGE SHOWS BELGIAN CRISIS

If Belgium Leaves Gold Basis Other Nations May Follow

(Copyright 1935, By The Associated Press).

London, March 19—Diplomatic sources declared today Belgium, whose cabinet headed by Premier Georges Theunis resigned today, will have difficulties in getting a new cabinet to support the gold standard and if Belgium departs officially from the gold basis, she may take other members of the gold bloc with her.

As officials and diplomatic circles began their study of the situation created in Brussels, exchange transactions reached sharply. Gold currencies weakened in relation to the pound and the United States dollar slid down in sympathy.

Although the dollar opened firm at $4.75 1-4 to the pound compared with yesterday's close of $4.76 3-8, it later slipped.

An hour after the announcement of the resignation the dollar slid to $4.76 3-4, the Belgian belga from 20.08 to 20.37 to the pound and the French franc from 71.50 to 72.25 to the British pound.

MAN WANTED AT GUELPH

Niagara Falls, Ont., Mar. 19 (CP) —Harry Slain, arrested in Jacksonville, Fla., was deported from the United States today and turned over to city authorities here. He is wanted on a forgery charge at Guelph, police said, and officers are enroute here from that city to return him for trial.

DEVELOPMENTS IN SITUATION

(By the Canadian Press)

Today's developments in the tangled European situation:

LONDON — Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon conferred with the French Ambassador presumably over acute French disappointment with the tone of the British note of protest to Berlin over Germany's abrupt rearmament.

PARIS — The French press sharply criticised the British note as a "capitulation" to Hitler. France will send a note of her own tomorrow; meanwhile the Chamber will be asked to double the term of military service immediately.

ROME—Italy prepared to send a protest to Berlin although Italian officials still took the attitude events of the last few days have not made much change in the situation that already existed.

BERLIN — Officials intimated the next step would be repudiation of the demilitarized zone on the left bank of the Rhine unless France agrees to a demilitarized zone on her side.

BRUSSELS—The cabinet of Premier George Theunis resigned while uncertainty reigned over whether Belgium was still on the gold standard. London experts thought Belgium, like Italy and Germany, was "attempting to cling to the shadow of the gold standard by abandoning the substance."

MOSCOW — Russia echoed French dissatisfaction with the terms of the British note, authorized circles saying the moment demanded a strong united front of the powers against Germany.

17 Million Men Are Mobilizable in Europe

3 BILLIONS YEARLY

Russian Strength One of Military Mysteries of World

BY TAYLOR HENRY
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 19—Military minds of the world turned today to Europe's 17,000,000 mobilizable fighting men following Britain's protest at Germany's establishment of a conscript army of 500,000 men.

At a cost of more than $3,000,000,000 yearly, Europe's leading powers maintain their standing armies and lines of reserves so if need be a greater complement of war forces can be put in the field than at any time in the world's history.

Military observers at the various capitals of Europe consider foremost among the fighting machines —with the possible exception of the Russian enigma—is France with her well equipped standing army and even greater reservoir of trained reservists.

Smaller Powers

Standing on almost the same footing as France are Britain and Italy. Less strong, but still accounted by military experts as powers to be reckoned with, are the smaller powers of Poland, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia, each of which can put more than 1,000,000 men in the field.

The two mysteries are Russia and Germany. The number of troops and the extent of their training and equipment are unknown quantities.

An analysis of the comparative strength of leading nations assembled from military, news and governmental reports:

France—a standing army of 586,250 men is the backbone of her mobilizable force of 2,500,000 men.

Behind the line of fortifications guarding her 1,655 miles of land frontier, she has organized a skeleton formation of 20 army corps areas, garrisons in peace-time by 30 divisions but rapidly expandable on declaration of war to 60 infantry and cavalry divisions and 20 brigades of artillery.

British Strength

Britain—her regular army numbers 200,000, while manning the coast defences are 135,000 members of the territorial army; in the army reserve are 150,000 more fully trained troops who have completed their enlistment in the regular army.

Britain has approximately 1,500,000 mobilizable troops. Aerial defences number 31,000 men and

BUYERS FROM U.S. SEEK HORSES HERE

Price of $200 Paid as "Top" For Good Animals

Toronto, March 19—(CP)—A plentiful supply of seed grain throughout the province is shown in the weekly crop report from the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Dufferin County reports some outside demand for the grain while Huron, Peterborough, Victoria, York and Renfrew have enough for home requirements.

Peel and Brant report heavy demand for work horses while in Lambton tops of $200 are common for good quality horses with United States buyers also looking for supplies.

In Waterloo, Haldimand and Rainy River fall wheat appears to be in good condition but lack of snow in Prince Edward exposed supplies there to cold winds. A shortage of hay is reported in Middlesex and straw is being used for feed.

Potatoes are moving more freely in Ontario under the new marketing regulation but movement is slow in York where growers are having trouble complying with the regulations.

General improvement in cattle trading is shown throughout the province and advanced prices are reported in dairy cattle. Poultry is selling readily in Wentworth and produce production is generally increased.

IRISH VETERAN WINS HIS FIGHT, STAYS IN CANADA

Joseph O'Hare Served With Comrades At Vimy

OVERSTAYED IN U. S.

Canadian Government Allows Man to be Deported to Canada

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 19—(AP)—Joseph O'Hare, 39-year-old war veteran who served with the Canadian forces in France and was wounded at Vimy Ridge, has won his fight against deportation to Ireland his native land, Herman Kull, United States immigration chief here, announced today.

O'Hare was deported last night to Ottawa, where he lived from early youth until about a year ago when he came to the United States to visit relatives. Canadian officials declared he had given up his right to residence in Canada by overstaying his visit in this country and when he tried to re-enter Canada he was barred. As U.S. immigration officials held that O'Hare had entered the United States illegally they intended to deport him to Ireland.

Veteran organizations became interested in the case and took the matter up with the U.S. governments with the result that arrangements were made for the veteran's deportation to Canada.

PERTH RESIDENTS ARE INDICTED

Lesser Charge of Manslaughter Laid in Each Case

Perth, Ont., March 19.—(CP)—Following the empanelling of the Grand Jury at the Lanark County Spring Assizes here today Dr. W. J. Hobson, 39, and Rupert Mackler, 36, both of Perth, were indicted of manslaughter and an illegal operation arising out of the death of a Carleton Place girl in the office of Dr. Hobson, February 14th.

Following the charge from Mr. Justice J. A. McEvoy, the Grand jury retired to consider the bills.

Each of the accused will be given a separate trial. Dr. Hobson will be tried first after which Mackler will appear. Both men have been out on bail following the preliminary hearing March 1, when they were committed to stand trial on illegal operations charges.

Following the inquest at which an open verdict was rendered the men came up for preliminary hearing and murder charges against them which wer laid after their arrest were withdrawn by the Crown and the two lesser charges were laid.

342 MEN SERVE ON O.P.P. FORCE

Successive Duties Uncollected Total Over One Million

Toronto, March 19—(CP)—At the end of last fiscal year, Oct. 31, 1934, uncollected succession duty accounts in Ontario totalled $1,099,514.58 and uncollected corporation tax accounts amounted to $805,617.24, according to a return placed on record today by the Ontario government.

Main reason for non-collection of the succession duty accounts was depressed condition of the real estate market while the fact many corporations ceased operations was cited as the chief reason for non-collection of the corporation tax.

Another return indicated the strength of Provincial Police Oct. 31, 1934, was 342 men after 88 retirements had been made during the year. Figures showed the force was at its lowest strength since 1929 when only 283 men were employed.

HYDRO WILL PAY OFF $8,000 MORE

Local Commission Decides to Pay up 1938 Debenture

Another debenture, this time for $8,000 was ordered taken up and withdrawn by the Belleville Hydro Electric System at the meeting of the Commission on Monday. This debenture is of date April 1st, 1938.

This step was taken owing to the surplus of the commission's operations for the year ending December 31st, 1934.

Already this year the local commission has paid off two debentures for the total of $15,000.

Outstanding debentures on the distributing plant are now reduced to two, seven thousand dollars each, maturing in 1936 and 1937.

The surplus at the close of last year would have been ample to withdraw all the debentures had the board so desired.

Yesterday's meeting was attended by Chairman G. A. Reid and Commissioner Mayor G. O. Tice.

GERMANY LIKELY TO FORTIFY ZONES

Unless France Demilitarizes Similar Areas on Own Soil

(By Melvin K. Whiteleather)
(Copyright 1935, The Associated Press).

Berlin, March 19 (AP)—German officials, assured by Reichsfuerher Hitler himself Germany withdraws from the arms limitation imposed by the Versailles treaty, said today the demilitarized Rhineland zones provisions of the treaty will be the next to be eliminated.

They indicated Germany would proceed to fortify those zones unless France accepted the demilitarization of similar areas on her own soil.

As a foretaste of what kind of protection Germany may expect from her rehabilitated airforce, Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goerwing, aviation minister, called for air force manoeuvres tonight. It was the second time in four days Berlin has had an opportunity to see her combat forces on review.

The United States meanwhile it was understood, is considering notifying Germany her rearmament program is a violation of the German American peace treaty which contains the same stipulation as the Versailles treaty.

Germany is ready, official sources said, to discuss the entire problem of European stability with Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, regardless of Great Britain's protest.

"We are ready to talk disarmament," an official spokesman said, adding the British emissaries now would have to negotiate on an equal basis with Germany as a full-fledged military power.

"This is the only point changed in the forthcoming negotiations," the spokesman said, "but it is a most essential one as far as Germany is concerned."

The officer hurried to the scene, peered into the auto and found the driver and his wife were not hurt. When Officer Smith asked what had happened the man gave as the reason for the mishap the fact his wife went to sleep in the back seat.

The five French soldiers in the plane were Major Bonninbue, chief of the Governor-General's military staff; Capt. Gaulard, commander of the French Equatorial African aviation unit, piloting the plane; Adjutant Ditte, radio operator Guifard and mechanic Sonnit.

The pretty wife of Governor-General Renard was the widow of Michael Winburn, United States soap manufacturer.

Blessed Sacrament's Institution Theme of Rev. Father Hanley

Impressive Exercises at St. Michaels at 40 Hours' Devotion

Last evening the exercises of the Forty Hours' Devotion were held in St. Michael's Church which was thronged with parishioners. The Rosary was recited by Rev. J. J. Keeley, Marmora, the preacher of the evening being Rev. Gerald Hanley of Trenton. Rev. Father Hanley in his inspiring sermon on the institution of the Blessed Sacrament by Jesus Christ dwelt on Christ's words that Christians would be known for the love they showed one another and that His followers would be hated of all men. This has been true through the centuries and Father Hanley pointed to great examples of those whose lives have been marked with love and devotion to Christ, those who have persecuted Christ in the past and who still persecute Him in His Mystical Body, and those of Judas' type—who have received Him in the Blessed Eucharist but who have fallen away and become apostates.

Solemn Benediction was celebrated by Very Rev. Dean J. P. O'Riordan, Tweed, with Rev. H. J. Farrell, Stirling as deacon and Rev. J. J. Collins, as sub-deacon. A quartet of High School boys sang "Prayer Perfect", "One Hour With Thee" and "Salve Mater" during the service last evening, the choir of the church singing the Benediction. The altar on which the Blessed Sacrament was exposed was beautifully arranged last evening with red roses, ferns and red altar lights.

Masses were celebrated this morning at six, seven and eight o'clock and over one thousand received Holy Communion. The last was a High Mass for which the children of the Senior Third class sang the "Mass of the Sixth Tone" (Henri Dumont) with Mrs. James Grant presiding at the organ.

The beautiful devotion of the Forty Hours is in memory of the forty hours that the body of Christ remained in the tomb after His Crucifixion and previous to His Resurrection. The consecrated Host is exposed for this length of time and the devotions open and close with triumphant processions in honor of the Body of Christ. The exercises close tonight with the rosary, a sermon delivered by Rev. E. M. Leacy, Deseronto, the Litany of the Saints followed by the procession and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Who, May be Who in 1935

By BILL BRAUCHER

© CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION, INC.

Men and teams change quickly in baseball to the consternation of experts. In the spring of 1933, the Giants were picked by most observers for seventh place, but they won a pennant and a world's championship that year.

In the same year Leonard Koenecke, Giants' outfielder, purchased after being personally scouted by John McGraw, was labelled "minor leaguer" and sent to Buffalo by McGraw's successor, Bill Terry. It appeared the last player discovered by McGraw before his death was doomed as a flop.

In its frantic search for ball players, Brooklyn picked up Koenecke at Buffalo. Manager Casey Stengel taught the young man all he knew, and gave him every chance. Koenecke rewarded Casey's faith by hitting .320 last year and setting a new high average for outfielders with .994, only two errors being charged against him in 123 games. From failure to success in 10 easy lessons!

Son of Railroader

Len started in baseball part time, firing a locomotive on the Northwestern during the off season. He was born at Baraboo, Wis., Jan. 18, 1908, the son of a fireman on the same railroad more than 25 years.

In 1926 Koenecke's transportation stint was between Ishpeming and Escanaba in Michigan. He caught for Crystal Falls. A fan, seeing his work, recommended him to Alex McCarthy, manager of the Springfield, Ill., Three Eye league club. He was released in 1927 because of a sore arm, but he had his start. He caught on at Moline, and then with Quincy, which club sent him to Indianapolis in the American Association for trial. In June 1929, Indianapolis sent him back to Quincy.

McGraw Paid $30,000

Firing his engine during the winter, Len played during the summers of 1930 and 1931 for Springfield and Indianapolis. Then in 1931 McGraw saw him and was so impressed he paid $30,000 for Len's release.

Koenecke failed to hit for the Giants in 1932 and was farmed to Jersey City. Showing good form he was recalled, only to be sent to Buffalo when he fell down in the batting department again.

LEN KOENECKE

After his fine season with the Dodgers last year, Koenecke is one of Brooklyn's bright hopes in 1935. He may supply the punch that brings the Dodgers back to the top.

BISHOP GIGNAN IS CONSECRATED

Cathedral of St. Peter at London Filled For Ceremony

London, Ont., Mar. 19 (CP)—For the first time in a quarter of a century the beautiful sanctuary of St. Peter's Cathedral today was the scene of the consecration of a Bishop of the Roman Catholic Church. With the highest prelates of the church in Canada officiating and in the presence of other high dignitaries, officials of state and laity, Most Rev. Ralph Hubert Dignan, native son of this city, was consecrated Bishop of the diocese of Sault Ste. Marie.

His Excellency, the Most Rev. Andrea Cassulo, D.D., Archbishop of Leontopolis and Apostolic delegate to Canada and Newfoundland was the officiating consecrator, assisted by His Excellency, the Most Rev. J. T. McNally, D.D., Bishop of Hamilton, and the Most Rev. J. T. Kidd, D.D., Bishop of London, as co-consecrators.

A prominent section was occupied by representatives of Federal, Provincial and Civic Governments, delegations of invited friends of the new Bishop and representatives of societies and organizations with which he had worked here, in Chatham, Windsor and other centres.

The sermon given by the Most Rev. Denis O'Connor, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough.

Bishop O'Connor explained the powers of the episcopal office, the dignity of the new Bishop's rank and told of the obligations of this order instituted by Jesus Christ.

The ceremonies, according to the more than 1900-year-old ritual of the Catholic Church, attendant upon the consecration of Bishop Dignan, commenced just after the long procession of prelates, right reverend and reverend clergy had completed its route to the sanctuary of the cathedral.

Then, amid a scene of splendor, under the candle-lit dome of St. Peter's the papal bull was read in Latin and English. Bishop-elect Dignan then presented himself to the apostolic delegate for the examination.

He professed his belief in the doctrines of Catholic Church and pledged fidelity and obedience to the authority of the Catholic Church.

There was one among the many close relatives occupying front pews who watched the solemn ceremony with mingled feelings of deep joy and reverent awe. That one was the new Bishop's mother, Mrs. R. H. Dignan.

Bishop Dignan, resplendent in the white robes of his episcopal office, was led to his Bishop's throne.

Silver-Plate Faces Result of Accident

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 19. — The condition of seven youths whose faces were burned by the application of silver nitrate as part of a fraternity initiation ceremony was reported as unimproved today by attending physicians.

Lotions with which the youths were treated failed to penetrate the burned skin, the doctors said. The faces of the victims were described by doctors as virtually "silver plated".

One by one the youths appeared at hositals after the initiation held early yesterday at a gravel pit several miles north of here.

11 CARS FAIL TO PASS BRAKE TEST

Police Conduct Tests in Different Parts of City

Eleven local motorists failed to have their automobiles pass the necessary brake test, when stopped by the local police on Station Street yesterday. The annual spring brake testing activities of automobiles by local police, assisted by Highway Traffic Patrolmen, has opened in Belleville and will continue at various points throughout the city for the remainder of the month.

Scores of motor vehicles were stopped by the authorities and the Tapley brake tester applied to the running board to determine the exactness of both the service and emergency brakes. Although the majority of the vehicles tested were found to possess brakes in good working order and those failing to comply to the test the owner will receive a summons to appear in local police court.

The brake testing activities were opened yesterday by Sergeant Arthur Booth of the local police department, assisted by Traffic Officer Sam Ervine. "In the majority of the delinquent cases we found, that either the service or emergency brakes were defective, although in four of the eleven cases to be prosecuted, both the service, or handbrake and the emergency brake failed to stop the vehicle in the required distance," explained Sergeant Booth, as he further stated that where minor garage attention would overcome the difficulty, the motorist was instructed to have his brakes adjusted immediately and allowed to continue.

The brake-testing activities opened in Belleville yesterday when the authorities took up a sudden post on Station Street, stopping all motor vehicles as they approached from either direction. Posts of brake examination will be taken up at various other points throughout the city at different intervals throughout the present month. A general check-up of the brakes of motor vehicles throughout the province has been ordered. Other highway traffic laws, such as headlights, reflectors, rear lights, etc. are expected to follow in order.

BELLEVILLE BREAD MUST BE USED IN FILLING VOUCHERS

Recommendation is Passed Without Discussion in Council

BETTER LIGHTING

Letter Received From Kiwanis Club Referred Back For Action

The shortest session so far of the 1935 council was held last evening at the City Hall, the business being transacted in less than three quarters of an hour. The council, however, spent considerable time in committee, not meeting in council till shortly after nine o'clock. Only one important recommendation was passed the same affecting the bakers of this city. Unanimously the council agreed "that the relief committee be allowed to issue vouchers to any of the merchants handling bread providing such vouchers are filled from bread baked by Belleville bakers only and that if any of said merchants fill vouchers with any other than Belleville baked bread, that they be refused any further bread vouchers from relief committee or any other voucher of any description". There was no discussion on the recommendation as it spoke for itself.

A letter was received from the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, through the Secretary Ex-Alderman George H. Griffin respecting the lighting of the various parks in the city and it was referred to the Chairman of Light for action. There is a possibility, that some new lighting will be installed on the principal streets of the city this year but Alderman Frank Domenico has not as yet outlined his plans to the council. The letter is herewith given.

"Mr. George O. Tice,
Mayor,
"Corporation of the City of Belleville,
"Belleville, Ont.

"Dear Sir and Aldermen,—

"The Kiwanis Club of Belleville at a recent meeting passed a unanimous resolution urging the City Council to take some definite and early action to see that the Parks Board of this city, undertakes this year, to have Victoria Park properly lighted at night so that our worthy citizens may spend their evening hours in this park during the hot Summer months and may do so without danger to both limb and reputation.

"We believe that the Parks Board have in past years been very lax in the matter of Public Parks and places of recreation for our citizens, who would greatly enjoy outside leisure if proper facilities were provided.

"There are a greater number each year who are enjoying water sports, but with lack of proper lighting facilities in the neighoorhood of the park and docks, we feel that full use of the water and park facilities are not enjoyed because no one wishes to stumble through dark places, who think anything of themselves.

"We as a club also urge the using of Hydro rebates for such park lighting, since parks after all are thoroughfares. We would also urge that consideration be given to the lighting of Bridge street, East and Victoria Avenues, as both these streets are very poorly lighted and our recent tragic happening on Bridge Street, very effectively brought out this fact.

"May it please your honorable body to give serious consideration to these matters early in the year so that the citizens whom you represent may enjoy their own parks and traverse their streets in safety.

"Yours very truly,
"George H. Griffin,
"Secretary.

Curling Rink Rented

Clem Allen, secretary of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Athletic Club petitioned the council for the use of the old curling rink during the summer months. He offered $50.00 rental for the building and pay water and power rates and also asked an option to buy for a sum of $500. The offer of rental was accepted but the option to purchase was refused by the council and the council reserved the right to cancel the contract in two weeks notice without any rebate to the lessee in case of sale or removal of the building. The contract for rental will be in force until December 1st.

The council by recommendation approved the activities of the Belleville Trade Group. Aldermen Hill, Marshall, Barlow and Cushing were a committee appointed to give out a tender for fixing the roof on Number 2 fire hall and have power to act. The repairs to the roof were made necessary by the heavy wind storm of Sunday, that ripped a certain portion of the roof off. The V.O.N. were given the use of the City Hall auditorium for April 4th when a play under their auspices will be presented. The council was invited to attend the rally in the City Hall tonight, when the Canadian Legion will have as guest speaker, a member of the Provincial Command.

An application from Earle Weese and J. Keith Onderdonk to erect a one storey service station near the corner of Dundas Street and South Front Street was referred to the City Solicitor for an opinion. The council took no action on the recommendation at the meeting last night. Alderman Barlow and Alderman Arnott stated to the council, that negotiations with the Ontario Shore Gas Company were not completed and that a full report would be given the council and ratepayers in the near future. Several meetings have been held between the company and the council but nothing concrete has been done. A by-law for the execution of a deed between the city and Robert Campbell Burke was passed through the various stages. Mr. Burke purchased from the city a lot on the west side of Cannifton Road at the intersection of Cannifton Road and Station street. Those present at the meeting were Mayor Tice, Aldermen Hill, McCreary, Arnott, Thompson, Foley, Safe, Guthridge, Domenico, Cushing, Barlow, Harvey and Marshall.

Karachi, India, March 19—(CP Cable) — Twenty Mohammedans were killed and 200 wounded, when police fired into them as they rioted following the execution of a fellow Moslem.

The man executed was Abdul Quayam, convicted of murdering a Hindu, whom he claimed had written an offensive word about the prophet Mohammed.

The police intervened and attempted to stop the parade. The demonstrators threw stones and other missiles.

Letters to the Editor

Belleville, March 12, 1935.
To the Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer:
Dear Sir:

Would you be kind enough to give me space to reply to Side Hill Sam?

I think if he would move around on the other side of the hill, he would know more about what is going on in and around this city. My solution to settle the railway problem does not seem to appeal to him. I have said that if the taxpayers would use their own road the C.N.R. the railway problem would be settled in a short time, but Side Hill Sam seems to think we own the C. P. R. Now, if he had said, that we ought to own it, I would have agreed with him. He quotes enough and he says that the C.P.R. was built and maintained by grants and loans reaching hundreds of millions of dollars and a tract of land on each side of the road bed all through the west, which should justify us in calling it our own road, but calling it our own road and owning it is two different things. When they sell a section of land, I have not noticed that we get any of the change, or that it lowers our interest any. I have been around quite awhile but Side Hill Sam is the first one that I ever know to say that we owned the C.P.R.

To my mind that is the biggest joke I ever heard. Now, I never bet in my life but I will take Side Hill Sam on and put up $50.00, that for everyone he can get to say, that we own the C.P.R. I will get twenty-five to say that we do not. It is quite clear that he does not know what is going on in this district, so I will put him wise to a few things.

In the first place I have had farmers tell me they look forward to my letters. I have had influential men come in my store and congratulate me on the stand I have taken. I have been told in the City Hall, that my letters are one hundred percent right. One banker told me, that someone ought to do what I am doing and to go to it. Another banker told me, that I had the answer to the railway question. One ex-banker told me that if any taxpayer used any other mode of transportation except their own, they should quit kicking about the C.N.R. going behind. To my mind Side Hill Sam had a lot on his chest for a long time and was about ready to blow up and my letter gave him a start. Now, he says a lot of good things and he certainly called the government down for which they rightly deserve for the most of them are in league with Mr. Beatty and will ruin this country if there is not something done, so I would say to Side Hill Sam, "go to it and shake them up" and when he finds one of them working to the interests of this country let me know and I will give him a hand, to help the good thing along. Now, Side Hill Sam supposed I had one hundred railroad customers. I wish I had. But, I just lack ninety-six of having that many. Two of them are C.N.R. employees and two of them C.P.R. If I had one hundred I could pay off the mortgage faster than I can now, for they get wages enough that they can afford to pay their grocery bill. Some of the truck drivers can't pay their grocery bill on the starvation wages they get and they work such long hours that they are dangerous on the highway on account of not being able to keep awake. If they got twenty-five cents per hour they would draw fair pay. One truck driver came into my store and wanted to know, what I was going to do with the truck drivers I was going to lay off, and I told him just the same as we did with the railroad man that had to roll up his overalls and go home, when he got his license to drive his truck. Now, I think that I have said enough to convince Side Hill Sam, that I am not talking through my hat. I feel sorry for the old gentleman, that put all his life savings into C.P.R. stock, for he has found out, that it is not quite as good an investment as he thought it was. I bought City Service shares at thirty-one and they are one and one eighth now and I have not noticed anyone worrying about me and why should we worry about the shareholders of the C.P.R. when there is only ten percent of them residing in this country, while every taxpayer in Canada is a shareholder in the C.N.R.

I sign my name,
D. S. LaRue,
60 Dundas Street,
Belleville, Ont.

P.S.—I have only discussed my views with two truck drivers and both of them agreed that I was right.

Side Hill Sam says himself that the officials made a mistake in giving the franchise to the truck drivers in the first place.

My plan will rectify all this.

The Editor, Ontario Intelligencer
"SOMETHING ROTTEN IN DENMARK"

Sir,—

As an old railroad man may I call the attention of your readers to some peculiar features of the terrible disaster at Dundas last Christmas Day and which have been entirely overlooked by the general public and the press.

First is the amazing fact, that everybody seems satisfied to accept the quite unjustified idea, that the lives and safety of two trainloads of Canadian citizens should be dependent upon the continuous normal brain functioning of a single individual.

Mr. Editor, this awful catastrophe would never have occurred but for the wrong placing of the fatal switch and siding on which the wreck occurred.

It is placed facing the west and open to the oncoming traffic from the west, consequently both trains entered it directly off the mainline and following each other going east.

Now had this switch and siding been properly placed in the reverse direction facing east and only open to a train moving from the east then the wrecked "Special" could only have entered the switch by backing up into it from the east and the Express No. 16 coming from the west would have passed the spot safely and at any speed, quite independent of the mental failure of any one trainman.

Such an arrangement— simple as it is —is only what is demanded by Government regulations on every double track main line in Great Britain and Western Europe, so why, in the name of common sense should our Canadian railways take any less precautions for the public safety?

And further, what is the use of our maintaining a costly Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners who have—I believe—full jurisdiction, if this unscientific placing of switches is the best they can do for the safety of the travelling public?

I wonder how many more such switches there are on our double track lines, like the fatal one at Dundas and which is nothing but an invitation to a disaster sooner or later, it only requiring a failure of the "human element" such as occurred in this case, to bring it about.

To avoid any misunderstanding I should add that the foregoing applies only to our main lines of travel which are double tracked and surely the travelling public are entitled to all the benefits and safeguards which this has always been supposed to give them. If Dundas is a criterion then they are being deprived of their rights in this respect.

SHE PLAYS ORGAN AT 75 YEARS

Takes Kruschen to Keep Rheumatism Away

Writing to tell how she keeps her activity, this wonderful old woman states:—

"My hands were becoming so crippled that I had to give up piano and organ playing—and almost entirely gave up knitting. I have been using Kruschen Salts for nearly two years, and am very pleased with the result. Last August I played two church services on the organ, and hope to do so again this August. My fingers are nearly straight, and quite supple, and I am 75. I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many people."—A. A. C.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

POLICE BILL GIVEN SECOND READING

Toronto, March 19 (CP)— Six hours of deliberations faced Ontario legislators today as the Throne Speech debate resumes after standing adjourned since last Thursday. T. A. Kidd (Cons. Kingston) is slated as the first speaker.

Legislative wheels ground faster yesterday despite a series of sharp interchanges between opposition leader George S. Henry and Minister of Agriculture Duncan Marshall.

Attorney-General A. W. Roebuck's police centralization bill was advanced to the committee stage after Conservatives had attacked it for the past two weeks. The opposition forced a division on the second reading of the bill but the government carried it through second reading by a vote of 54-15.

The argument between the opposition leader and Minister of Agriculture came after Mr. Henry read a newspaper report of a speech Mr. Marshall made at Brampton last Friday night. He was quoted as saying no member of the former Henry cabinet would receive the Conservative leadership after the government had completed its investigations.

The Police Bill, proposing a special director for Ontario police in emergency, was attacked by two Conservatives, T. A. Kidd, Kingston, and Arthur Ellis, Ottawa South.

Mr. Kidd suggested if the special director is to be able to have complete charge of municipal forces the government should make a contribution to the support of these bodies.

"Who ever heard of such a bill?" asked Mr. Ellis, who declared it gives the Attorney-General too much power.

Second reading was given an amendment to the Municipal Act by Col. F. Fraser Hunter (Cons. Toronto-St. Patricks) designed to provide funds for town bonds.

Golf's Toughest Hazard!

Magnetism of Out-of-Bounds Sign and Other Possible Trouble Draws Bad Shots Out of Good Golfer's Bag—Boys Try to Avoid Dangers and Leap Right Into Them—Road Holes at London Hunt Club and Pond at Glen Stewart Good Example

By FRED JACKSON
Central Press Canadian
Sports Writer

"Golf is a game of many hazards," declared a veteran master of the mashie recently.

My friend went on to discuss the dozen and one different jams one can get into while attempting to negotiate eighteen holes in nothing flat.

He spoke of the awe-inspiring traps that golf architects seem to take fiendish delight in spotting at strategic spots to catch everything but the most perfectly hit ball, the out-of-bound regions that somehow or other seem to sneak up on even best of golfers, in short, between the two of us we just about turned the grab-bag inside out detailing the woes and misfortunes that abound the Royal and Ancient.

It seems, however, from this corner, that the toughest and most demoralizing to all but the really great (and even to them in their weak moments) is what we might call for lack of a better description, the "magnetic" hazard.

The office dictionary tell us that the word magnetic means having the properties of a magnet, figuratively, a person or thing exercising a strong attraction.

So, in our magnetic hazards we are lured like a fly into the spider's corner. We know the bunker is located at a certain spot, the pond is between the tee and the green, over to the right is out of bounds, trouble lies to the left, and sure as shooting unless you watch out the bogey man as represented by the magnetism of the hazard will catch up with us.

Where Ignorance is Bliss

Did you ever notice that a player, trying his luck on a course for the first time, totally unaware of the danger spots, strokes his way around say, in nifty 92 and the same laddie after a few weeks' acquaintance, given time to find out where all the trouble lies finds his score moving up in proportion?

Some of the best scores made by champions have been registered during a first whack at the links Walter Hagen played his first round in the 1931 Canadian open at Toronto's beautiful Mississauga links in exactly 67 strokes to set a new course record. "The Haig" had never played the championship layout before, and simply played the shots as they came.

Hagen won the title, incidentally after a playoff with the Englishman Percy Allis, and his first round was streak of brilliant scoring. "Sir Walter" knew nothing of possible trouble, and as a result concentrated on the job of hitting the ball down the centre.

Call Your Shots

Possibly the worst exhibition of magnetism is in the out-of-bounds bogey. I well remember the Canadian amateur championship held over the links of the London Hunt Club, London, Ontario, four years ago. The back part of the first nine has an inviting country road on the right and the grounds of the Western university on the left. Either way you can go out-of-bounds.

One of the favorite off-duty habits of some golfers and many fans was to gather around this particular bit of the course and wager on the fate of the contestants as they prepared to negotiate the troublesome two or three holes. The casualties were plenty. The only wise lads were those who eased their tee shots down the fairway with irons.

Golfers who had been smacking their tee shots straight down the alley became obsessed with an overwhelming desire to slice their offerings to the road or hook them into the college grounds.

This London example can be duplicated on every course in the country that boasts of a fair-to-middling out of bounds proposition or really inviting water hazards.

Lack Concentration

So what, may we ask, is the answer?

It seems that the golfer instead of concentrating on what he is trying to do, allows his mind to dwell on what he shouldn't do. Faced with out-of-bounds on the right, he attempts to guard against a slice by standing around to the left, but is still concentrating on the middle of the fairway while his feet are directed to the left. The easiest way to slice is to attempt to steer the ball to the left. You promptly cut across the ball and bingo it's away.

In the case of the pound, the would-be slasher is thinking more of the trouble than he is of the fairway. He is so worried that he looks up to see if the ball is going right and immediately tops the missile.

Try to locate a definite spot where you want the ball to travel and drill yourself to forget everything else.

Unless you can shut the hazards out of your mental picture of the golf shot to be, there is bound to be trouble.

I guess that's why there are many

DRAMA FESTIVAL

Sixty thousand or more people will have seen the Canadian Drama Festivals by the time it is completed and the adjudications made. One hundred and ten plays will have been presented, twenty more than last year and it is reported that already twenty-six plays have been entered for the year 1936 festival.

Canada has 'gone' drama. There is no doubt about that. This, to many is the greatest of the arts, and to every one, one of the most potent factors in the life of the people of the individual nation and of the world, has been slow in coming to its own in Canada. Other arts have beaten it to the starting point, such as painting and music, but drama now looks as if it will be the most potent element in the nation's educational and entertainment life.

One of the pleasing things brought out by these festivals is the discovery of the ability of individuals to act. Canadians will be as good actors as any in the world. All they want is training and direction. Direction of course is the great need. Then in time will come with experience, a Canadian drama, voicing the Canadian spirit in the world with a world appeal.

The amateur actor has been doing magnificent work. But he requires to learn the tricks of the profession as the professional actors know them. The amateur if he had the information and some of the experience of the professional need not fear him under any circumstances.

Belleville is playing no small part in this development towards a national drama. Groups are at work incessantly and production reaches a fairly high standard. The drama road is hard because drama includes practically all the arts and is a very exacting master. But time and experience will bring the rewards. Belleville must thank such producers as Miss N. Merry and Miss Jessie Tuite and others for their work in training the material they have to handle for after all though the director is the main factor, yet that director has to use the actors to make his production that is sought.

Since the coming of the Earl of Bessborough to Canada, the drama has leaped forward, thanks to the impetus he has given it. Canadian art cannot but honor the man who busy in office with duties of vast importance, has found time to inspire one of the greatest arts, which will ultimately make a supreme contribution to the riches of Canadian life. His Excellency will likely be leaving Canada within a year but there is no reason why the drama festivals should not continue under the impetus he has given.

INAUDIBLE SOUND

Inaudible sounds affect mental processes, which means that though sound waves are too low or too high to be heard, they have effect upon the audience. It is believed that in a theatre, some of these sounds tend to create in an audience a sense of horror, pleasure, joy or discontent. Of course to do that the producer must know what he is aiming at and be able to direct such sounds. Then again knowledge of the mental effect of the sub-audible sounds must be fairly complete before the unheard could be used, with any certainty of effect.

If the unheard noises affect the processes of the brain as it is believed, there remains a vast field of knowledge to be explored. If unheard sounds are healthy sounds, all will be well but if some are destructive of order and content and happiness they should be removed. That there are unheard sounds is everywhere known in nature.
